PWA Loans Halt, Relief to Exhaust Residue of Funds

Only Projects Already Under Contract Will Receive Money.

2 D. C. Ventures Won't Lose Out

By Felix Bruner.

The Public Works Administration is out of business except insofar as it must meet obligations under contracts already signed, Secretary Ickes indicated yesterday.

Most of its remaining funds, intended to furnish employment, have been diverted to direct relief by transfer of the money to the Relief Administration.

This condition will continue unless Congress makes further provision for funds or until $175,000,000 transferred from impounded PWA funds to the Relief Administration is returned. This includes $80,000,000 which was transferred to the Relief Administration yesterday, leaving only $63,000,000 of PWA funds still available for that purpose.

Dole Runs Out March 15.

With Relief Administrator Hopkins spending at the rate of $5,000,000 a day, the new allotment should last until March 16. The additional $63,000,000 would last for another 12 or 13 days, after which Hopkins would have to look elsewhere for his money unless Congress acts in the meantime.

Among the projects to which the PWA has been committed, but for which there is no money, is the completion of the Shenandoah-Great Smoky Mountains Parkway in Virginia and North Carolina, Secretary Ickes indicated.

He said no money was available for this work and none would be available unless Congress acts. A total of $6,000,000 had been earmarked for the project.

"But the ears have been cut off," Ickes said.

All Federal construction for which actual constracts have not been signed is expected to be without financing. This may include the Library of Congress annex, for which bids are to be opened today. Money which had been earmarked for various departments is expected not to be available.

A total of $238,000,000 of PWA money had been impounded and the $175,000,000 for the Relief Administration has been subtracted from this amount. This leaves the PWA housing division virtually without any funds for new projects not now under way.

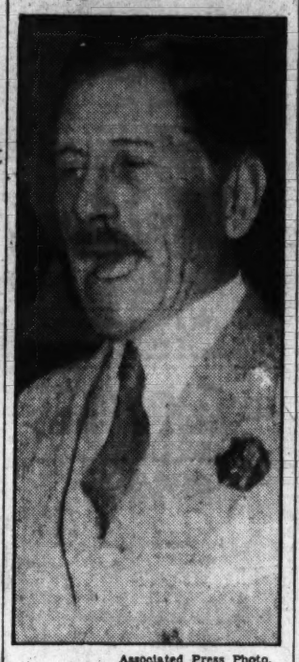

D. C. Projects Go On.

It is not expected that the District of Columbia sewage disposal plant or the tuberculosis hospital at Glenn Dale will be jeopardized because, while construction contracts have not been signed, the PWA and the District have signed financial contracts obligating the PWA to pay over the money.

Allotments to Federal departments include allotments for expenses of the NRA, all of which are financed from PWA funds, except that money collected from industries by code authorities. It is possible that unless some provision is made by Congress money will not be available for NRA.

Meanwhile, Ickes announced that PWA projects are being completed faster than new ones are started, and, as a consequence, PWA employment is declining. He said about 60 per cent of the 18,863 PWA projects have been completed. Of these, 10,100 Federal projects and 1,024 non-Federal projects have been completed.

Hurley Exhorts G.O.P. to Back New Deal Aims

By the Associated Press.

Detroit, Feb. 28.—Patrick J. Hurley, Secretary of War in the Hoover Administration, said tonight that "the Republican Party will make a mistake if it attempts to assimilate either of the extremes of the Democratic Party."

Addressing Michigan Republicans at a meeting preceding their State convention, Hurley called upon his party to adopt a constructive, middle-ground course, including support of some "New Deal" measures.

He charged that "destructive" 1932 campaign tactics of some Democrats, led by John J. Raskob and Jouett Shouse, had created a "Frankenstein" of public discontent which he said forced President Roosevelt to repudiate pledges contained in the Democratic platform.

Criticizes Liberty League.

Hurley devoted a portion of his address to discussing "secession of the wings" of the Democratic Party, with a chiding comment for the Liberty League as one of those wings.

"Under the leadership of Messrs. Raskob and Shouse," he said, "a number of the leaders of the right wing of the right wing of the Democratic Party have organized a rich man's club which they call the Liberty League. If the Liberty League has any purpose at all it is to destroy the present Democratic Administration. * * *

"If the Liberty League fails in its attempt to regain control of the Democratic Party it will attempt to name the next Republican nominee for President. If the Liberty League should succeed in doing that, it will destroy the Republican chances for success. * * *

Cites Long and Sinclair.

"Other Democrats, including such outstanding characters as Upton Sinclair and Senator Long, seem to be in the process of seceding from the left wing of the Democratic party. The Republican party has no more desire for recruits from the left wing of the Democratic party than it has for those coming through the Liberty League.

"The Republican party will make

White House Acts to Clear Works Issue

The President last night took stock of a hopelessly tangled impasse on his $4,880,000,000 works and relief bill, as a sudden Senate adjournment left the delicate prevailing wage issue high and dry until next week.

Plans to fight it out on the labor front were considered late yesterday at a 90-minute conference between Senate Majority Leader Joseph T. Robinson and the President. Negotiations looking to an early settlement will be continued over the week-end.

Reports of a general redrafting of the McCarran prevailing wage amendment, effecting changes acceptable alike to labor and the White House, were current all day through the Capitol, but leaders were grimly silent.

Leaves in a Hurry.

Adjourning the Senate until Monday, Senator Robinson made a 4 o'clock appointment at the White House and remained with the President in his second-floor study until 5:30.

When he left, it was in a hurry. Rushing out the front door to a waiting car, he called to reporters:

"There is no statement to make. Sorry to disappoint you."

He failed to put in a reappearance at his Capitol offices, and calls at his home failed to raise him. What transpired in the lengthy conference had not been relayed to Senator Carter Glass, of Virginia, chairman of the Appropriations Committeee, at a late hour last night. It is understood, however, that Senator Robert F. Wagner (Democrat), New York, was phoned during the interview. Wagner has been serving as Robinson's lieutenant in attempting to arrange a labor compromise.

"Switches" Claimed.

There have been claims of "switches" among Democrats who voted for the prevailing wage amendment, but if American Federation of Labor leaders and Senator Pat McCarran (Democrat), Nevada, their Senate spokesman, were discouraged over the situation, they did not disclose it.

Using tactics attributed to the Administration in its effort to get "back home" support for the bill and against the wage amendment, President William Green carried his plea for the prevailing wage to the country. He used the radio, however, and the Administration has scorned to make such an appeal.

Reports that the President is planning a radio talk either now or to coincide with the Administration's two-year anniversary March 2 were discredited, but this obviously is a trump card he may use as a last resort.

President Green in his broadcast declared the prevailing wage issue is nonpartisan but "more vital to the economic welfare of the Nation than any issue that has faced us since the inception of the recovery program." He said the "economic status of every wage earner in the country" hinges on the amendment.

Compromise Debated.

While the Senate Appropriations Committee continued to let the matter rest, the Senate disported itself in another display of oratory on the pros and cons of the issue and Senator Wagner went over compromise proposals with Senator McCarran, Senator Edward P. Costigan (Democrat), Colorado, and Senator Robert La Follette (Progressive), Wisconsin.

Meantime, the Federal Emergency Relief Administration, whose continuing funds are tied up in the $4,880,000,000 bill, was forced to make a third draft on the Administration's unexpended balances. It received $80,000,000 more to finance relief through the first three weeks of March.

To tide over the emergency, House Minority Leader Bertrand H. Snell introduced a resolution to appropriate $880,000,000 at once, but there

Ex-Justice Holmes, Pneumonia Victim, Fights for His Life

By Franklyn Waltman, Jr.

Stricken with bronchial pneumonia, Oliver Wendell Holmes, until three years ago the "great liberal" of the Supreme Court and one of the Nation's grand old men, last night was fighting with the aid of tanked oxygen for his life.

Although the aged jurist was reported to be resting slightly more comfortably last night than earlier in the day, his friends feared that the life which commenced almost 94 years ago was nearing an end in the old red brick house at 1720 I street northwest.

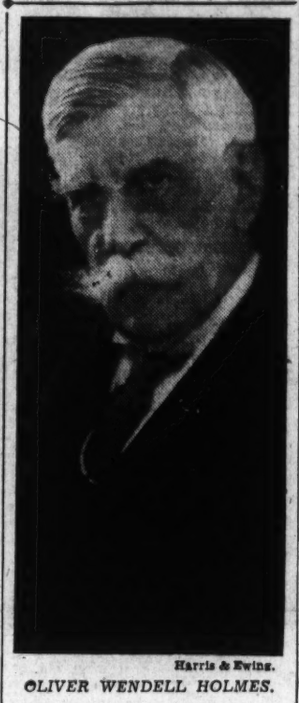

The white-haired, dragooned-mustached son of the "Autocrat of the Breakfast Table" has been seriously sick for several days, but word of his illness did not become public until yesterday when three tanks of oxygen were carried into the house. Several empty containers were taken away.

Dr. Thomas A. Claytor, attending physician, on leaving the Holmes house at 8:25 o'clock last night, said his patient had bronchial pneumonia. He said he did not plan to return again to the bedside until morning.

Earlier in the day Dr. Claytor declined to discuss Mr. Holmes' condition beyond the statement that "the justice is ill and at his age all illness is serious."

Justice James C. McReynolds, of the Supreme Court, however, explained that his former associate was stricken with bronchial pneumonia. Justice McReynolds said Mr. Holmes had been ill only a few

Troops on Way To Halt Revolt At FERA Camp

Speed to Key in Florida as Veterans Rebel on Relief Job.

Miami, Fla., Feb. 28. (U.P.).—National Guardsmen sped tonight toward lower Matecumbe Key, where 400 veterans were in revolt against living conditions on a Government relief project.

The veterans, many of them from the old Bonus Army driven from Anacostia flats, have been idle since Monday awaiting arrival of equipment for new living quarters. From the idle ranks sprang unrest.

Julius F. Stone, jr., regional FERA director, said at his home in Jacksonville that there had been no violence, adding:

"We needed soldiers tonight to keep down a possible disturbance."

Fifty guardsmen from Company B of the 265th Coast Artillery left Miami in trucks at sunset. Simultaneously, 60 Coast Artillerymen from Company E left Key West by train and another 50 are under arms there awaiting orders.

Stone blamed anti-Government agitators, working among the temporarily idle war veterans, for the disturbance. Several men termed "reds" have been driven from the key and escorted to the State border in the last few days.

Transfer of 200 additional men to the camp early this week caused a congestion in living conditions in quarters originally built for only 200 men.

One thousand war veterans, many from Washington and others from Eastern Seaboard States, are working on the bridge.

Pink-Slip Foes Fear a Defeat; Blame Senate

Repeal of Tax Publicity Is Believed Balked; LaFollette Firm.

By Douglas Warrenfels.

Senate opposition probably will prevent repeal or modification of the "pink slip" income tax publicity law, it was learned yesterday.

House supporters of proposals to repeal the law intended to throw the returns open to public inspection conceded that the unyielding attitude of a group of Senators led by youthful Senator La Follette (Progressive), Wisconsin, more than likely would result in general disclosure of earnings by taxpayers.

Word already has gone out from Capitol Hill, it was said, for large taxpayers to avoid embarrassment by submitting with their returns before March 15 the pink slip listing their gross and net incomes and the total tax paid as required by the law under fire.

Meanwhile, a joint committee from the Senate and House abandoned all hope of finding a solution after a brief conference on the issue. The Senate committee warned House members any effort to repeal the publicity clause would be rejected across the Capitol should it receive a favorable House vote.

Chairman Harrison, Senate Finance Committe, who named the Senate conferees, reported he was informed that the negotiations failed.

The Senators were said to have made plain they would not accept any compromise. There had been suggestions that the law be amended to permit publication of

Wide Inquiry of Garnett Office Pressed by Crime Committee

Department of Justice Evinces Keen Interest in House Group's Tactics; U. S. Attorney to Be Recalled for Quizzing.

United States Attorney Leslie C. Garnett was thrust to the fore again yesterday in discussions of the drive against crime by the House District Crime Committee. As friends of the official rallied to his defense, members of the committee emphasized their determination to go more fully into the operation of his office.

The Department of Justice, responsible for the appointment of the United States attorney and the conduct of his office, is understood to have taken a keen interest in the crime committee's activities. Political and personal friends of the United States attorney, it is understood, also have undertaken to relieve Mr. Garnett from blame they believe does not attach to him.

Members of the committee, none the less, are determined to go more fully into operations of the prosecuting offices of the Police and Supreme courts, despite the fact that the Department of Justice is engaged in an investigation of Police Court affairs extending back for a considerable period beyond the date Mr. Garnett and Karl Kindleberger, his assistant in charge at Police Court, took office.

The committee, it was said, does not expect to develop such a detailed finding of fact as may result from the activities of the 16 agents of the Justice Department now engaged in the Police Court investigation. It will be able, members believe, to establish sufficient facts to indicate existing weaknesses. Later, the Justice Department will be asked to make a report on its inquiry, supplementing the more cursory inquiry of the committee.

Determination to bring Mr. Garnett back before the committee has been expressed by Representative Theodore B. Werner (Democrat), of South Dakota, and Representative William T. Schulte (Democrat), of Indiana, and others on the committee.

"Mr. Garnett," Representative Werner said, "apparently hopes to erect a smoke screen to cover up other things. His statement that gamblers are behind the move 'to discredit his office' seems a smoke screen.

"He apparently gave that statement to the newspapers. If he has information that is so he should come forward and give the committee the names of the gamblers and all the information on which he based the statement. He could

Mystery Veils Bride's Death At Pinehurst

Autopsy Held at Request of Mrs. Statler; Body of Girl Bruised.

Report of Analysis by Doctor Is Awaited at Inquest.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Pinehurst, N. C., Feb. 28.—At the request of representatives of the Statler family, an autopsy was performed today in the death of 22-year-old Mrs. Elva Statler Davidson, joint heiress to the fortune left by the late E. M. Statler, chain hotel leader.

An air of mystery surrounded the case. A coroner's jury, meeting in closed session for its second day, appeared reluctant to accept the theory of accidental death, advanced first after Mrs. Davidson was found yesterday morning in her Edgewood garage overcome by carbon monoxide fumes from her automobile exhaust.

Some members of the jury, it was learned, feel that evidence brought out today tends more toward a suicide verdict.

Bruises on Body.

A half-dozen minor bruises were found on the young bride's right hip and thighs, according to an announcement by Dr. C. C. Carpenter, of the medical school of Wake Forest College, and Dr. M. W. Marr, of Pinehurst, who performed the autopsy asked by the Statler family.

The announcement said none of the bruises was more than 48 hours old. Kelly said they apparently had nothing to do with the death. No bruises were found on the head or the upper part of the body.

The announcement also added that carbon monoxide poisoning was the "only condition found capable of producing death."

Nevertheless, Dr. Carpenter will submit the brain and vital organs to further chemical analysis at the Wake Forest College laboratories near Raleigh. He left for Wake Forest tonight and is to make a written report as soon as possible.

Mrs. E. M. Statler, foster mother of Mrs. Davidson, arrived here today from Buffalo, N. Y. Other members of the Statler family are reported on the way.

Present at the hearing today was J. M. Broughton, an attorney from Raleigh, who represented the family. Another attorney, it is said, is to arrive from Buffalo.

Witness' Testimony.

The prosecuting attorney of the Moore County recorder's court, M. G. Boyette, of Carthage, also attended the jury session. He is representing Mrs. Davidson's husband, H. Bradley Davidson, of Washington, and his family.

At the hearing today, the witness, it was reported, testified that Mrs. Davidson had gone with her husband to a nearby spaghetti house after attending a charity ball the night before she died.

It was testified that Mrs. Davidson had suffered a spinal injury while diving as a member of the Radcliffe College swimming team in 1932 and that she had had recurrent spells of ill health since. Last month she was injured in an automobile accident.

Hearings will resume at 2 p. m. tomorrow. Pending final action by the jury, the body was left in the Powell funeral home at Southern Pines.

U. S. Students to Act Against War, Fascism

By the Associated Press.

New York, Feb. 23.—A Nation-wide one-hour strike of students opposed to war and Fascism has been called for April 12.

Spokesmen for the Columbia University antiwar committee, which announced the call, said they expected at least 100,000 college students and 20,000 high school pupils to participate. Nearly 100 institutions will be represented, the committee said, with presidents and deans leading the protestants at some colleges.

Filings Bolster Sabotage Hint In Post Motor

Metal and Emery Found, Say Experts; 'A Dirty Trick,' States Flier.

By the United Press.

Los Angeles, Feb. 28.—The motor of Wiley Post's round-the-world plane, the Winnie Mae, was fouled by metal filings and a limited portion of emery, an official report from a testing laboratory said today.

Post's associates here said the findings confirmed their belief the Winnie Mae had been tampered with before Post took off last week on his projected stratosphere hop.

They said the material was similar to that found near emery or abrasive wheels in machine shops. They contended the material could not get into the supercharger of the motor unless it had been placed there.

They declared their investigation had not yet fixed responsibility for the action, however.

The laboratory made the announcement after testing a "foreign substance" found in the supercharger of the Winnie Mae's motor yesterday, giving rise to the belief Post may have been the victim of sabotage when his plane was forced down last week shortly after his take-off in an attempt to span the continent in seven hours.

Arthur R. Maas, laboratory technician, submitted the following report after an analysis had been made of the "substance" found in the intake manifold, the air coolers between the supercharger and engine, the oil screen and oil of the motor:

"The material submitted to us for analysis consisted of metal filings and a limited portion of emery or similar abrasives."

The plane is being overhauled at Burbank Airport and Post's associates said he hopes to take off on a second stratosphere attempt next week if tests show the ship is functioning properly.

'Full, Open, Complete' Hearings Promised by Harrison.

Committee Battle Over Quiz Settled

Supreme Court Appeal in Two Cases Lost by U. S. Speeded.

By Robert C. Albright.

Investigation of the National Recovery Administration and alleged code abuse yesterday was ordered by the Senate, as Senate foes and friends of NRA called off hostilities after a pitched committee battle over jurisdiction.

By a voice vote, the Senate directed its Finance Committee to make the investigation and appropriated $5,000 to pay expenses. A meeting of the committee was called for Tuesday. "Full, open and complete" hearings were promised by Chairman Pat Harrison.

Making way for a broad investigation, a Judiciary sub-committee inquiry into antitrust and monopoly implications of the NRA act, which already is under way, was shelved temporarily by Senator William H. King, of Utah, chairman. The Senate tabled a resolution appropriating funds for the King inquiry.

Senator William E. Borah, of Idaho, a member of the King subcommittee, called on Senator Harrison to include the monopoly study in his broader investigation, to avoid the apparent conflict of two parallel inquiries.

Appeals Speeded.

Attorney General Cummings, meanwhile, promised early appeal to the United States Supreme Court in the two NRA cases lost by the Government Wednesday through decisions handed down in Federal district courts.

Possibility of consolidating the two cases with another NRA test now before the Supreme Court—the Belcher lumber case—was seen by the Attorney General, who is striving to bring legal order out of a host of conflicting New Deal decisions.

Judge John P. Nields Wednesday, in the Delaware District Court, declared unconstitutional the collective bargaining clause—section 7(a)—as applied to the Weirton Steel Co.

The same day Judge Charles I. Dawson, in the Louisville (Ky.) court, restrained the Government from enforcing the bituminous coal code on 35 Kentucky operators.

Yesterday's Senate vote followed two independent committee moves for an NRA investigation, and still a third for a select committee inquiry. After much talk and trading, the Finance Committee won.

Monopoly Inquiry Held Up.

Senators King and Borah and Senators Pat McCarran (Democrat), Nevada, and Gerald P. Nye (Republican), North Dakota, coauthors of the McCarran-Nye NRA resolution adopted yesterday by the Senate, held a whip hand over the Finance Committee, it was said.

Senator Harrison has assured them the Finance Committee, which is also charged with the Administration's NRA extension program, will make a "full and thorough" investigation of the recovery set-up.

But if the finance committee fails to do so, and steps are not taken to employ counsel and investigators, it was learned that the King monopoly inquiry may be revived and broadened by its proponents.

Off-the-floor strategy which finally brought about cessation of the quarrel over who will conduct the inquiry, followed sidetracking of the original Harrison proposal to make only a sub-committee study of the Nye-McCarran charges.

Amendment Adopted.

At its last meeting the finance committee voted for a full committee investigation instead, and this amendment yesterday was adopted by the Senate.

Senator King is a member of the finance committee, as is Senator Robert La Follette (Progressive),

Baby, Two Men Killed in Blast

10 Injured in Mysterious Explosions Near Bank at Edwardsville, Pa.

By the Associated Press.

Wilkes-Barre, Pa., Feb. 28.—Two men and a baby girl were killed and ten persons were injured in two explosions which badly damaged a poolroom and dwelling in Edwardsville late today.

Parents of the infant, born this morning, and eight other persons were injured and neighboring structures were damaged by the blast and the fire which followed. The cause of the blasts was not learned. The building is in the rear of the People's National Bank.

One of the men was identified tentatively as Peter Morga, 28. Police sought to identify the second man and continued to search the ruins.

The infant victim was the child of Mr. and Mrs. Peter Shepak. The Shepaks, who have two other children, occupied the second-floor apartment above a poolroom and beauty parlor.

Sophie Gregorski, 24, of Scranton, said, "I suddenly found myself out in the yard." She was hanging clothes in the Shepak kitchen when the blasts occurred.

Paralytic, Bedridden 24 Years, Voted Salisbury's First Citizen

By the Associated Press.

Salisbury, Md., Feb. 28.—Walter Dykes, a paralytic victim, who has lain in bed for 24 years, unable to move, will receive on Sunday the 1934 Salisbury award, an honor conferred annually on the citizen who has the most unselfish contribution toward the betterment of community life.

Announcement of Dykes' nomination was made today by the board of trustees for the award. The presentation will be made at his home on a remote farm, four miles from Salisbury, Sunday afternoon.

The award consists of the proceeds from a trust fund, established in 1926 under an agreement made by the donor whose name has never been made public. The presentations in past were made at public ceremonies in a local theater.

In former years, the award amounted to $225 with an appropriately inscribed gold medal. The 1934 award to Dykes will include approximately $245 in cash and a certificate setting forth the merits upon which it is made to him.

The certificate will bear this inscription:

"Although hopelessly invalided and confined to his bed for the past 24 years, his spirit has never been broken; although in constant pain, he never has lost his smile of greeting for those who visit him.

"The trustees * * * feel that his optimism, courage, endurance, faith and tolerance have endeared him to the hearts of all who meet him and * * * is a great contribution to the community in which he resides."

Dykes is able to move only his right forearm. At the age of 18 years he fractured his leg. After it was set and he was returned home, Dykes was accidentally dropped by attendants, fracturing the other leg and causing paralysis.

Long Will Run for Governor Next Year, Presidency Later

By the Associated Press.

Baton Rouge, La., Feb. 28.—Senator Huey P. Long, "dictator" of Louisiana's political affairs, said today he would run for Governor in 1936 and added a race for the Presidency "comes later."

The Senator's declaration on his future plans came amidst his newest legislative session to push through more "dictatorship laws" aimed, in many instances, at political opponents.

The Long machine functioned without a hitch when the roll was called and the minority opposition was swept aside like chaff.

Then Long strode across the chamber and declared that he was pleased with Louisiana, that he intended to run for Governor, leaving much speculation over the senior senatorship and his proposed candidacy for President.

"It'd be fine to be Governor of a State like this," Long said. "Anybody ought to envy being Governor of a State like this.

"Why, we've got $1,500,000 clear in the bank right now. I think I'll be a candidate for Governor in 1936. I will be a candidate."

"What about the Presidency," he was asked, "aren't you going to run for that?"

"That comes later," replied Long.

"When will you start your campaign?" he was asked.

"I don't need to start a campaign," the Senator said.

Senators declined public comment yesterday on Huey Long's announcement he would run for Governor, but several said privately they wished he would, according to the Associated Press.

Senator Bilbo (Democrat), Mississippi, observed:

"I am not in Mr. Long's confidence. I don't know anything about him running for President either, but it will be a long time before he is."

Senators Vote To Investigate Virgin Islands

Committee Takes Action on Yates' Charges Against Gov. Pearson.

By the Associated Press.

The Senate Territories Committee yesterday voted unanimously that the Senate authorize an inquiry into the charges of Paul Yates, former administrative assistant to Gov. Paul M. Pearson of the Virgin Islands, that Pearson's administration has been "wasteful, extravagant, inefficient and tainted with corruption."

Secretary Ickes, labeled by Yates as "drunk with political power," when told of the proposed inquiry, said:

"It's perfectly all right with me."

Ickes was told of the Senate committee action at a press conference.

He added that it was "news to me" that he would dismiss Pearson in order to forestall an investigation, as predicted in a Virgin Island newspaper opposed to the Pearson regime.

Pearson Welcomes Probe.

Pearson, at St. Thomas, Virgin Islands, likewise announced that "we welcome an investigation."

"We know that Senator Tydings (chairman of the Territories Committee) and his associates are interested only in facts," he said, "and that they believe in fair play."

Yates, in a 48-page communication to the committee, charged the Interior Department was afraid of any thorough professional inquiry into island conditions, and affirmed:

"I state it is my opinion that the Secretary of the Interior is drunk with political power and is using any medium of publicity at his command to malign and attempt to cast into disrepute every public official and every influential citizen who opposes his arbitrary and ill-advised policies."

Similar charges have been laid before the House, where the Territories Committee has not yet acted.

Yates charged the Pearson administration was "hateful and odious to the residents," that they have been exploited for the benefit of a "few rich reactionary natives," and that Secretary Ickes has ignored many "complaints, prayers, petitions, remonstrances, plebiscites, mass demonstrations and specific written charges" against Pearson by the people.

A Hoover Appointee.

Pearson, a Republican, was appointed Governor by President Hoover in 1931.

Ickes has endorsed Pearson's administration and predicted that the rum distilleries would restore prosperity to the islands.

Pearson has been in conflict with Judge T. Weber Wilson, Virgin Islands judge named by Attorney General Cummings.

The Interior Department a month ago issued a release, later withdrawn, of a magazine article supporting Pearson and severely condemning Wilson.

Ickes later apologized to Cummings, Postmaster General Farley and Senator Harrison (Democrat), Mississippi), for the "slip-up." The latter two officials were described as having been responsible for the appointment of Wilson, a former Representative from Mississippi.

Between You and Me

Holmes, the Statesman; Courts vs. Economic Progress; a Century-Old Precedent.

By Raymond Clapper

THIS, of all times, is a bewildering moment in the Nation's history when the life work of Oliver Wendell Holmes can bear its greatest fruit.

As this is written a foreboding silence hangs over the old-fashioned home on I street, where the great jurist lies in the twilight land between life and death.

He has delayed longer than most men the inevitable settlement which comes soon or late to every living thing. Even so, he long ago paid off the obligation heaping and overflowing out of a life rich in national service from the time he sustained three wounds in the Civil War.

He became an associate justice of the Massachusetts Supreme Court the year Franklin D. Roosevelt as born. Before that, and for more than half a century afterward, he dedicated his great gifts as a jurist to the advancement of one principle.

Justice Holmes sought to make the Constitution and the law living things, not dead hands of the past clutching at the throat of the present.

* * * *

In periods of great social and economic change, the growing pains impinge on the courts.

That is going on now as the bench struggles between the old law laid down in the Constitution and the new law laid down by Congress. Courts around the land daily are knocking over New Deal legislation, bewildering the Nation, spreading confusion and uncertainty, by their inability to reconcile the letter of the Constitution with the spirit of the present.

To meet the necessities of such difficult periods, Justice Holmes preached more statesmanship and less hunting for commas on the bench.

* * * *

It is an old battle, probably as old as society. The United States went through a similar experience about 100 years ago, when the young Nation was entering a rapid expansion of internal improvements. Courts at that time had a dose of the same medicine they are getting now.

Taney had just succeeded John Marshall as Chief Justice of the United States. Turnpikes and bridges were being constructed to open new paths for commerce. Out of this came the famous Charles River Bridge Case.

A corporation had been given a charter to operate a toll bridge over the Charles River. Subsequently another corporation was authorized to construct a free bridge nearby. The point was whether the obligation of the contract contained in the charter to the toll bridge company was impaired by a charter subsequently granted for a free bridge parallel to it.

Daniel Webster, who had argued and won the famous Dartmouth College case in which the Supreme Court forbade a State to impair the obligation of a contract, took up the cudgels for the toll bridge company.

Contemporary accounts reproduced in the monumental history of the Supreme Court by Charles Warren indicate the intense feelings aroused by the bridge case. Ladies packed the court chamber to hear the great Webster, just as they did during the recent gold case battle. The whole country was stirred by debate as to whether private contracts were to be kept sacred or repudiated by State permission.

* * * *

Chief Justice Taney upheld the right to build a free bridge. He told the toll bridge company that in the absence of express words granting exclusive privileges to it, no such grant could be inferred. His decision was described by those approving of it as having broken the iron band on legislative action fixed in the Dartmouth case.

Associate Justice Story, spokesman of the minority, reacted somewhat as Justice McReynolds did in the recent gold case dissent. He wrote to his wife that a case of grosser injustice had never existed. He wrote to a friend that the old constitutional doctrines were fast fading away. Conservative lawyers and corporate interests regarded the decision as destroying the security and value of legislative franchises, and as radical, revolutionary and calamitous. They said worse things about it than Carter Glass did about gold bond repudiation.

* * * *

Warren, viewing the decision from modern day perspective, says a contrary one would have had a disastrous effect upon the development of the country: "Coming as it did, just at the period when the new systems of transportation by railroads and canals were first developing, the decision was an immense factor in their successful competition. . . . Marshall's interests were largely in the constitutional aspects of the cases before him; Taney's were largely economic and social . . . It was this change of emphasis from vested, institutional property rights to the personal rights and welfare of the general community which characterized Chief Justice Taney's court. And this change was but a recognition of the general change in the social and economic conditions and in the political atmosphere of the period, brought about by the adoption of universal manhood suffrage, by the revolution in methods of business and industry and in means of transportation, and by the expansion of the Nation and its activities."

Now a hundred years later the same straw has to be threshed over again.

Justice Agents' "Heroic Role" Slated for Films, Hays Hints

Screen Czar Talks With Cummings About New Type Picture.

By the Associated Press.

The possibility that crack agents of the Department of Justice may soon be portrayed as movie heroes developed yesterday after a conference between Will H. Hays, film czar, and Attorney General Cummings.

"Some of the motion picture companies are interested in the dramatic field of activities of Department of Justice investigators," Hayes said.

Hays, Postmaster General under President Harding, talked briefly with the Attorney General and then conferred with two Justice Department assistants. Later he planned to discuss his idea with J. Edgar Hoover, chief of the Bureau of Investigation, whose agents have built a national reputation through their dealing of death to John Dillinger, Pretty Boy Floyd and the like.

"We have had excellent cooperation with the Army and Navy," said Hays. "Some of our best pictures have been filmed with these services. Certain film companies now are interested in similar possibilities with the far-flung Justice agents."

Department of Justice officials said Hays' proposal was under consideration.

Both Hays and the Department of Justice men said the former's visit had no connection with the grand jury indictments at St. Louis last month. In these the Government charged three of the large motion picture corporations, their affiliates and executives with "conspiracy in restraint of trade in motion pictures."

Hays now is president of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributers of America.

California Shell Buys $12,000,000 Holding

New York, Feb. 28 (AP).—Officials of the Pacific Western Oil Corporationtion said tonight the Shell Oil Co. of California had purchased the interest of the Pacific Western Oil Co. in the Baldwin Hills and Kettleman Hills fields in California for approximatelyq $12,000,000.

Shell of California, a subsidiary of Shell Union Oil Co., was reported to have assumed $10,000,000 in 6½ per cent bonds of the Pacific Western Co., and to have paid the balance in cash or short-term notes.

PUC Sets Hearing On Bus Stop Plan

Limiting Carriers to Off-Streets to Be Pondered.

A hearing on the proposal to compel intra-District metropolitan area buses to use off-street terminals will be held Monday by the Public Utilities Commission.

The problem of handling buses so they will not constitute a traffic impediment was brought to the attention of the commission by the Traffic Advisory Council and judges of the Police Court, who are of the opinion that too much street space is allocated to the carriers.

Thoroughfares where the on-street terminals constitute the greatest traffic obstacle, the commission was informed, are Twelfth street, between F and G streets; D street, between Tenth and Eleventh streets, and Eleventh street north of D street, all in the Northwest section.

House, Cabinet Clash in Views On Social Plan

Senator Lewis Introduces Substitute; Dispute Up to President.

By the Associated Press.

The job of choosing between opposing recommendations of his own Cabinet and a congressional committee on how his social security plan should be handled, was shaped up yesterday for President Roosevelt.

At the same time, the Democratic whip, Senator Lewis, of Illinois, indicated dissatisfaction with the Cabinet committee's bill by introducing a substitute for it.

Coincidentally, too, the House Ways and Means Committee called in Alexander Holtzoff, a special Assistant Attorney General, to receive assurances that the present bill is constitutional. Some have contended otherwise.

Hopkins Opposes Changes.

The House Committee during its work on the bill, made numerous changes in the suggestions by the Cabinet committee.

Already reports of dissatisfaction in high Administration quarters have reached the committee. One was that Relief Administrator Harry L. Hopkins had expressed his opposition to changes under which a State would be allowed to differentiate in the sizes of pensions.

Hopkins, said one committee member who asked that his name not be used, insisted that there would be too much discrimination between Negroes and whites in the Southern States.

The Ways and Means Committee, before bringing the bill up in the House next week, will talk it over with the President.

Cool to Lewis Plan.

Although Senator Lewis said he hoped to get presidential acceptance of his plan, under which the Federal Government would make outright Federal appropriations for old-age pensions and unemployment insurance, House Democrats were disinclined to go along with the idea.

He said his proposal would preserve the "principle that the Government should provide for its citizens solely out of Federal funds." Some House members pointed to the last Democratic platform assertion that the party favored old-age pensions and unemployment insurance under State control.

The unconstitutionality argument had been advanced primarily against the job insurance tax in the social security bill. Holtzoff contended that the tax was legal and would be held so in the courts.

Gridiron Officers Feted by Kiwanis

Officers of the Gridiron Club were honored guests at the Kiwanis luncheon yesterday as a tribute to the newspapermen's organization on its fiftieth anniversary.

Ulric Bell, Gridiron president; J. Fred Essary, treasurer, and J. Harry Cunningham, secretary, were presented to Kiwanis members and Fred East and William Raymond, members of both organizations, sang a program of songs, accompanied by Clyde B. Melville.

Following a demonstration by Mrs. Mary Collins Vories and Miss Delphine Desio, the club ordered the purchase of a "talking" book to augment its present library for Washington blind.

Harold N. Marsh, president of the club, was in charge of the meeting.

Michigan State Dance Set.

Launching an intensified program of activities, the Michigan State Association will hold its first formal dance Saturday night, March 9, in the Lafayette Hotel, it was announced yesterday by Iler J. Fairchild, dance committee chairman. Heretofore, the organization's activity has been confined to one social function a year.

Half-Million Armed Japanese In U.S. Territory, Inquiry Told

By the Associated Press.

Testimony that there are 500,000 armed Japanese in the United States and its possessions was given the House Patents Committee yesterday by Roy W. Knabenshue, veteran balloonist.

After repeating his contention that sabotage had something to do with destruction of the Navy's airships Akron and Macon, Knabenshue asserted it was "common knowledge on the Coast" that there are 500,000 armed Japanese in the country, chiefly on the coast and in Hawaii.

Asked by committee members whether he had any concrete evidence as to armed Japanese, Knabenshue asserted he had no information except that given him by friends. He said he himself never had seen an armed Japanese.

Chairman Sirovich asked whether he knew Japanese colonies had been set up in Central and South America that could move against the Panama Canal and destroy it in time of emergency.

That also is common knowledge on the Coast, the witness said.

Sirovich said it was "common gossip" in cloakrooms that many Japanese and Orientals drive taxis in Washington and listen to conversations when they go to the State, War and Navy Building.

Japanese Craft Accused.

He added that the House Merchant Marine Committee had been told that hundreds of Japanese fishing vessels had obtained soundings and other information off the Alaskan Coast.

Japanese come to the United States not alone for economic reasons, the witness testified, but also to "learn what they can" and communicate back to Japan.

He agreed with Sirovich there were "thousands of Asiatics on warships" who might engage in sabotage in time of emergency. Sirovich suggested attempts might be made to destroy the Panama Canal.

Told by Representative Truax (Democrat), of Ohio, that the Goodyear Zeppelin Co. had expressed doubt that there was sabotage on the Macon, Knabensnue said:

"I had rather expected that."

Urges Dirigibles Built.

He said the point to consider was that the airship had passed through "very turbulent weather" and didn't break up, but that when it was nearing home in comparatively calm weather it suddenly went to pieces.

He recommended construction of a fleet of commercial dirigibles for transoceanic service that could be altered quickly to carry bombing planes.

"If a foreign fleet, an unfriendly fleet, were to approcah America with an idea of taking the Pacific Coast," he said, "through our system of knowing we would be advised of its departure.

"Two dirigibles could go out at night and launch bombing planes that would put 250 or 300-pound bombs right down the funnels of the ships."

Pay Clause Urged In U. S. Contracts

Prevailing Wage Demanded by A. F. G. E. at Hearing.

The American Federation of Government Employes yesterday asked the Senate Commerce Committee to apply the prevailing wage rule to all contractors doing business with the Federal Government.

E. Claude Babcock, president of the federation, offered a series of amendments to the Clark bill at a hearing. One of these would require that all contracts entered into by the Federal Government stipulate that the private contractor pay the prevailing union wage.

The Clark bill is intended to require all Government agencies which compete with private industry to set up a cost-accounting system and file reports with Congress so that the latter may compare operation costs and returns with those of private industry.

Senate to Hear Data On Farley Monday

By the Associated Press.

Data collected by Secretary Ickes' investigators concerning Postmaster General Farley's connection with PWA projects—if any—will be forwarded to the Senate on Monday.

Ickes said yesterday the material would be ready by tomorrow, but, recalling that the Senate had adjourned until Monday, he added it was "no use sending the papers to an aching void."

"I'm not speaking disrespectfully of the Senate," he hastily added. "The Senate is not there."

District Removes Ban On Parking at Night

Here's some news for the troubled motorist:

Thirty-five hundred "no parking" signs were removed from Washington streets yesterday and last night.

These signs were erected January 1 to facilitate the removal of snow. Painted a brilliant yellow, they were posted on trees and poles—covering 50 miles of streets throughout the city.

Their removal yesterday was automatic. Traffic regulations called for their use only until midnight last night. Assistant Traffic Director M. O. Eldridge intimated they would be used again next year.

The signs prohibited parking from 2 a. m. to 3 and 9:30 a. m.

Canada Plans Board To Direct Grain Policy

Ottawa, Feb. 28 (AP).—The government today disclosed a plan to establish a board to direct the whole policy of grain marketing in Canada, to advise producers of probable world requirements of wheat and feed grains and obtain efficient regulations for distribution of grains in Canada.

It was made known efforts to stabilize export wheat marketing will be only part of the board's job, which will include powers to buy and sell, store and ship.

Farley Extends Mail Contracts Of Seven Lines

Failure of Congress to Provide New Laws Forces Move.

Slowness of Congress in enacting new air-mail legislation forced the Postoffice Department yesterday to renew for three months seven air-mail contracts, in spite of protests of operators that they are losing millions of dollars.

The action was an aftermath of concellation of contracts more than a year ago and the taking over by the Army of the job of carrying the mails. When the Army relinquished the air-mail job, new contracts were let at figures averaging a little more than half the previous cost.

Since that time, air-mail operators have been pleading for new legislation that would permit them to operate their lines without loss. Many of the contracts expired at midnight last night. It had been hoped that Congress would act before that time.

Three Months to Act.

Renewal of the contracts leaves Congress just three months in which to act. There is no provision for a further renewal of the contracts, as the present law permitted contracts only on a temporary basis.

When the present contracts were signed, the Post Office Department jubilantly announced that it was saving the Government millions of dollars. It was soon found, however, that many of the contractors had agreed to carry the mail at a figure far below cost, and they are now feeling the pinch. The Aeronautical Chamber of Commerce announced recently that losses already had added up to nearly $3,000,000. Two mail lines have been forced out of business and the air organization said that some others could continue to operate for only a short time. It was said that a 20 to 30 per cent increase in rates was needed.

Meanwhile, the House Postoffice sub-committee wrote into the pending air-mail bill a provision that the Interstate Commerce Commission be permitted to increase rates.

The seven routes for which extensions were ordered are:

Seattle-San Diego, United Airlines Transport Co., until May 7.

Newark-Chicago, American Airlines, Inc., until May 12.

Boston-Newark, American Airlines, Inc., until May 12.

Boston-Cleveland, American Airlines, Inc., until June 9.

Cleveland-Nashville, American Airlines, Inc., until June 9.

Washington-Chicago, American Airlines, Inc., until June 14.

Chicago-Fort Worth, American Airlines, Inc., until June 14.

Other contracts are expected to be extended as they expire.

'Pink-Slip' Repeal Feared Defeated

only those returns exceeding $100,000.

Chairman Sam Hill (Democrat), Washington, was among the House conferees who believed the chances for repeal were slim. He told of a Senate threat to demand publication of every item in all returns if the House sought to amend or repeal the limited publicity contemplated under the pink slip method.

Several House members argued that to make known the amount of taxes paid would encourage crime, injure the credit of many individuals and encourage gossiping. Senators retorted the spotlight of publicity would do no one any real harm and would prove of great benefit to the Government by preventing tax evasions.

Mellon Case Cited.

Senator La Follette, who championed the publicity law at the last session, declared his colleagues had not changed their position and stood ready to reaffirm their desire for publicity.

He cited the pending income tax suit against Andrew W. Mellon, former Treasury Secretary, as "another argument" for publication.

"We would have known these facts long ago," he added, "if that return had been a matter of public record."

Agitation for repeal of the pink slip law has been led by the Sentinels of the Republic.

'Prince' Identified By Fellow Sleuth

By the Associated Press.

New York, Feb. 28.—The bogus Prince Michael Romanoff, otherwise known as Harry Gerguson, whose nocturnal rendezvous with Mrs. Wilma E. Gould resulted in a $500,000 suit for damages, was named today as a fellow sleuth by Frank Luderowski, private detective, who testified he had been ordered to shadow Mrs. Gould.

The detective, a surprise witness, asserted he trailed Mrs. Gould and Gerguson on the night in February, 1931, that Gerguson's apartment was raided and Mrs. Gould found there. He testified that at that time Gerguson was employed by the Luisi Investigating Service, which Luderowski then was serving.

The Luisi Service and three other defendants are accused of conspiracy in the action. A divorce suit by Edward B. Gould, Mrs. Gould's husband, followed the raid.

Plot to Kill Chinese Over Bride 'Sale' Probed

Los Angeles, Feb. 28 (AP).—Police Chief James E. Davis assigned 16 extra detectives to the Chinatown squad today after reports reached him, he said, hired gunmen had arrived here to assassinate three wealthy Chinese merchants.

The chief said the "executions" apparently had been planned as the result of ill-feeling between the Hop Sing Tong and the Four Families Association over the recent "sale" of Toy Fong Lew, doll bride, to Kack Lee Gee.

was no intimation his suggestion would be accepted by the Democrats. Snell urged immediate appropriation of $880,000,000 and more leisurely discussion of works proposals.

A new "compromise" proposal on the prevailing wage amendment was offered in the Senate by Senator Robert R. Reynolds (Democrat), North Catrolina, but gained little support, despite an amusingly forthright appeal by the North Carolinian.

"I Hate a Straddler."

The amendment, which Reynolds declared would solve the dilemma of harassed Senators, would enact the prevailing wage plan, but give the President power to abrogate it in any community where he "finds that the payment of such prevailing wage is subversive or detrimental" to recovery.

Waving his arms, Senator Reynolds shouted at his colleagues:

"We do not want any criticism. We are not going to straddle any fence. I hate a straddler. I hate a man who stands so that the people can not tell where he stands. We should stand on one side of the people or the other, or we can take the fence away and then the people can not tell where we are standing."

To the support of the President's insistence on a "security" wage, lower than prevailing wage rates, but higher than the dole, came Senators Kenneth McKellar, of Tennessee, and John Bankhead, of Alabama (Democrats), while Senator Daniel O. Hastings (Republican), Delaware, took the floor to assail the Administration's opposition to the wage amendment.

Parleys at White House.

White House conferences with Administration executives continued throughout the day, but whether work relief was discussed could not be learned. Relief Administrator Harry Hopkins, Secretary of Labor Perkins and Secretary of Commerce Roper were among the officials who talked with the President. Edward O'Neal, president of the American Farm Bureau, also called on Mr. Roosevelt and afterward had this to say about the prevailing wage:

"Agriculture takes the position that the great majority of the unemployed in our Nation is willing to work at any livable wage until such a time as they may be absorbed again by legitimate industry. With equal emphasis, American agriculture condemns the making of work relief an instrument to penalize our tax-paying population and to subvert the American ideals of our entire body politic."

Grocer Sentenced In $2,000,000 Fraud

Wisconsin Man Gets 15 Years for Cigar Swindle.

By the Associated Press.

Milwaukee, Feb. 28.—Elmer S. Huckins, former village grocer who fashioned a phantom cigar business into the vehicle for a $2,000,000 swindle, today was sentenced to 15 years' imprisonment for using the mails to defraud.

He was also fined $10,000. A Federal court jury convicted him on each of 13 counts charging misuse of the mails and on one alleging conspiracy. Judge F. A. A. Geiger denied motions for a new trial, but instructed defense counsel to "take your steps" when appeal was mentioned.

Evidence introduced in Huckins' two-day trial showed that late in 1924 or 1925, he began taking loans from relatives and close friends on promise of 52 per cent interest. Subsequently other persons invested, but were promised only 26 per cent. Federal authorities investigated in 1929 and were convinced Huckins had no cigar business but merely paid "interest" out of invested capital.

Harris & Ewing.

a mistake if it attempts to assimilate either of the extremes of the Democratic party. If both of these elements secede, the center of the Democratic party will still have the Brain Trust and the pork barrel. We should acknowledge the potency of both.

Hurley agreed that the Roosevelt Administration's announced purpose to "bring incomes of those who live by profits and those who earn a daily wage closer together" is a "worthy objective," but he added:

"We are still listening to a flood of propaganda about what the Democrats are doing to procure an equitable distribution of incomes, but exclusive of taxpayers' money that is being paid out on doles and 'made work,' the distribution of incomes under the New Deal is unquestionably upward toward the concentration of wealth and not downward to the great majority of the people."

Advice to Party.

Hurley said the Republican Party should:

Support the changes necessary to correct, strengthen and perfect, not to destroy, the American economic system.

"Oppose the centralization of power in a bureaucracy at Washington—overcentralization of power is nearly always destructive of liberty.

"Oppose destruction of commodities and waste of taxpayers' money as a base of recovery.

"Prevent monopolies.

"Support the constructive portions of the NRA.

"Support legislation to provide unemployment and old-age insurance (not dole) without destroying the insurance which individuals have created for themselves through their own efforts, whether through insurance companies or investments.

"Support President Roosevelt in his efforts to return to the Republican plan of relief; in his use of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation and the Home Owners Loan Corporation and other similar institutions designed to furnish credit at lower rates of interest, wherein the principal with interest is returnable to the Treasury and does not ultimately become a burden on the taxpayer, and in his national campaign for law enforcement * * *"

Wisconsin, and other foes of NRA. Assurance that Senators on both sides of the issue will be given full scope in questioning is said to have satisfied sponsors of an intensive inquiry.

Senators Nye and McCarran, who had drawn an amendment to their own resolution, which would have referred the matter to a select committee of Senators, declined to press it, and a speedy agreement was reached.

In one quarter, it was said that Harrison has consented to engage both counsel and investigators, a concession he declined to make at the outset. Who will be retained to conduct the study will be threshed out at Tuesday's meeting. There are understood to be several candidates for the job of counsel, including Lowell Mason, former counsel for the Darrow board, who already had been retained by the Judiciary subcommittee.

Senator Harrison said S. Clay Williams, chairman of the NRA board, and Donald Richberg, New Deal coordinator and counsel for the NRA, will be among the witnesses summoned by the Finance Committee, in gathering facts which he intends to use as a basis for any legislation that may be enacted to continue the recovery set-up.

Whether Gen. Hugh Johnson, former recovery administrator, will be called to testify will be for the committee itself to decide, he said.

Attorney General Cummings told reporters yesterday that all of the New Deal test cases eventually will be carried to the Supreme Court.

"That district court decisions against the New Deal should multiply is natural and as it should be," he said.

"We are in a process of interpretation and clarifying of these laws by our courts. There is a tendency to overemphasize some decisions."

Herbert Hoover, Jr., Is Sued for $94,000

By the Associated Press.

Bakersfield, Calif., Feb. 28.—Herbert Hoover, jr., was sued for $94,000 damages today as the result of an accident last October 31, in which his car figured. The plaintiff is W. E. Young, of Banning, Calif.

The complaint alleges that "either Herbert Hoover, jr., or Jane Doe" was driving the automobile when the accident occurred. Negligence on the part of the driver is alleged. Young said he suffered three fractured ribs, concussion of the brain, loss of teeth and cuts and bruises.

Costigan Asks Job Census.

An unemployment census, to be completed in eight months, was proposed by Senator Costigan (Democrat), Colorado, in a bill introduced yesterday carrying an appropriation of $13,250,000. The census was advocated as a guide to relief efforts.

days and was better yesterday than on Wednesday. Other members of the Supreme Court were being kept informed of Mr. Holmes' condition.

Meanwhile, Dr. Felix Frankfurter, professor of law at Harvard University and close friend of the stricken jurist, left Boston for Washington to be at the bedside of Mr. Holmes, according to an Associated Press dispatch. With Dr. Frankfurter was John G. Palfrey, personal and legal representative of the former justice.

Just as Mr. Holmes in public life shunned publicity, so his physician and friends guarded the details of his illness. Dr. Claytor said periodic bulletins of his patient's condition would not be issued but that if any marked change took place it would be revealed.

Former Justice Holmes since 1929 has been a widower. He has no children. Constantly in attendance on him has been James Rowe, who as a honor graduate of the Harvard Law School was named Mr. Holmes' secretary last fall. It was the jurist's custom for many years to select each year an honor man from Harvard to be his secretary.

Resigned in 1932.

The ill jurist resigned as an associate justice of the Supreme Court on January 11, 1932, after serving on that bench 29 years. He had been a State and Federal judge for 49 years. He was associate justice and later chief justice of the Supreme Judicial Court of Massachusetts.

Almost immediately on receiving his arts degree from Harvard in 1861 he joined the Twentieth Massachusetts Volunteers for service in the Civil War. He was wounded three times during that conflict, once grievously. When he left the Union Army he held the rank of lieutenant colonel. He frequently exhibited greater pride in the title of "colonel" than he did in that of "Mr. Justice."

Since his retirement from the Supreme Court bench, Mr. Holmes spent his winters at his I street home and his summers at his Beverly Farms (Mass.) home, just as he did when in public life. In the last three years he has visited the battlefields of the Civil War in Maryland and Virginia where he had participated in engagements.

Among his tours he visited one day the Battleground National Cemetery on Georgia avenue. Capt. Herbert Turner, the superintendent, explained that the burial place was set aside for Union soldiers who had participated in the Brightwood Battle that saved Washington and possibly the Union.

"I am eligible to be buried here," the former justice said, and, pointing toward Arlington Cemetery, added: "but I suppose they will put me over there."

Much of the time which Mr. Holmes spent indoors since his retirement has been devoted to reading, or listening to others read, French novels and detective stores, of which he is fond. His home has been a mecca for lawyers from all parts of the country. Thousands of those trained in the law worship him. President Roosevelt called to chat with him on his birthday, March 8, two years ago.

Justice Louis D. Brandeis frequently has called to chat with the man whose name was linked with his in the notation "Holmes and Brandeis dissent" on so many Supreme Court decisions for many years.

Known as the "great dissenter"—a description he disliked—Mr. Holmes expressed many views in minority opinions of the court which subsequently were adopted by a majority of the court. He became the apostle of human rights over vested interests.

Two Railroads Unable to Pay Bond Interest

Chicago Great Western, Denver and Rio Grande Plan Reorganization.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Feb. 28.—The safety valve was pulled by two of the country's smaller but well-known railroads today to relieve the strain of top-heavy capital structures.

Directors of the Denver & Rio Grande Western decided at a meeting in New York to omit the semi-annual interest payment aggregating $827,000 due tomorrow on the consolidated mortgage bonds, and at Chicago a petition to reorganize under the bankruptcy laws was filed by the Chicago Great Western.

The capital makeup of these two carriers includes $173,105,673 in funded debt, $62,518,902 in preferred stock and roughly 752,000 shares of common stock. Preliminary reports for 1934 indicate the two carriers failed to earn their fixed charges by $3,444,694, despite stringent measures of economy in operation.

Uses 60-Day Extension.

Interest on the Rio Grande bonds was due January 1, but the company took advantage of a 60-day extension allowed by provisions in the covering indenture. Faced with the necessity of providing the money or acknowledging default, the directors adopted a formal resolution today stating the company was engaged in the preparation of a plan of readjustment of its capital structure and pending the completion of such a plan, no payment would be made on the overdue interest coupons.

While official comment was lacking, it was the understanding in well-informed investment circles that bondholders would either have to accept this at its face value or go into court and plead for relief through receivership. The outcome of such action, if it should be taken, would depend entirely upon the decision of the court insofar as placing the road in bankruptcy is concerned.

Directors authorized the appointment of a special committee to proceed with "all diligence" in the completion of a definitive plan of readjustment and report back to the board on March 21.

Reorganization Planned.

The Chicago, Great Western's petition, filed in the Federal court at Chicago, stated the company was unable to pay $710,880 interest due March 1 on its 4 per cent first mortgage bonds. The line's attorney told the court that a reorganization plan was already under discussion and the court authorized the company to continue operating under its present management pending the submission of such a plan.

Both carriers have lately been in a precarious financial condition and today's developments were not unexpected in the financial community. Great Western's bonds dipped slightly, but loans of the Rio Grande, already sharply depressed, were not disturbed.

Inspect Motor of Post's Plane

Associated Press WIREPHOTO.

A minute examination of the Winnie Mae's motor was held yesterday in Los Angeles to determine the nature of the "damaging substance" which forced the noted flier down on substratosphere flight. It was found to be metal filings and a portion of emery.

from Burbank, Calif., on a transport plane.

At first he denied saying at Kansas City that steel filings and emery had been placed in the motor of his ship, Winnie Mae, which failed him last week on his attempted stratosphere flight. Then he repeated practically the entire story credited to him at Kansas City.

"I don't know who put that stuff in there," he said, "but I'd like to know why it was done."

His machine had not been guarded, he said. "Why the hell should it be?" he snapped. "Who'd expect a dirty trick like that to be pulled?"

Post declared he was not trying to alibi himself and that he would attempt the flight "just as soon as the motor can be repaired."

"I don't believe I have a personal enemy in the world," he added, declaring he wouldn't name a person he suspected.

"Any investigation would be up to the manufacturer of the motor," he said. "I haven't requested any. I want the public to know this isn't any alibi and that I'm going to try it again—soon."

Stricken Ship Sends Out S O S; Help Is Rushed

4 Craft Hasten to Rescue in North Atlantic; 14 Drowned in Gale.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Feb. 28.—The steamer City of Hamburg wirelessed the Radio Marine Corporation tonight it had intercepted a distress call from the freighter Bosanka, which gave its position as about 250 miles off the coast of France in the North Atlantic Ocean.

The City of Hamburg said that it and three other ships were going to the rescue of the stricken ship, believed to carry a crew of 30.

The other steamers were the Cordillera; a ship identified only by its call letters, LDBW, which Radio Marine said was unlisted, and the Llangibby Castle.

The Bosanka, a Yugoslav boat, is listed by Lloyd's Register as of 3,456 tons.

14 Drown as Lifeboat And Fishing Boat Sink

By the Associated Press.

Casablanca, Morocco, Feb. 28.—Fourteen men—nine Spaniards, three Frenchmen and two Arabs—drowned today when a Spanish fishing boat sank and a lifeboat sent to its aid capsized in heavy seas. A gale blowing outside the harbor hampered rescue efforts.

One sailor off the fishing vessel was washed ashore, but suffered serious injuries when he was dashed against rocks. Six bodies were recovered. Eight were missing.

Gale-Battered Ships Arrive in Plymouth

By the Associated Press.

Plymouth, England, Feb. 28.—Battered ships arriving at Plymouth today were mute witnesses to the force of the gales lashing Atlantic shipping during the last fortnight.

The S. S. President Roosevelt, which fought fierce rough seas all the way, came in with seven thick plate glass windows on her promenade deck smashed by one 50-foot wave.

Five days late from Vancouver, the British freighter Boxhill arrived with a pronounced list. Her cabins and holds had been flooded by heavy seas, which also loosened the deck cargo of timber. The crew worked in a gale to fasten new chains to the timbers. The Boxhill's iron decks were broken in five places by the waves.

"In three days we encountered two hurricanes each of 100-mile-an-hour force," her captain said, "and Sunday we received SOS calls from 11 ships."

James M. Logan is specific.

In his application for a beer license for his establishment in the Mason Building at Upper Marlboro, Md., Mr. Logan wrote, in the line reserved for "exact location of place:"

"In the Mason Building, next door to the jail."

The board of license commissioners, which met yesterday, granted the license. They also granted a beer and light wine license to a place at Meadows, the only two applications before the board. The next meeting will be held March 14.

Fire Damages Stores In Berkeley Springs

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Berkeley Springs, W. Va., Feb. 28. Fire of undetermined origin yesterday did heavy damage to the Silver Store Building in the downtown section here and also damaged the mercantile stock of O. E. Widmyer. Explosions heard during the early stages of the fire were believed to have been caused by fumes arising from the flames confined to the rooms. The entire end of the brick attic was blown out during the explosions.

Garnett Office Faces Inquiry On Operations

be helpful to the committee in that way.

"It is an axiom of the legal profession that a good lawyer does not try his case in the newspapers but a poor lawyer does."

Speedy Action Urged.

Recall of Mr. Garnett before the committee "at the first opportunity" is to be urged by Mr. Werner. The next formal meeting of the committee has been fixed for 1:30 p. m. on Monday. At that time, plans call for the appearance of Inspector William G. Stott, chairman of the Police Trial Board. Mr. Werner indicated he might seek an executive meeting of the committee in the meantime to consider what should be done about Mr. Garnett and to fix the time he is to be recalled and some of the questions he is to be asked.

Judges of the Police Court also are to be heard by the committee. No date for their testimony has been set. A detailed program of procedure by the committee apparently is to be worked out in the next few days.

Some members of the committee are said to feel it would be good policy to let Mr. Garnett and his assistants rest for the time being. They wish to avoid the appearance of persecution, it was said. John R. Fitzpatrick, committee counsel, who formerly was an assistant United States attorney, is understood to have urged the wisdom of this course.

Will Look Into Police Board.

If this plan prevails the committee is expected to follow its inquiry into the operation of the Police Trial Board by examination of several police captains. The captains are to be asked about some specific cases which have been complained about, but the committee emphasis is expected to be placed on getting their views about the existing set-up of police and other law-enforcement machinery and what changes they believe should be made.

A possible major change in the present machinery was studied by E. Barrett Prettyman, corporation counsel, and William Seals, of the crime committee, during a visit to Baltimore yesterday.

Mr. Prettyman is expected to be called before the committee later. At that time he is expected to submit several recommendations for changes in the present laws and enforcement machinery. His visit to Baltimore yesterday was to study at first hand operation of the so-called magistrate courts which have operated in that city for nearly 100 years. Visits are to be made to other cities by Mr. Prettyman to study their methods before he appears before the committee.

Rotarians Hear Bjorlee.

Suit for $100,000 Heart Balm From Dr. Langston Set to Open

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Danville, Va., Feb. 28.—Suit instituted by Richard B. Thomas, of Hampstead, N. Y., against Dr. H. J. Langston, of this city, claiming $100,000 for alienation of his wife's affections, is expected to open in Federal court here tomorrow, contingent upon disposition of charges of violation of the bankruptcy laws against three local men.

If the case is not reached tomorrow, it probably will not be tried until next September. The court's session expires Saturday, and heavy docketing throughout the court district would prevent removal of the case to another city. In addition, counsel for both sides are said to be opposed to the case's transference.

The plaintiff's counsel has supenaed records of telegraph companies for the purpose of securing testimony as to telegrams, if any, which Dr. Langston may have addressed to Mrs. Thomas.

Photostatic copies of letters alleged to have been sent by Dr. Langston to Mrs. Thomas also are to be introduced.

Counsel for the defendant has reiterated that Dr. Langston met Mrs. Thomas here and was "courteous and polite to her." They deny that the doctor exercised undue influence over her.

Large local interest is centered in the case. Mrs. Langston died from a rare malady last April.

MRS. RICHARD B. THOMAS.

Tenants Flee Beds as Flames Sweep Building

$12,000 Blaze at Postal Quarters, Apartments in Silver Spring.

Fire believed to have started in the basement under a drug store damaged a two-story brick building housing the Silver Spring, Md., postoffice, a pharmacy and six apartments early yesterday.

Tenants, routed by flames and smoke, scrambled from their beds to the icy streets as the blaze spread upward into the store, then reached the apartments. Damage was estimated at $12,000.

Awakened by smoke, Mrs. Della Bower telephoned the fire department, a block away, and then aroused other occupants on the second floor. A. G. Briggs, substitute mail carrier, who was arriving at the postoffice for work, saw the flames in the basement about the same time.

Harold Hughes, one of the dwellers, picked up his 2-year-old son and ran to safety with his wife and a few belongings. He saw his family out of danger, then returned for the remainder of their clothes.

Firemen, who quickly got the blaze under control, found Hughes trapped against the roof. They put a ladder against the building and he got down with little difficulty.

Mail and postoffice equipment were carried out of the building by Miss Bertha Shaw, assistant to the postmaster, and other postal workers.

Service Sunday For W. Bratten, Md. Magistrate

Rev. Page to Conduct Rites at Berlin for 70-Year-Old Justice.

By the Associated Press.

Berlin, Md., Feb. 28.—Funeral services for Magistrate William J. Bratten, 70, who died yesterday in the Peninsula General Hospital at Salisbury, will be held here at 2 p. m. Sunday.

The Rev. I. Marshall Page, pastor of Buckingham Presbyterian Church of this city, will conduct the service. Burial will be in Buckingham Cemetery.

Justice Bratten was appointed a State magistrate in 1931 and was one of the three Democratic incumbents in Worcester County nominated by Gov. Nice for reappointment in the "green bag" appointments.

For many years he was a member of the board of visitors and governors of Washington College. He is survived by one brother, George Bratten, and one sister, Mrs. Frank W. Hawkins, both of Berlin.

Lincoln Kin Rites Held.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Luray, Va., Feb. 28.—Funeral services were held today in Worcester, Mass., for Herbert Lincoln Printz, 68, a native of Page County and a relative of President Abraham Lincoln. He was born 5 miles south of Luray, a son of John David Printz, whose wife, Mrs. Angeline Printz, was a relative of President Lincoln. An aunt of Herbert Printz, Mrs. Lorenzo Printz, was born near Lacey Springs, Rockingham County, from which section the first Lincolns emigrated to Kentucky, where the war President was born. Herbert Printz left Page County about 27 years ago. Two brothers—John Lincoln Printz and "Dick" Printz—are still living in Page County.

Mrs. Showalter, 99, Dies.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Winchester, Va., Feb. 28.—Survived by 121 grandchildren and a number of great-grandchildren, Mrs. Sallie M. Showalter, a native of Rockingham County, died last night at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Margaret Hardy, here at the age of 99 years.

Mrs. Showalter was the widow of Abraham Showalter. Until her illness, about six months ago, she was in good health. Two daughters, Mrs. Fannie Kibler, of Woodstock, and Mrs. Hardy, and one son, Abraham Showalter, of Kansas City, Mo., survive.

Grandchildren in this city include Ernest C. Dove, of the police force; John S. Dove and Gilbert F. Dove.

Linthicum Rites Held.

Lynchburg, Va., Feb. 28.—Funeral services for James Edward Linthicum, 67, who died yesterday at Memorial Hospital, took place today from his home in Madison Heights. He was a member of the Madison Heights Methodist Church and the Woodmen of the World, and was a native of Amherst County.

Mr. Linthicum is survived by his wife, Mrs. Ora W. Linthicum; a daughter, Mrs. S. J. Woody, of Madison Heights; a sister, Mrs. Florence Reed, of Baltimore, and two brothers, George Linthicum, of Lynchburg, and Milton Linthicum, of Eagle Rock.

Bowers Services Held.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Grafton, W. Va., Feb. 28.—Funeral services were held today for Harry Bowers, 66, for the past 30 years assistant to the chief clerk of the United States railway mail service here. Death occurred suddenly Tuesday as he was en route to his office.

He was a native of Greenspring, Pa., son of the late D. H. and Sarah Forehope Bowers. He entered the postal service here, but formerly worked in Martinsburg, W. Va.

Surviving are the widow, formerly Miss Elizabeth Rau; three children, Miss Rachel Bowers, Washington; Miss Sarah Bowers, Alexandria, Va.; and Dr. Norman Bowers, Martinsburg; and two sisters, Miss Alice Bowers and Mrs. Sarah Keedy, Martinsburg.

Mary E. White Dead.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Berryville, Va., Feb. 28.—Miss Mary Ellzey White, 60, a native of Loudoun County, died yesterday at the home of her sister, Mrs. Frances Beverly Whiting, of Berryville.

Miss White was a member of a prominent family, being a daughter of the late Richard White and Margaretta Holmes McGuire White, of Clarke County. She is survived by her sister, who is the widow of Judge F. B. Whiting, and one niece, Miss Margaretta Whiting, a member of the faculty at Garrison Forest School, near Baltimore. She has numerous relatives in Winchester.

Theater Owner Buried.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Elkins, W. Va., Feb. 28.—Funeral services were held this afternoon for Rezon Howe Talbott, 64, theater owner, who died suddenly from cerebral hemorrhage. Burial was in Maplewood Cemetery. For the past 20 years Mr. Talbott operated the Hippodrome Theater. He was the father of S. Benton Talbott, professor of science at Davis and Elkins College.

Critics of Her Appointment Answered by Mrs. Lammert

Qualified for Judgeship in Cumberland, She Says of Herself.

By the Associated Press.

Cumberland, Md., Feb. 28.—Mrs. Mary C. Lammert, of Frostburg, who has been selected by Gov. Harry W. Nice as judge of the juvenile court here, struck back at critics of the appointment with the assertion that "I am better qualified for this particular position."

Gov. Nice's appointment of Mrs. Lammert was announced after the Mayor and City Council of Cumberland had adopted a resolution expressing opposition to the appointment of any person outside of the city limits.

Mrs. Lammert, in her statement, pointed out she was born in Cumberland, lived there 30 years, taught in a Cumberland school for 12 years and has been an active member of the Business and Professional Women's Club of Cumberland for the last five years. She said two members of her family were still taxpayers in that city.

"So, it would seem," she added. "I have never lost my interest in my home town because I happen to be living 11 miles away.

"My long interest in all problems pertaining to public welfare, social welfare and public health is well known to all the workers in this field, both in the State and county."

In defense of a woman's holding public office, she pointed out that of the approximately 35,000 registered voters in Allegany County more than 15,000 were women, adding:

"To give this large class of voters some representation in the appointments does not seem either unjust or unfair. In fact, it seems peculiarly fitting to give a woman, a mother, or an ex-teacher a position where understanding and sympathy, as well as a knowledge of the psychology of young people, is so essential."

Girl Wed by 'Proxy' Granted Annulment

St. Louis, Feb. 28.—Miss Virginia Zimmer, 22, who, without her knowledge, was married by proxy to Elmer Lee Middleton, 19, at Union, Mo., October 31, was granted an annulment by Circuit Judge Robert W. Hall today.

She testified she agreed to have another girl take out a marriage license for her, but that it was not her intention to go through a wedding ceremony.

Granting the annulment, Judge Hall said:

"The other girl is in a funny position. If she appeared for you at the marriage ceremony she was the one who was married. She had better file a divorce or annulment action."

Dr. Axson's Rites Held at Houston

Many Texas Educators at Services for Professor.

By the Associated Press.

Houston, Tex., Feb. 28.—Funeral services were conducted here today for Dr. Stockton Axson, 67, professor of English at Rice Institute, who died Tuesday.

The body was taken to Rome, Ga., his birthplace, following the service. Funeral services will be held in the Georgia city on Saturday.

Many Texas educators attended the funeral.

Dr. Axson, a brother-in-law of the late President Woodrow Wilson, had been a member of the faculty of Rice Institute since 1918. He came here from Princeton University. He served as secretary of the National Red Cross during the World War.

Funeral Rites Held For Miss Patterson

Funeral services for Miss Ruby Raymond Patterson, 41, a teacher in the public schools here, who died Tuesday in Sibley Hospital, were held yesterday at Calvary Baptist Church. Burial was in Cedar Hill Cemetery.

Miss Patterson taught sixth grade at Hilton School. She was a native of Missouri, and made her home here at 1806 Kenyon street.

Surviving are four sisters, Miss Margaret K. Patterson and Mrs. L. C. Gray, of this city; Mrs. W. M. Mooney, of Spencer, W. Va., and Mrs. W. I. King, of Flushing, N. Y.

'Lifer' Defends His Attorney From Criticism

Satisfied With Sentence, Says Man Convicted of Mrs. Ilsley Killing.

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., Feb. 28.—A colored man who said he was satisfied to spend the rest of his life in prison "if they'll just let me alone," today came to the defense of the lawyer who defended him in the trial for his life on charges of murdering a Virginia society matron.

The man is George Crawford convicted of murdering Mrs. Agnes Boeing Ilsley, and given a life sentence. Another life sentence was added when he pleaded guilty to murdering the Ilsley maid, Nina Buckner. The women were murdered in December, 1932.

The lawyer is Dr. Charles H. Houston, colored, dean of Howard University Law School, Washington, who today sought to answer, through Crawford, severe criticism of his handling the case by Martha Oruening and Helen Boardman in an article published in a current magazine. Houston was retained for the accused man's defense by the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

The criticism was based primarily upon the failure of the defense to offer alibi testimony in the trial, but added a criticism of failure to appeal from the decision.

At the State penitentiary today Crawford said:

"I am satisfied with what Dr. Houston did for me. I am satisfied with the trial. I am satisfied with the sentence. I am satisfied to stay here the rest of my life, if they'll just let me alone. I am tired of seeing my name in the papers and I am tired of talking to people about the case. If I am satisfied I don't see why the devil other people don't let me alone.

"I would have liked to have had those people from Boston here (the alibi witnesses referred to in the criticism of Houston). If I had had some alibi witnesses I could have matched lie for lie."

Houston, who was present at the interview given to a half-dozen newspaper reporters, said the alibi that Crawford was in Boston at the time of the murders in Middleburg, Va., was brought out in Boston, where Crawford was arrested a year after the murders, and before Houston entered the case.

"We thoroughly checked the alibi later and found it would not stand up in the face of the State's evidence," said Houston, "and we abandoned it."

Drys' Charges Draw Rebuke Of Police Chief

Methodists Data on Arrests in Winchester Branded as Inaccurate.

Winchester, Va., Feb. 28.—Chief of Police C. W. Hollis today took exception to data recently issued by Deets Pickett, research secretary of the Methodist Board of Temperance, Prohibition and Public Morals, in which it was declared that drunken driving in Winchester increased 20.95 per cent in 1934 compared to the previous year, and 815.9 per cent compared to 20 years ago.

"The figures," Chief Hollis said, "do not present an accurate picture and I resent the publication of data obviously inaccurate which may reflect with discredit on this community."

While figures on drunken driving were not immediately available, Chief Hollis today pulled out his records with this result:

Since the opening of the A. B. C. store here eight months ago, there has been a decrease in arrests for intoxication of 69 compared to the like period a year ago. The liquor store was opened in August. From then to yesterday, there have been 286 arrests for drunkenness and disorderly conduct arising from drinking, said Chief Hollis. During the like period a year ago, there were 355 such arrests.

Prior to repeal, Chief Hollis declared, all persons arrested and found in possession of illegal liquor were charged with possession of illegal liquor, since this carried a heavier penalty than drunkenness. Since repeal, however, the liquor found on prisoners usually is legal. Hence they are booked as drunks. This, it was said, tends to increase the number of arrests for drunkenness when, as a matter of fact, there has been a decrease.

The gain of 815.09 per cent in drunken driving cited in the data of the Methodist dry leader was much larger than for any other city in the list.

Japan Effects Economic Pact With Chinese

Copyright by the United Press.

Shanghai (Friday), March 1.—China and Japan tonight were reported to have agreed upon general terms of cooperation "to ease diplomatic and economic tension in the Orient."

The agreement followed a visit to the Yangtse Valley by high Japanese military authorities and was understood to have the support of both the Tokyo war and foreign offices.

Terms of Agreement Listed.

Terms of the agreement—which presumably must be ratified by the privy council in Tokyo and the executives of the Kuomintang—include:

1. Complete cessation of anti-Japanese agitation in China; anti-Japanese propaganda to be supplanted by a publicity campaign for Sino-Japanese understanding.

2. Japanese credits to China to assist the Nanking regime in its current financial difficulties.

3. Japanese financial, economic and military advisers to replace other foreigners now employed by Nanking—especially the German military mission which has been training Chiang Kai-Shek's troops for the past seven or eight years.

It was reported a time limit of from six to nine months has been set for ratification of the agreement, which still is merely in verbal form.

Conversations Are Admitted.

A spokesman for the Japanese Legation denied any agreement had been reached, but admitted conversations had been held.

It was understood the Japanese military, particularly representatives of the Japanese army in Manchukuo—the Kwantung army—played a leading part in the negotiations.

Tentative conversations for the agreement have been under way ever since the Tangu truce two years ago ended Japan's thrust into north China.

At that time Japan forced Chiang Kai-Shek to place a Japan-named representative in Peiping. The man selected was Huang-Fu, who commanded the trust of Chiang Kai-Shek as well as the Japanese.

Canton Accord Is Sought.

Active conversations started late in January in Nanking, when Chiang Kai-Shek and Prime Minister Wang Ching-Wei talked at length with Gen. S. Suzuki, Japanese military representative in Shanghai, and Minister Akira Arioyoshi.

Later Lieut. Gen. K. Doihara, head of the Kwantung army's secret service, visited Nanking and talked at length with Wang Ching-wei.

It was reported Doihara now is en route to Canton to induce the Cantonese to accept the accord. Canton virtually is independent of Nanking.

Forced to Accept Accord.

Chiang Kai-Shek was forced to accept the accord in the face of a large body of hostile domestic opinion because:

1. Nanking is in desperate straits for money because of the high price of silver and loss of the revenues of the former "three eastern provinces"—now Manchukuo.

2. He feels the League of Nations and the United States failed to demonstrate any ability to force Japan to observe the Nine-Power Treaty, the Covenant of the League and the Kellogg Pact.

3. He feels China must have the friendly assistance of some strong foreign power and believes that only two nations would even consider his overtures. They are Japan and Russia, and Chiang has been the bitter enemy of the Soviets for nearly ten years—since he broke with the Bolshevik advisers brought into China by the late Sun Yat-Sen to organize the "Nationalist revolution."

Injury to China Through Silver Policy Regretted

The United States as well as other Nine-Power Treaty signatories are watching China's financial condition, with its possibilities of Sino-Japanese reconciliation, it was understood last night, according to the United Press.

Officials, however, were reluctant to discuss the situation, although unofficially representatives here regretted any injury to China's financial situation which might be attributed to the United States' silver policy.

In view of this Nation's consistent policy for collective assistance to China, it was regarded unlikely that the United States would view any exclusive unilateral aid to China with sympathy, observers said.

Czechs Hold Students On Espionage Charge

Praha, Czechoslovakia, Feb. 28 (AP).—Three German students, including the president of Nazi Students Organization at Praha University, were under arrest today charged with espionage.

Secret police first arrested a youth they identified as Fritz Kamm, former president of the Nazi Students Organization, yesterday afternoon. After Kamm's hearing they made a midnight search in the German students' organization headquarters and took into custody the other two, whose names were withheld.

London Parley Set to Cement Peace of World

Dr. Butler Announces Plan for Renewed Study of Economic Issues.

By the Associated Press.

London, Feb. 28.—Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler today announced plans for an international conference to open here March 5 and said "we are going to try to find a way out of the hopeless deadlock which is endangering world peace."

The conference will seek solution of the problems of the political future of the League of Nations, currency stabilization and trade barriers.

"We want to offset the profound impression," said the educator, "that discouragement and loss of confidence was caused by the failure of the World Economic Conference."

He described the failure of that conference as the "Genesis" of this new conference, and specifically mentioned the fact that Leon Fraser, retiring president of the Bank for International Settlements, will participate, as his reason for hoping the conference will bring action on the part of governments.

Only carefully censored statements will be issued after the meetings at Chatham House.

Butler will open the conference and the chair then will be taken by Sir William Beveridge on Tuesday, J. A. Spender, former editor of the Westminster Gazette on Wednesday, and Sir Austen Chamberlain on Thursday.

The first day will be devoted to study of international trade, means of removing barriers such as high tariffs, quotas and other administrative restrictions. The Wednesday meetings will study monetary conditions. Methods of getting Japan and Germany to return to the league, and obtaining fuller cooperation between the United States and the league will be studied Thursday.

Americans expected to attend are Butler, Fraser, Frederic M. Sackett, former Ambassador to Germany; Peter Molyneux, editor of the Texas Weekly; Prof. Philip C. Jessup, of Columbia University; Prof. Charles Oscar Hardy, of Brookings Institution, Washington; Malcolm Davis, Carnegie representative at the League of Nations, and Henry Haskell, Carnegie Endowment official.

Teachers College Seeks $650,000

Dr. Combs Lists Needs of Fredericksburg School.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Fredericksburg, Va., Feb. 28.—Possible improvement of the plant and campus of the Fredericksburg State Teachers College listed by Dr. Morgan L. Combs, president, in a survey filed with the Public Works Administration, will involve a total outlay of $650,000, if all of the items are carried through to completion.

The figures on the local college form part of a tentative list of public works projects in Virginia, estimated to involve more than $200,000,000, as reported yesterday by Col. James A. Anderson, State PWA engineer.

The City of Fredericksburg filed a list of tentative PWA projects totaling approximately $300,000.

Reich Takes Over Saar Today; Hitler May Attend Celebration

100,000 Visitors Expected; Residents of Basin in Holiday Garb, German Schools Closed for Day; Goebbels Will Deliver Address.

By the Associated Press.

Saarbruecken, Feb. 28.—France and the League of Nations will give up control of the rich Saar coal basin tomorrow to close one of the most hotly contested chapters of the Versaille Treaty.

Because Saarlanders voted overwhelmingly in last January's league-supervised plebiscite to return to the Fatherland, sovereignty over the valleys Germany relinquished in 1918 will be transferred back to the Reich in simple ceremonies beginning at 10 a. m.

A galaxy of Nazi notables—Joseph Buerckel, Adolf Hitler's choice to govern the Saar; Minister of Propaganda Paul Joseph Goebbels and possibly Der Reichsfuehrer himself—will be on hand to see the Nazi and German flags raised over the government building in Saarbruecken and city halls and police stations throughout the region.

The day will be one of rejoicing throughout the Saar and all Germany. Schools will be closed in the Reich while everything in the Saar will be shut down. Tonight the basin was decorated and Saarlanders wore holiday garb.

Buerckel, formerly the Reich's commissioner for Saar affairs, will take over the government from Baron Pompeo Aloisi, of Italy, head of the league's committee of three which arranged details of the transfer.

The Italian baron today succeeded Geoffrey G. Knox, British diplomat, as president of the league's Saar governing commission—that because Nazi officials refused to come to the Saar until the "Dictator" Knox departed—and will rule, nominally, until he turns the keys to the territory over tomorrow. Knox already has gone.

As the vanguard of the 100,000 visitors expected from the Reich began arriving in special trains, food stores—already taxed by hoarders who feared prices would rise after reincorporation in the Reich—found their supplies fast dwindling.

Nazi efficiency, however, had foreseen that contingency, and the long dining-car train that goes to all big National Socialist occasions arrived to feed 30,000.

Needy Saarlanders, meanwhile, were heartened by an announcement from Goebbels, who will make the principal "welcome home" address on behalf of the government tomorrow, that 700,000 marks had been given Buerckel to distribute.

Lavish promises of help for business were made to Saarlanders. A program of public construction to aid the 40,000 unemployed will be put into force soon, officials said, while the Saar Chamber of Commerce has its own plans. A new aviation field and several railway stations, together with highway construction, are on the program.

Vienna Arrests Students For Nazi Demonstration

By the Associated Press.

Vienna, Feb. 28.—Three hundred Vienna students, many of them girls, faced permanent banishment from all Austria's institutions of higher learning tonight as the result of a celebration of the Saar's official return to Germany.

The 300 were arrested and hustled off to jail when police, swinging clubs freely, charged hundreds of university students who ignored the government decree punishing political demonstrators with imprisonment and expulsion to stage the pro-German manifestation.

Assembling in buildings of the university, the students sang "Deutschland Uber Alles" and flung up their arms in Nazi salutes in exultation over the Saar basin's formal transfer to the Reich tomorrow.

Colonel Knox Knighted For Services in Saar

London, Feb. 28 (AP).—Col. Geoffrey G. Knox, president of the League of Nations Saar governing commission until today, has been knighted for his services.

A companion of the Order of St. Michael, Knox today was promoted to knight commander by order of King George. He becomes Sir Geoffrey.

Amnesty Is Extended To Saar Prisoners

By the Associated Press.

Berlin, Feb. 28.—Adolph Hitler, testifying to "the love the nation holds for the Saar," tonight extended amnesty to all Saarlanders serving prison sentences of one year or less in the Saar.

The real leader's action came on the eve of the basin's formal return to the Reich, while all Germany prepared for tomorrow's big celebration.

Little Theater Groups Of 3 Towns in Contest

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Winchester, Va., Feb. 28.—Members of the Little Theater of Winchester, the Potomac Players, of Hagerstown, Md., and the Little Theater of Chambersburg, Pa., will compete at Hagerstown March 7 in a play contest.

Each group will present a one-act play.

Siam Expects Prajadhipok To Quit Throne

Parliament Has Rejected Terms of Monarch, Bangkok Hears.

By the Associated Press.

Bangkok, Siam, Feb. 28.—Siamese today believed their 5-foot King, Prajadhipok, was all ready to carry out his threat to renounce his ancient throne.

While strictest censorship kept the press here silent, there were reports that Parliament had rejected the conditions laid down by the monarch for withdrawal of his abdication threat. Neither official confirmation nor denial of the reports was to be had.

Recent open sessions of Parliament have not discussed the King's conditions, made known to the delegation of three Siamese leaders which went to England in December to confer with him, but it was considered likely the matter might have been taken up at secret sittings.

The Siamese press is under strictest orders to print no word of the dispute over Prajadhipok's royal prerogatives, curtailment of which by Parliament caused him to threaten abdication.

A dispatch to London from Rangoon, Burma, Thursday said private advices from Bangkok were that Prajadhipok's abdication was regarded as certain because Parliament had rejected his conditions. His nephew, Prince Ananda Mahidol, would succeed to the throne in that event, these reports said.

France Won't Disarm Veterans.

Paris, Feb. 28 (AP).—The Chamber of Deputies today flatly refused to discuss the proposed dissolution and disarming of France's many veteran and political "troops." The deputies voted 382 to 204 against the measure. The government took no side in the discussion.

Michigan Town's 'Rich Strike' Spouts Up Wave of Oil Taxes

By the Associated Press.

Midland, Mich., Feb. 28.—Porter Township, risen from a quiet farming community to a bustling oil field since last July, has money coming in from taxes faster than officials can find ways to spend it.

They thought they had the problem solved this year when it became necessary to move the old town hall to make way for an oil well. They built a new $20,000 structure and paid cash for it. Other improvements made in the scattered community absorbed more of the revenue, but still the wells pumped on, bringing in tax revenue at the rate of $150 a day.

The township, which produces more than half the oil in Michigan, gets 40 per cent of the tax collected by the State from producers. In addition, it gets royalty from the "town hall lease," where a well was brought in to produce 100 barrels a day.

Just this week, Supervisor Elmer Gorsuch said, the State paid into the township treasury $30,350 to swell its revenues since last July to $85,000.

Now, with $50,000 on hand, the township board has called for an election to decide whether rural electric lines shall be constructed along 42 miles of township roads so that farmers of the township may have electric power. The election will be held March 4.

Construction of the lines will cost about $1,000 a mile, so the treasury balance will shrink considerably. The trouble with that idea, though, the officials admit, is that 250 farmers who have agreed to connect to the lines will pay $100 each for the service, and $25,000 will come rolling back into the treasury.

Boycotts Drive Hitler to Ease War on Jews

Schacht's Influence Seen in Change of Policy; He Retains Semitic Aid.

Copyright by the Associated Press.

Berlin, Feb. 28.—Intense economic pressure, it became apparent today, has forced Reichsfuehrer Hitler to abandon for the present at least the public manifestations of his cherished anti-Semitism policy.

This tendency was indicated definitely in the remarks of speakers at a meeting of political leaders and Nazi Party members in which the Reich's economic problems were the subject of discussion.

While berating Jews as "vampires and exploiters," speakers concluded their addresses by saying:

"It may be asked of you why the administration undertakes nothing more against the Jews. It can not for foreign political reasons, since further boycotts, foreign exchange difficulties and other troubles are thereby threatened.

"Therefore, you must go about and spread what you have been told here and act accordingly."

Behind this and similar developments was seen the strong influence of Dr. Hjalmar Schacht, minister of economics, who in fighting Germany's terrific economic battle can not risk further boycotts and loss in bills of exchange.

He is compelled to avoid these hazards to the Reich's economic stability even though it may involve scrapping the clause that in the early days of Hitler's appearance on the political scene won possibly more adherents to his program than any of the other 25 planks in the Nazi platform.

Dr. Schacht, who has emerged with increased prestige from several similar encounters over questions of policy in the last three months, has kept a Jew at the head of his foreign exchange department. He also has been quoted as saying he would stand by his other Jewish coworkers.

The minister of economics yesterday assured the president of the Berlin Merchants Association that "nothing further will happen to any member of your organization." Many Jews are enrolled in the association.

Mendieta Flays School Strike As 'Political'

Cuban President Confers With Batista on Ways to Prevent Disorder.

By the Associated Press.

Havana, Feb. 28.—President Carlos Mendieta lashed out at striking students and school teachers today with the charge that their movement was "political, communistic and revolutionary."

His cabinet riddled by five resignations in the face of the strike, which claims over 300,000 adherents, Mendieta denounced leaders of the movement who seek the president's overthrow.

The government, Mendieta warned, is "maintaining an attitude of watchfulness" and "the authorities will take necessary measures" to halt any disorders.

As Col. Fulgencio Batista, army commander in chief, conferred with his provincial commanders presumably as to precautionary measures to stem the growing strike threat, Mendieta charged the strikers with knowing "they have no legal and legitimate claim."

A political movement, he asserted, is disuised "behind the demands they have presented."

"My government," the president continued, "doubled the university budget of (former President Gerardo) Machado, and, without obligation, I already have paid two-thirds of the salaries due but unpaid to the professors and teachers under the Machado regime. When Machado left, the teachers and professors were 31½ months behind, and I am voluntarily liquidating this sum."

The president said Machado's last appropriations for schools were $4,674,000, while the Mendieta budget calls for $8,413,000.

Man Not In White.

To a man accustomed to receiving a yearly bonus more than once topping a million dollars, the idea of joy in unremunerative work may well seem curious. Mr. Eugene G. Grace, of Bethlehem (Pennsylvania) fame, is thus perhaps more to be pitied than blamed for certain of his recent revealing observations before the Senate Munitions Committee. He declared that, in his opinion, men will not work hard except for profit, whether in time of peace or of war.

Fortunately for the United States there are not a few Americans who look upon the relation of work and profits from a slightly different angle. They are those simple folk who cherish the memory of the world's Damiens, its Grenfells, its Washingtons. Their eyes are turned to men such as Faraday, Mendel, Shackleton, Noguchi and tens of thousands less widely heralded. They like to think of Abraham Lincoln and Robert E. Lee and Walter Reed as working for ideals rather than monetary rewards. Something other than cash impelled Madame Curie, Florence Nightingale, Jane Addams, they naively suggest.

Sentimental, impractical, deluded though these people be, they cling to their simple understanding of duty and honor—and go on working. Of those people, incidentally, were most of those who went off to the last war with something more than profits before their eyes, leaving it to the stay-at-homes to concentrate on that part of the picture.

The Reynolds "Compromise."

The depth of confusion over the work relief bill is indicated by the compromise offered by Senator Reynolds. He seems to think that every reasonable objection to the measure would be overcome by authorizing payment of prevailing wage scales on public work projects while permitting the President to adjust such wages if and where it can be shown that they are drawing men from private employment. The reasoning offers little hope that the Senate is ready to grapple with the real issue.

Relief work undertaken by the CWA and the PWA conclusively showed that the payment of prevailing wages by the Government draws labor away from private employment. Senator Reynolds suggests that Congress ignore that experience in the hope that the same thing will not happen again. Yet the very nature of his amendment reveals his skepticism. Indeed, the Senator's proposed amendment is not a compromise at all. It is merely a captious way of phrasing the provision to which the President properly objects.

Moreover, the so-called compromise leaves unchanged the fundamental weakness of the measure. A true compromise should contain reassurance for private employers now giving work to approximately 39,000,000 individuals that their operations will not be needlessly interrupted by the expenditure of nearly $5,000,000,000 of borrowed money to provide temporary jobs of an undefined character for 3,500,000 unemployed. Until Senators address themselves to this aspect of the public works measure there is not much hope of dissipating the fog in which it is enveloped.

Reflection In Order.

Chairman Randolph, of the House District Crime Committee, is to be commended for his announcement that intimidation of witnesses called before that body will not be tolerated. The committee intends to accord individuals giving it information "every possible protection" within its power. In view of recent developments this assurance appears essential if full and candid testimony from police officers and other witnesses is to be obtained.

Direct reference to the threat of District Attorney Garnett against Policeman Peters was avoided by the committee chairman. But there can be no doubt that Mr. Garnett's indiscreet efforts to discredit Mr. Peters' testimony was the reason for the committee's action. It is an anomalous situation when a congressional body investigating crime in the District feels compelled to reassure its witnesses against possible reprisals by the chief prosecuting officer.

Mr. Randolph's committee is conscientiously trying to expose the weaknesses in our law enforcement machinery, with the object of sponsoring remedial legislation. This undertaking is one that should command hearty support from every official serving the District. Certainly it is to the advantage of prosecuting officers to lend every support to the committee's efforts.

It is probable that when the threat against Policeman Peters was made Mr. Garnett had not fully considered its unpleasant implications. Since time for reflection has been available a change of attitude on his part is expected as a necessary precedent to a concerted drive by those responsible for the elimination of an intolerable local crime situation.

The Agreement With Belgium.

The agreement just concluded between the United States and Belgium is the third negotiated by the State Department under the authority given the Executive to conclude reciprocal tariff pacts with other nations. But, to a much greater extent than the trade pacts with Cuba and Brazil, the Belgian accord offers a definite test of the feasibility of expanding our foreign trade by the policy of mutual concessions. In this case, for the first time, we are dealing with an industrialized European country whose exports offer direct competition with important American industries.

Thus, in exchange for substantial Belgian reductions on American automobiles and parts, the United States has agreed to lower duties on various building materials, such as cement, plate glass and low-priced iron and steel products. Acting Secretary of State Phillips emphasizes the importance of these reductions as a stimulus to domestic building, adding that: "It is believed that whatever new competition may present itself can be ably met by the American industries."

Probably, even before such competition materializes, the American industries affected will protest vociferously, without waiting to see whether the invasion of their markets proves to be negligible or relatively extensive. It will require persuasion to convince those from whom a small amount of protection is withdrawn that they will benefit indirectly by increased sales of our automobiles in foreign markets. Of course such expansion enlarges the domestic demand for steel and glass, in addition to providing employment for automobile labor.

Arguments of this sort, however valid, seldom overcome the opposition of protected interests to any concessions. But while a reciprocal trade agreement can not be impervious to all criticism, it must be able to meet that of an objective and disinterested character. The termination and escape clauses in the Belgian accord show that safeguards to this end have been strongly in mind.

The concessions extended to Belgium must, under our most-favored-nation policy, be automatically accorded to certain other nations. This prospect is evidently viewed with some trepidation. As a result it is provided in the agreement that if any change in duties enables third countries to obtain major benefits, or to increase their imports unduly, the duty reduction may be withdrawn.

The precautionary character of the pact is also shown by the provisions for denunciation of the agreement after six months' notice by either party, and for its modification or termination in case of wide variations in exchange rates—a necessary safeguard in view of existing currency uncertainties. It is too soon, therefore, to predict confidently that the Belgian agreement has inaugurated a new era which will witness the gradual elimination of excessive tariff and other trade barriers through mutual concessions. The scope and the character of the concessions are, however, evidence of the genuine desire of the parties to the pact to assist a revival of world trade by agreeing to buy as well as to sell.

Such a policy inevitably threatens temporary difficulties for adversely affected groups. But under a treaty as carefully framed as the one in question it is always possible to withdraw concessions if at any time the local dislocations resulting from those concessions prove excessive in relation to the positive gains. Unless injury can be demonstrated in fact rather than in anticipation, the Belgian treaty, which is more moderate than anticipated, will everywhere be regarded as an encouraging sign. It indicates that it is possible, as well as desirable, to break the vicious circle of restrictions which has so greatly helped to prolong the depression in every trading nation.

Corn From Argentina.

A shipload of over 15,000,000 pounds of corn from Argentina has arrived in Baltimore. It is the first full shipload of corn that has ever been received in that port. One would be tempted to say "coals to Newcastle," but for the AAA.

Last spring that organization decided that American farmers had been producing too much corn. Officials in Washington thought farmers should reduce their acreage by 20 per cent. The AAA accordingly offered to pay them at the rate of 30 cents per bushel for not growing corn. The not unnatural result was a substantial curtailment of planting.

Then came the drought. Calculations of the experts in Washington were completely upset. An acute shortage of corn developed. Undoubtedly climatic conditions were largely responsible, yet, according to official estimates, farmers would have grown an additional 300,000,000 bushels of corn if acreage curtailment had not been undertaken.

When the feed shortage became apparent the AAA reversed its policy, with the object of conserving corn. In his annual report Secretary Wallace lists among the achievements of the AAA the slaughter of little pigs, which helped to save corn and thus nullify the effects of curtailment contracts which 1,160,000 farmers had been induced to sign.

But conversion of pigs into fertilizer did not fully eliminate the corn shortage. That grain is now being imported from Argentina, Mexico, the Dominican Republic and other countries. Nearly 3,000,000 bushels were imported in 1934. While this total is not large compared with the domestic output, it affords a striking illustration of the trend which the adjustment program has set in motion.

The policy adopted to aid the farmer has helped to raise domestic prices and in some cases to cushion the effects of the drought. But at the same time it has brought about a sharp reduction in agricultural exports and an increase of imports. The attempt to make a new adjustment between our own farms and factories has thrown out of adjustment our foreign trade in agricultural commodities.

In spite of reciprocal trade negotiations, designed especially to benefit the farmer, producers in other countries are gradually encroaching upon both domestic and foreign markets supplied by American farms. No temporary improvement, however heartening, should be allowed to obscure the implications of this trend.

An Ancient Dispute.

The three recent Federal District Court decisions adverse to the National Industrial Recovery Act and to the Tennessee Valley Authority all raise a similar fundamental question.

That question broadly is whether the Federal Government should undertake to exercise certain powers ostensibly and avowedly in the national interest, or whether the dominion of the Federal Government should be so circumscribed as to confine the exercise of the same or similar powers to the discretion of the States. The issue is older than the Constitution itself and will continue to divide men according to their preferences for the rival philosophies popularly personified by Madison and Marshall or by Jefferson and Hamilton.

The final decision rests, as always, with public opinion. If the public believes that the exercise of directive power is both desirable and attainable only through the Federal Government, the Constitution can be amended, if necessary. Nevertheless, the difficulties and delays this course would entail are so formidable that as a practical matter the attempt of Congress to exercise powers asserted under much of the legislation enacted during the emergency would be definitely frustrated.

In the three current adverse decisions of the lower courts the finding is that the business involved is beyond the reach of the Federal power. Judge Grubb of Alabama so holds with regard to TVA. Judge Dawson of Kentucky comes to the same conclusion on the coal codes. Judge Nields of Delaware similarly rules that the collective bargaining provision [the much-debated Section 7(a)] of the NIRA is unconstitutional and void so far as the Weirton Steel Company is concerned. In his opinion the business of the company is intrastate and so beyond the reach of the interstate commerce clause of the Constitution.

These judges are able to invoke one set of venerable and impressive precedents, which are the logical derivatives of so-called State rights doctrine. It is by no means reasonable to assume that these interpretations of the Constitution are the last word or that they foreclose other, quite opposite, constructions of the meaning of the commerce clause. So far as the process of judicial review goes, it is for the Supreme Court to say finally whether, in fact, the business in question in these three cases is or is not intrastate.

Only those who are passionately devoted to one side or the other in the ancient dispute over the proper or necessary extent of the Federal power can find much either to cheer or to complain about until the fundamental issue is settled with finality at the bar of public opinion. In the meantime, the Administration will quite properly proceed on the assumption that the setbacks in the lower courts are preliminary, not final, opinions.

Literary Exhumation.

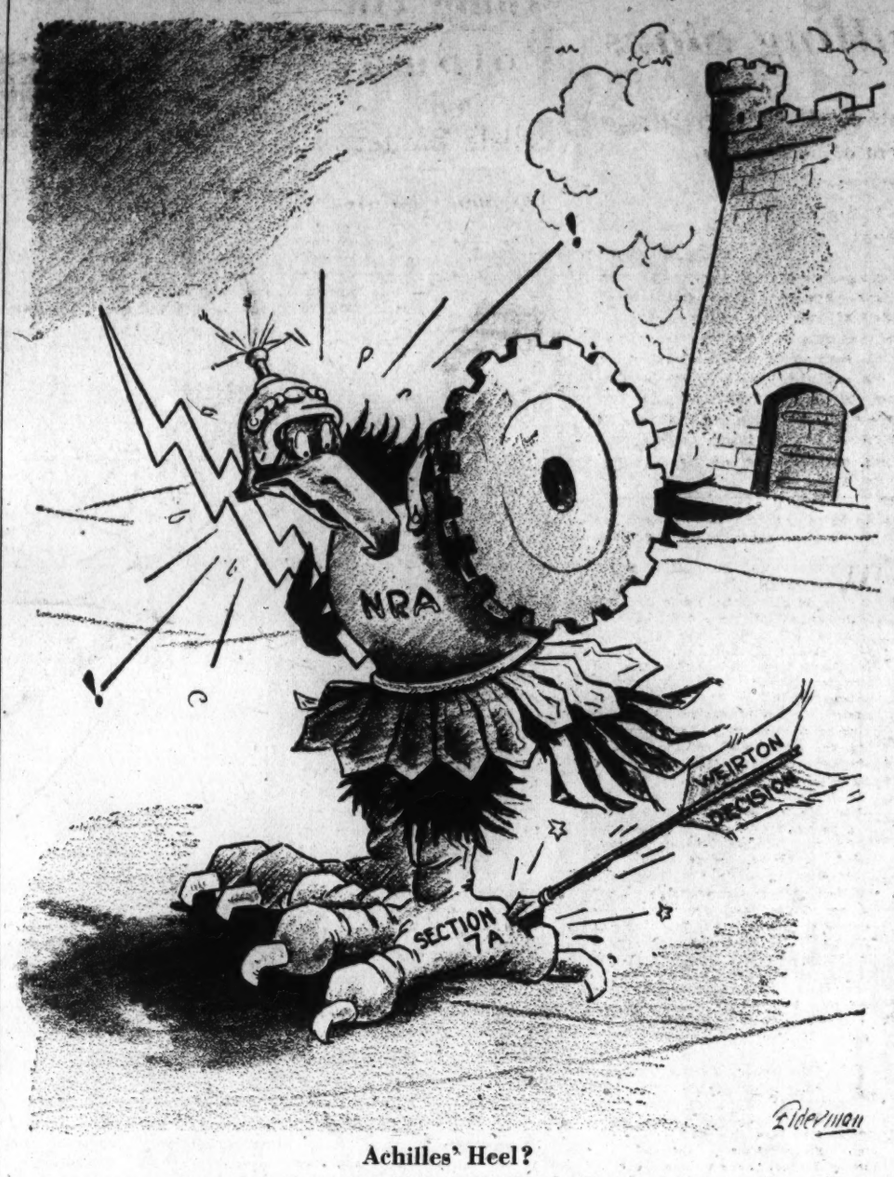

Skill in detection rather than literary appreciation has been exhibited by Carl J. Weber, professor of English at Colby, in tracking down the "lost novel" of Thomas Hardy. Doubtless Dr. Weber's excellent efforts have resulted in uncovering a curiosity of great interest to bibliophiles. Yet a mere reader—even while unacquainted with the story's text or the scholarly introduction by its discoverer—may well ask what purpose is solved by the exhumation of remains which Hardy himself trusted were safely and permanently interred.

"The Poor Man and the Lady" was built in 1867, while its builder was still uncertainly engaged in a struggle toward the profession of architecture. Under the title of "An Indiscretion in the Life of an Heiress," it was published in the now forgotten New Quarterly Magazine, eleven years later. To Gosse, Hardy afterward confessed that he had destroyed all save a few pages of the original manuscript.

He seems to have been glad that the printed version was in limbo; he seems to have hoped, as firmly as he believed, that no ghost of the poor dead thing would ever return to plague him or his fame. If, as is asserted, parts of this novel were incorporated into "Under the Greenwood Tree," those were probably the best parts. For "Under the Greenwood Tree" is delightful. If, as is stated, other parts were embodied in "Desperate Remedies," then these were probably the worst parts. For "Desperate Remedies" is, on the whole, a wretchedly amateurish book.

Child-murder should be permitted novelists: for the extinction of their first-born brain-children. Most first novels were recognized as poor novels until the publisher's blurb was invented. This "Indiscretion in the Life of an Heiress" is almost sure to reveal itself as an indiscretion in the career of the architect who later became one of the greatest novelists of his age.

According to a big-game photographer, a lion will not harm you if you carry a walking cane. That would depend, we should think, on how fast you carry it.

Achilles' Heel?

A Cleanup Of Letters On The Hauptmann Case

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I see that Edward J. Reilly has staged a dress rehearsal of the Hauptmann case. Why have juries, judges and attorneys spend weeks trying them, then turn around after the jury renders a verdict and say that it is all wrong?

Look at the Scottsboro case, condemned two years ago, but nothing done yet. Is it any wonder lynchings take place? It looks like the jury and court was a mockery when a criminal is convicted that the order should not be carried out at once.

C. R. HAMILTON.
Washington, Feb. 27.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I read with interest the comments of others on the attitude of Mrs. F. D. Roosevelt and her stand against the jury's verdict in the Hauptmann case. I have only praise and duty to offer her for expressing her views and words that any man is innocent until proven guilty. The Washington newspapers and the publications of the entire world should encourage her in her endeavor to have the court and juries fair and impartial. We need one more court, the World Court.

CLARENCE ZIMMERMAN.
Washington, Feb. 26.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The Hauptmann case seems to furnish quite a lot of sob stuff for sob-brothers and sob-sisters alike.

I hate to think what would become of the sob-brothers and sob-sisters if they had their own way. My prediction would be in all likelihood that some mob-brothers and some mob-sisters would try to get ahead of the sob-brothers and sob-sisters and would probably teach them a never-to-be-forgotten lesson regarding their ill-placed tenderness.

WILLIAM BLUEMER.
Washington, Feb. 19.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: May I through your paper urge every man, woman and child who loves and reveres Lindbergh to join in the fight to delay Hauptmann's execution and to reopen the trial? Lindbergh has suffered enough already with the loss of his baby. It will be too ghastly if he has to go through the rest of his life with the torture of remorse, knowing that he was instrumental in sending an innocent man to the chair. Millions of us are convinced that Hauptmann is innocent. We believe that the kidnaper has yet to be found and the truth of the crime told. To those who do not agree with us we say: "If not for Hauptmann's sake, then at least for Lindbergh's sake. Reopen the trial."

JULIA.
New York City, Feb. 18.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: A distinguished American lady, respected not only for her exalted connections but also for her own high personal excellencies, has unnecessarily invited criticism by her gratuitous opinion anent the course of justice in the murder trial of Bruno R. Hauptmann.

This lady, like unto many other of our citizens, is mistaken as to the type and value of what is commonly called circumstantial evidence. She is "perturbed" over the possibility of an innocent person being condemned for murder on circumstantial evidence. Her perturbation is based upon the fact that no witness saw Hauptmann take and kill the Lindbergh baby. I would like to tell this very fine woman, and all others similarly perturbed, that premeditated and planned murders are never committed in the presence of spectators; it is always a principal part of the murderer's plan to slay his victim when no one else is in the vicinity. Manslaughter, or any other form of homicide committed in hot blood, or without preliminary scheming, may be committed in the sight of one or more witnesses; but in all my reading and observation of homicide cases, both here and in Europe, I have never read or heard of a premeditated murder which was not secret and clandestine.

Every day there are instances in which a conviction for crime has proceeded upon circumstantial evidence alone, and the convicted person has afterward confessed his guilt. This was the case of Courvoiser, the valet and murderer of Lord Russell. In two respects Courvoiser's case was parallel with that of Hauptmann's: Property of his victim was found concealed in the prisoner's house, and his attempted explanation of its possession was contrary to all the natural probabilities. Being a carefully planned murder, no one saw the act of killing, and the defendant was convicted altogether on circumstantial evidence. No mistake was made, for a day after the jury's verdict Courvoiser confessed his guilt.

I have never read of any murder case in which the case for the prosecution was more fairly presented, or where the defendant's guilt was more convincingly established than that of the State of New Jersey against Hauptmann. It is therefore regrettable that an American woman, second in prominence and universal esteem to none other, should casually express a doubt as to the righteousness of his conviction.

Surely the Hauptmann case has been hippodromed enough. It is too bad that its nauseous details can not be permitted to sink into oblivion. The alien former convict was given a fair trial; the evidence against him was overwhelming, and the eight men and four women who sat as jurors found him guilty on the first ballot, after a trial of 40 days.

I write only in the interest of an orderly administration of justice. It is my opinion that the citizenry of this land can not afford to treat lightly the solemn and painstaking findings of courts and juries.

HYACINTHE RINGROSE.
New York City, Feb. 25.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Conserning the Haupmann Case and my Jugement i think he got a unfair trile it onely substancial evidence and i think he was treated worse then a dog he had plenty of witness to Prove he was a inocent man . . . he came in the cort with a smile on his face and if he would of Ben guilty he could not of dun that . . . god gave him the strength to shawe he were inocent and not to down-harted . . . you can always know a guilty Person from a Person is not guilty they are something to see difference in the look . . .

MR. AND MRS. GEORGE HARPER.
Hagerstown, Md., Feb. 20.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Richard Bruno Hauptmann was convicted of murder, sentenced, and railroaded to the deathhouse for a crime which the State was unable to prove beyond a reasonable doubt that he committed. Although the State's evidence was merely circumstantial the prosecutor made an impassioned plea that the defendant's life must be forfeited and the jury so found. Now we have the case of Phil Kennamer charged with murder confessed to and yet the State charitably refrains from demanding the death penalty. Why? In the name of justice will some one please tell me why this difference is made? Is Kennamer's life any more sacred than Hauptmann's?

It does not seem reasonable to me to give one man the chair on circumstantial evidence alone and give another life imprisonment for a murder confessed to, according to the press. I have always been a stickler for justice, but I just do not see any justice between these two cases. Of course, I believe in capital punishment, but not on circumstantial evidence. Of course, I may have the wrong slant on just what justice means. In that event I feel sure that some good person will set me straight.

LELAND F. JAMES.
Washington, Feb. 21.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I read in The Post that Mrs. Roosevelt declared a wife should think and talk politically and otherwise as her husband thinks and talks, and in another column of the same issue that she "wondered" what "would happen" to "an innocent person" in the circumstances Hauptmann was and is in. After all, circumstantial evidence is, as a rule, by far stronger than direct evidence.

Both remarks seem most unfortunate to me. It is impossible for me to imagine an "innocent person" in any such conclusive "circumstances" as Hauptmann was shown to be in to the satisfaction of the 12 "good and true men" and women who constituted the slate at Flemington and heard and saw all the witnesses. Those 12, according to authentic reports, all voted on the first ballot for conviction, but differed as Mrs. Roosevelt does over capital punishment being visited upon any murderer however cruel and vile.

I wonder what is thought of the Department of Justice agents shooting to death on sight, gangsters like Dillinger, emerging from a movie, of like Baby Face Nelson on the public highway? Without a trial and with the possibility of mistaken identity? The public seems to feel, and by the public I mean a majority, that it was coming to those gangsters.

J. D. MASON.
Washington, Feb. 25.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I have always predicted that if Federal and New Jersey authorities could possibly find some poor man without money or reputation, with one iota of evidence against him, they would pin the Lindbergh kidnaping on him and railroad him to the chair. Then they could boast that the mystery had been solved, a great feat for them and satisfying the mob.

A poor friendless foreigner was an ideal victim. "I think in German," said Hauptmann, "please be patient with me on the stand." But their cruelty to him was something to make one hate human nature.

The snaky Wilentz hopes by this conviction to gain a high political office, having pleased the Lindberghs with their $20,000,000 Morrow fortune. Lindbergh, rich and famous, and happy with a second son, had no mercy on the poor young man Hauptmann with his faithful wife and lovely child. Why? Because he and the others are cruel, conceited and selfish beyond mercy or reason.

The Post Impressionist

Speech In Rebuttal.

Post Office, Friday.

SADIE is aggrieved.
And it seems that, when she is aggrieved, she is angry.

You will remember how a Column correspondent, over a signature which we oddly suspect as pseudonymous, took Sadie to task for disdaining crowds. This correspondent, this "Anna Nimity," called Sadie Blake an intellectual snob—said that Sadie had built, for her solitary habitation, a far too-superior "ivory tower"—intimated that, if Sadie had ever lived in a small town, she would be more tolerant of her fellow-creatures—in short, gave the graceless Sadie a dressing.

We could only conclude either that Miss Nimity was an exceptionally courageous woman, or else that she sadly underestimated Sadie's powers of retort. We shan't say that we approved of the Nimity letter or disapproved of it. We shall say merely that one of our motives in publishing it was self-defensive:

We were still bruised by Sadie's latest attack upon us. We experienced a very human desire to see her uncork the vials of her ready scorn upon somebody else besides the Post-Impressionist . . .

Well, we've seen it now . . .
And now you may see it . . .
Here it is.

"I am curbing an impulse to snap peevishly at Anna Nimity," writes Sadie—and then she snaps.

"I do not," says she, "reside in an actual ivory tower. And if Anna employed the phrase just as a figure of speech, I insist that I do not live in even a figure-of-speech ivory tower . . . No, indeed. I live on the fifth floor of a crowded apartment house. And I arise and retire to the yapping of dogs, the stridence of radios, the bickering of parents and children and the occasional singing of inebriated celebrants.

"Miss Nimity, even Miss Nimity, would find it hard to care for crowds if she lived where I do: here, where the elevator is too small and the walls too thin."

Then a flash—several flashes—of autobiographic light. Sadie once inadvertently betrayed the fact that she really attended some college in Arkansas. She here reveals that she was born somewhere out there.

"Miss Nimity," Sadie writes, "wonders aloud if I ever lived in a small town! Dear Anna, I am a yokel from Arkansas. I lived in a town of 500 souls—'where,' as Mr. Browning says, 'the souls could be discerned.' (You know Robert Browning, Miss Nimity: he was one of the actors in 'The Barretts of Wimpole Street.') Why, we had meetings and everything, just like people in other small towns. And I went to the State Teachers College, along with other yokelish small-towners.

"Mebee that has something to do with my aversion to elbowing crowds, Anna.

"Anyhow, and tsk, tsk, do permit me to pose as a world-weary sophisticate for a few short paragraphs! . . .

"And, Anna, if you must give excerpts from your personal experience-sheet, to prove how lovable and fraternal your exceptional crowds are, why, please try to make them more stimulating than the exhibits you've thus far submitted.

"I have no intention of posing complacently as something superior because crowds annoy me. I have been a waitress, a dress-clerk, a school-teacher, a hospital flunky and a nurse-maid, at different times in my uninteresting life. "I have lived in Denver, Memphis, Little Rock, Kansas City and Portland (Oregon), Anna—and always I have resented being pushed about by my fellow wage-slaves.

"Is it any wonder that I want, of evenings, to creep into my lonely hovel? Is it any wonder that I yearn, even if subconsciously, for the wide pastures and leisurely ease of my native State, where men and women go barefoot it they want to—but where they generally sport sport-shoes as neat as anything I find on the thronging streets of the Nation's Capital?

"The word 'snob' is a detestable word. I am not a snob. I am not, not, NOT a snob!

'Is that sufficiently childish and vehement to convince you, Anna?

"Anyhow, I, in my apartment-house 'ivory tower of complacence,' realize that a snob misses quite a good deal of the fun resultant from rubbing elbows with assorted types.

"I just happen to like my crowds more sociable than most crowds are.

"Yes, and smaller . . .

"Although I still persit in thinking that, throughout this Land of the Free and Home of the Brave, one needs not only a stout heart; one needs also a strong arm."

* * *

Our own opinion is that Sadie has what is needed.

But then, Miss Nimity did not strike us as a weakling.

If these two meet, we should like the soft drinks concession.

New York Brightened By Two Falling Stars

Special Correspondence of The Post.

New York.

TWO falling stars from the dazzling constellation which illumined the bright firmament of 1929 have made news, or at least, chatter, in the metropolis this week. Both of them were nature's noblemen—nature in the raw. Jimmy Walker was king of New York by popular acclamation until of his own volition, assisted by Samuel Seabury, he laid down the crown as well as the cap and bells. Prince Michael Romanoff was heir to all the Russias, strictly by his own election, until the courts, assisted by the newspapers, tripped down his exalted title into the extremely plebeian one of plain Harry Gerguson. Both appear to be in the last red stages preceding extinction, yet each still retains that final glow which makes them hot gossip.

From London and the Court of Chancery Jimmy Walker reports himself as "broke" and wholly without prospects, his career as a columnist on a British paper having come to an end last week. Those in New York who know Jimmy best do not take this sad tale too seriously. In fact they add a copious dash of salt. They predict that the present Mrs. Walker, Betty Compton who was, and her generous mother, under whose cute, thatched roof the former mayor is living down in Surrey, will find the means for some time to come to provide that sartorial elegance and touch of luxury which was always Jimmy's.

What surprises American readers of the Walker testimony and interviews is the shortness of Jimmy's memory. He informed the officials and the world at large that he received a mayoral salary of $25,000, more than $15,000 of which went to the former Mrs. Walker for shoes and ships and sealing wax. Surely Jimmy can not have forgotten so soon that glorious day, long, long before anybody ever thought of investigating him, when the board of aldermen whooped up his salary to $40,000, incidentally feathering their own nests with nice little salary increases, too.

It is true that they were not very vociferous about it. It is true also that Mr. Walker at the time said the action was taken merely to conserve the dignity of the city, which had always underpaid its executives. It is even true that, in a burst of philanthropy, he announced his intention of giving the salary difference to charity and offered to make a yearly accounting of his dole distribution. The accounting, however, has yet to appear.

• • • •

JIMMY likewise complained of the facility with which, on any little trip or junket, of which there were many, he always got stuck with the bills. This will leave his former traveling companions completely dazed. They will recall James as a jovial fellow with a mind completely above bills. Their recollection of the Walker excursions is of imperial movements with all charges taken care of in a mopping up process in which the mayor never deigned to participate. He was always having too good a time.

Indeed, the strangest phase of the evidence piled up by the austere Seabury was that everybody just adored paying Jimmy's bills everywhere and any time. Hard-boiled corporations, melted by the warmth of his personality, hastened to shower stocks on him. Cold-blooded brokerage houses carried him f. o. b., or, free on their books. Bemused individuals like Paul Block turned over Jimmy's Wall street winnings to him and quietly pocketed his losses. And there was even Paul Block's little boy, who felt that papa still hadn't done enough for poor Uncle Jimmy and wanted an automobile thrown in for good measure. And then—oh, yes!—there was that famous trip abroad financially operated from a common pool into which Walker apparently never dropped so much as a widow's mite.

Nobody likes to be broke. Yet, if Jimmy is planning to return to the United States, as he says he is, being really broke would have a certain value, which he does not fail to point out, in exonerating him of the charge of absorbing more, much more, than his salary in the years of his official life. If he hasn't got it the assumption is that he didn't get it. It is, perhaps, well to remember that Federal tax evasion charges, which a while back were said to be abandoned, are still pending. It must be said in all fairness to Jimmy that he remains one of the world's great artists in publicity. The Court of Chancery at first glance wouldn't seem like much of a platform from which to tell the world. But Jimmy knows how.

AS JIMMY WALKER was a tribute to the gullibility of the proletariat, so Mike Romanoff was a tribute to the gullibility of our pseudo-aristocracy. Mike Romanoff, alias Harry Gerguson, or vice versa, as you like, is only a night club stooge now, used to induce another order of wine from the after-dark trippers. He and his story are both getting a little threadbare.

But the legal proceedings in which at present he finds himself involved (and if Mike doesn't find himself involved in legal proceedings he isn't Mike) harks back to the old days when all was glamour and grab. Mrs. Wilma Gould, suing her sister-in-law, Anna Gould, and others on a $500,000 conspiracy charge, testifies that while in Mike's company she found her coffee drugged and herself whisked to an apartment where, in a state of semi-animation and complete dishabille, she was confronted by her husband and a competent corps of witnesses.

Apparently, however, she was not drugged but merely gassed at all her previous meetings with Mike during which he gravely regaled her with picturesque tales of the old Imperial Russian family, his magnificent but nonexistent estate at Au Sable Forks, and his mysterious purchases of polo ponies down on Long Island. And the odd thing about it is that she still refers to him from the stand as Romanoff.

Ah, well, Mike may have been going to the polo ponies then. He seems to be going to the dogs now.

WITH the discussion about moving Civic Virtue at its height, Civic Fame decided to move on her own account.

Since 1912 Civic Fame, the colossal creation of Adolf Weinman, a sculptor, who can also work as minutely as the Lincoln penny, has poised herself on the highest pinnacle of the Municipal Building. Finally she just got tired of carrying her shield and escutcheon and let them go, together with her good right arm. All three crashed down on the roof of the Municipal Cafeteria, scattering glass and impressing patrons with the civic fame of their fair city as they had never been impressed before.

At first it was felt that the lady in the Greek chiton, standing on top of her copper ball 550 feet in the air, was going to follow with a plunge of her own. But preliminary investigation has indicated a second thought on her part. She evidently prefers to remain where she is, the armless wonder of her generation. It is Civic Pride that goeth before a fall.

IT has been National Puzzlers League week in New York, the great gatheirng of the cross-word fans. Apparently their champions can take any puzzle, no matter how difficult or abstruse, and solve it right there on the platform in an average spasm of 4½ minutes. It is too bad they can not be turned loose on some of the alphabetical arrangements down in Washington. Unfortunately, however, they have to be given adequate definitions before they attempt their solutions. Supplying these might prove somewhat embarrassing for the Federal authorities.

The cross-word puzzle craze is not abating and the business in two-letter words meaning ontological or histographic is as brisk as ever. Most of the New York drug stores now sell official answers to the better-known current problems, puzzled over by experts. Indeed, if you get stuck on your puzzle there are gentlemen advertising who for the small sum of $1 will supply any word that the dictionary has overlooked. If you care to invest you may learn with a shock of surprise that in the land of puzzledom H2O supplies all the water. Many an amateur has been graduated into the sanitarium over that one.

Count Franceppi Jailed at Baltimore

30 Days Imposed, $1,000 Assessed in Liquor Case.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, Feb. 28.—Count Eduardo L. Duessy Franceppi, referred to by Government agents as a Spanish nobleman, was fined $1,000 and sentenced to 30 days in jail here today on a charge of operating a wholesale wine and liquor business without a Federal license.

District Attorney Bernard J. Flynn said the charges against the man resulted from complaint of Col. Charles Consolvo, a Baltimore hotel operator. He quoted Consolvo as saying the count sold him a quantity of champagne under a claim it had been imported duty free, but he found it to be an inferior domestic brand.

Judge W. Calvin Chesnut, in imposing the sentence, said he was making it moderate on the condition that the count leave the country as soon as he had served the time. The defendant, who pleaded guilty, agreed.

Dr. Mitchell to Lecture.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Charlottesville, Va., Feb. 28.—Dr. Samuel A. Mitchell, director of the Leander McCormick Observatory at the University of Virginia, will deliver an illustrated lecture on solar eclipse problems at a meeting of the American Philosophical Society tomorrow night in Philadelphia.

Along The Potomac

With Carlisle Bargeron

The Shaky Future.

DEAR ALECK: Once again I have come to be so worried about the future. I wouldn't be doing this, Aleck, if it weren't for the editors. It seems utterly impossible to please them.

BARGERON.

Just when I thought an ideal stalemate had developed in our Government, they insist it is essential for Mr. Roosevelt again to take the reins and bring order out of the chaos. When he had the reins they were beefing about his usurpation of power and the direction in which he was leading us with those reins. Now when Congress asserts itself they say it is out of hand and they express the fervent hope he can once again be the commanding figure he was in the early days of 1933.

• • • •

The Senate overrides him on the prevailing wage question and returns the works bill to the committee, the courts take two hearty wallops at his NRA. He is in a hole, the editors say, Aleck, and they demand that thinking and forward-looking people stand behind him.

It is all most confusing. In the first place, it is difficult to see where he is in a hole on the works bill. The so-called Progressives seem to be the ones in the hole. For years they have been barking at the heels of first the Republicans and then the Democrats. This has been their contribution to the gayety of things. They run over and yip at the Republicans and then dart over to yip at the Democrats. For the first time, insofar as I can recall, Aleck, they have yipped themselves into a hole.

They are committed to a works bill as the form of relief. The Republicans and the better element of the Democrats think continuation of the dole would be cheaper and more feasible and less dangerous.

No better illustration of the fact the Progressives are in a hole could be given than their demand, once the bill had been returned to committee, that it be immediately returned to the floor. Should it be returned to the floor promptly they know the odds are the prevailing wage provision will be stricken out in conference. If they were determined in their prevailing wage fight they wouldn't be urging this procedure. The truth is, Aleck, they are frightened. They are fearful lest the dole be decided upon.

This being the situation it is hard to see where Mr. Roosevelt is in a hole.

• • • •

But what I can't understand, Aleck, is why this wouldn't be an ideal situation if he were in the hole. I mean if both he and the Congress were in a hole. What better break could the country get than for the Congress and Mr. Roosevelt to deadlock, to bring about a situation where neither one of them could do a thing, if, instead of passing any such thing as the fantastic $5,000,000,000 work bill, simple relief funds were voted instead, if the NRA could not get its bill extending its life and if the AAA failed to get its so-called clarifying power to license all processors of farm products.

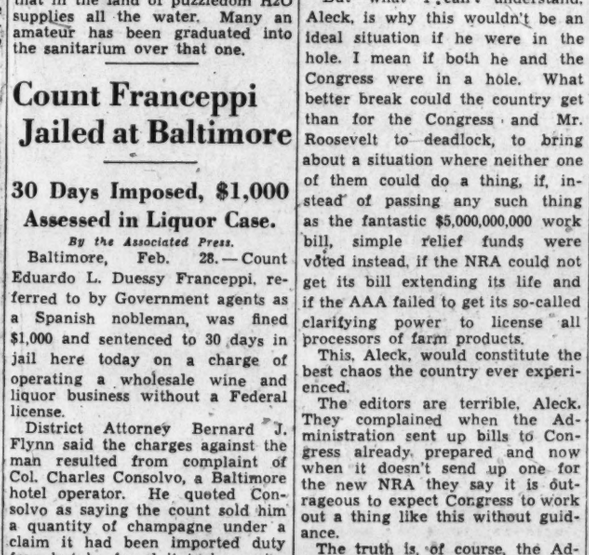

This, Aleck, would constitute the best chaos the country ever experienced.

The editors are terrible, Aleck. They complained when the Administration sent up bills to Congress already prepared and now when it doesn't send up one for the new NRA they say it is outrageous to expect Congress to work out a thing like this without guidance.

The truth is, of course, the Administration has sent up an NRA draft for Congress to work upon and that the reason it is appearing to be modest in this instance is because it wants Congress to approve the "good" frusts, to "force" the good trusts upon it.

But wouldn't it be wonderful if the works bills, the NRA bill, the AAA bill, the bill crucifying the public utilities—all of them, were lost in a deadlock? Then we could return very quickly to the old order, not the old order of crazy speculation, but the old order of common sense.

Along with the editors we prefer Mr. Roosevelt to the firebrands on Capitol Hill, but if they could just serve as offsets—oh, that would be great!

"Well! Are you going to let him bluff you?"

Jose Capablanca, Genius at Chess, Writes Highly Persuasive Invitation to the Game.

By Theodore Hall.

WHEN Jose Capablanca was 4, he stood by his father's knee one day in Havana in 1892 as his father was playing a game of chess with a friend. Little Jose watched curiously in the silence; it was his first view of the board in action. During the third game or so he suddenly spoke up. "That," he observed, "was a wrong move."

History does not record Senor Capablanca's ejaculation—for that move was, of a surety, an error. But more jocular than not, no doubt, the good senor turned to his son and invited him to play a game. Little Jose accepted, and little Jose won. At the age of 4, mind you, without a word of instruction! That, gentlemen, is genius of purest ray serene.

By the time he was 11, Jose Capablanca was a first-class club player. At 12, he was champion of Cuba—and chessmen stand under every other palm tree in Havana. At 20 he beat Frank J. Marshall, eight to one—and Marshall, at the time, was one of the first five or six players in the world. At 23, in the great international tournament at San Sebastian, Spain, Capablanca came in first. The achievement ranked him as one of the world's three chess masters. At 33, in the world championship match at Havana, he took the crown from Dr. Lasker with the score of four to nothing—a decisiveness never before seen in world championship play. Six years later (this brings us to 1927) he lost the championship to Alekhine, a less able player at Buenos Aires—three to six—through overconfidence and underpreparation. Since that time, Capablanca has been seeking a return match, which has not been granted him.

And if this isn't enough to fix Capablanca's supremacy in your mind, let's add the fact that no player in the world, in total games, has a plus score against him. With two he is even—Rubenstein and Spielmann. Lasker, Alekhine, and all the rest have minus scores against the Cuban wizard.

BUT just as chess, that emperor among games, is chill and awe-inspiring only so long as one knows nothing about it, so Capablanca's astounding brilliance stays remote no later than the moment when we begin to read his own words.

For, in "A Primer of Chess," (Harcourt Brace, $2.50), he comes out and speaks with so attractive a clarity and urbanity that his book makes the best possible invitation to the game. Benjamin N. Anderson, jr., the economist, mentions in his exceptionally interesting preface an occasion which he witnessed. Capablanca—confounder of world masters, remember, at a game which brings some pretty serious graybeards to the fore—"was sitting at a table with two eager-faced boys of 15, beginners at chess, playing simple, easily understood combination and taking real pleasure in the enthusiastic response of the youngsters."

It's just that absence of pomposity, that essentially natural and sympathetic attitude, which makes Capablanca a gentleman and a chess player par excellence, and a sterling guide for beginners.

• • • •

I GRANT you, if you're stepping up to the medieval array of a chess board in all innocence, that it would seem just about the most complex and difficult game invented by the mind of man. Kings and Queens, Rooks, Bishops, Knights and Pawns, you will hear, all have different moves. You will see them tangle themselves up in the most outlandish and intricate fashion. You will catch the glimpse of mysterious powers stretching across the board. And you will say: "No, thank you! I'll stick to bridge!"

Well, views differ, of course. But for my part, I find bridge simply and unendurably too difficult to be enjoyable. Compared with chess, bridge is the game cluttered with intertwining rules and cumbered with systems. In chess, everything is clear and aboveboard—in bridge, one is constantly looking for a gray cat in a London fog. Chess is one of the two or three games in the world which holds not an iota of luck—and how many prayers go up in bridge that West has the jack and not East? And where bridge is just about as calm and impersonal as an Irish pub at 11 o'clock of a Saturday night, chess stays as quiet, refreshing and disentangling as a good night's sleep.

But these, as I said, are personal impressions.

STILL, it remains true that chess has no real "systems." It has only principle. And for this reason Capablanca is a teacher to be followed. Because it may be said that he, among all the great masters, has the least personally distinguishable style of play. It is not "Capablanca"—it is just good, sound chess, played not by rote but by general strategy.

There was, for example, the day at San Sebastian when he met Dr. Tarrasch, a very erudite and profound student of opening moves. They went along at a neat clip for about 12 moves; then, on his next, the learned doctor stopped and thought. He thought for a long while before going on and getting the worst of it. It turned out that Capablanca, playing on principles, had made a move not in the books. When Dr. Tarrasch complimented him on his knowledge of openings, the fact was that Capablanca had never studied a book of openings at the time. He merely played the brand of straight chess which this "Primer" explains.

Very patiently (more simply than in his "Chess Fundamentals," which appeared 13 years ago) Capablanca takes the beginner by the hand through the moves, the openings, the middle games, the endings and several specimen match games. His comments at each point hold plain and persuasive reasoning; the 189 diagrams make the situations clear. I wish I'd had this book when, as a youth puzzling over a stuffy manual, I was trying to teach myself chess in a Honolulu garden among the mynah birds and mango trees.

3 Virginians Named For West Point Tests

Three Virginians have been designated by the War Department for the March 5 entrance examination with a view to admission to the United States Military Academy at West Point, July 1.

Those selected for the examination are Frank Thomas Holt, of Staunton; Albert T. Hawkins, of 360 Maple avenue, Waynesboro, and James R. Billingsley, of Woodstock. Holt was the first chosen. The other two were named as alternates.

March Origins

By Wm. Lyon Phelps

IT IS a curious thing that in Rome before the days of Julius Caesar, 46 B. C., March was the first month of the year, and that again in England and on the Continent in the middle ages, and indeed up to the middle of the eighteenth century, it was again the first month—one for pagan reasons, the other Christian, the Annunciation, of course, coming in March, the birth of the Saviour coming in December.

It got its name from the Roman god of war—Mars, the Latin name of the month being Martius. People used to think that Romulus himself gave this month that name, because his father was the god Mars. But as Mars never had any existence at all, and the existence of Romulus is doubtful, and anyhow obscured in the mists of far-away, this account of the origin of the name need not be taken seriously. Ovid said the month existed before the time of Romulus, though not in its later order in the calendar; but I don't know whence he obtained the foundation for such a statement.

• • • •

The Anglo-Saxons called the month Hyld-Monath, meaning roaring, windy, gusty, and also Lencten-Monath, the lengthening month, because the days begin to grow longer, which they had, as a matter of fact, been doing in the preceding two months.

Whatever March is called, it is usually a month of miserable weather; the only good thing about it being that it is the forerunner of better days.

In France, March was the first month of the year until 1564, when it was put where it now belongs by King Charles IX. In Scotland it was the first month until 1599. But England did not legally put January first and March third until 1752.

• • • •

There is an old tradition, common all over the continent and in the British Isles, that the last three days of March are borrowed from April; they were called the borrowing days.

A curious old Devonshire tradition was calling the first three days of March Blind Days; they were thought to be so unlucky that the farmers refused to sow seed on any one of the three.

Swinburne wrote:

In fierce March weather,
White waves break tether,
And whirled together
At either hand,
Like weeds uplifted,
The tree-trunks rifted
In spars are drifted,
Like foam or sand.

South Attacks Plan to Make Coal a Utility

Kentuckian Says Guffey's Bill Would Give Dixie Business to North.

By the Associated Press.

A distinctly North vs. South aspect developed yesterday in the fight before a Senate Interstate Commerce sub-committee over legislation to make the Nation's vast soft coal industry a public utility.

Former Representative John Young Brown, of Kentucky, assailed the bill of the Pennsylvania Democrat, Senator Guffey, as designed to put some Southern operators out of business and transfer their tonnage to Pennsylvania producers. Brown appeared in behalf of the Hazard Coal Operators Association.

Several leading Pennsylvania operators already have aligned themselves with proponents of the measure, which would create a national coal commission within the Interior Department, vested with wide powers to fix prices and allocate production.

Commenting on previous testimony that code violations were most widespread in Pennsylvania and Ohio, Brown said:

"It's our opinion that this is a piece of sabotage to break down NRA so they can get this bill through and take our tonnage."

Another Southern opponent of the measure was D. A. Thomas, of Birmingham, Ala., who spoke for the Alabama Mining Institute.

"Should this bill become a law," Thomas said, "the coal and steel industries of Alabama would be more adversely affected than any other industrial district of the Mississippi."

Thomas said the TVA would also have an adverse effect on Alabama operators and that the operation of Muscle Shoals already was being felt by them.

Earlier in today's hearing, enactment of the Guffey bill was opposed by major railroads of the Nation.

Dr. C. S. Duncan, an economist of the Association of American Railroads, said the legislation would permit the bituminous coal industry to "escape the antitrust laws," and "consolidate monopolistic powers."

11 Bombers Fly To Langley Field

By the Associated Press.

Newport News, Va., Feb. 28.—Eleven Army Air Corps bombardment planes from Hamilton Field, Calif., arived at Langley Field today from Maxwell Field, Montgomery, Ala., on a training flight to Panama and return.

Capt. Harold B. Smith commands the squadron, which carries 16 officers and 16 mechanics and enlisted men. The party will remain a couple of days, then proceed to Bolling Field, Washington, and two or three days later will take off for Panama. An attempt will be made on the return to fly from Panama to Bolling Field with only one halt for refueling.

Britain Also Grapples With Housing Problem

Obsolescence And Population Increases Nullify Gains Under National Program.

By Frank Darvall.
Special Correspondence of The Post.

London.

GREAT BRITAIN has been giving much attention recently to her housing problem. Two and a half million houses have been built in Britain since the war, just over two million of them in the last 11 years. Of these half have been built with the financial assistance of the state, and of the local borough and county councils, and three-tenths actually by these latter authorities themselves. In consequence of this national effort the state is now paying, and will continue for many years to pay, more than 13,500,000 pounds a year ($68,000,000), while the local authorities are paying, and will continue to pay, out of local revenue, nearly half that sum.

It is disappointing, therefore, in the face of such effort and cost, that it should be estimated that there is still a shortage of at least 800,000 houses, and that of the houses that do exist perhaps 4,000,000 should be really unfit and in need of replacement during the next decades.

When it is remembered that some 50,000 houses in any case become obsolescent, and should be replaced, each year, while the normal increase of families creates a demand for a further 67,000 houses per annum, it will be realized that a total of about 350,000 houses a year should be built throughout the next 20 years if the British people are, even according to their present standards of what is reasonable, to be adequately housed.

Actually on the average during the last decade only about 200,000 houses a year have been built. Even during the last year, in spite of the sensationally low interest rates, and the plethora of money available for such purposes, only 310,000 houses were built. The result has been that, since families have become smaller, and therefore relatively more numerous, and the population older, and therefore in need of more separate units of accommodation in relation to numbers, Britain, in spite of its great post-war housing effort, is hardly better off, except in the quality of her new houses, than she was when the effort was begun.

TO MAKE matters worse a large part, in recent years, perhaps 60 per cent, of the houses which have been built, have been relatively expensive (renting at more than 11 shillings—$2.75 a week), or for sale and not for rent, and therefore out of the reach of the actual wage-earner, except in the skilled or highly paid trades.

This matter of the poorer paid workers is indeed the crux of the problem. Such people live on wages of 30 shillings to 50 shillings a week, or on unemployment benefit of 24 to 40 shillings a week. They have been accustomed to rent houses at rents (including rates, i. e. local taxes) of from 5 to 11 shillings a week. They can not possibly afford more. And it is extremely difficult even with state and local subsidies, and almost impossible without, to build cottages or flats which will come up to reasonable standards of fitness and can be let at such rents.

All British governments and parties have been worried by this problem and they, and many private agencies, have recently been again inquiring into it. All sorts of suggestions have been made, from the nationalization of the building industry, and the taxing of the public to the limit to bring rents down to the poorer wage-earners' capacity to pay, to the leaving of the matter wholly to private enterprise in the hope that the pressure of demand will induce some far-sighted industrialists to apply to house building the mass production principles already applied to automobiles, and which have brought those down to what, even a short time ago, would have been considered an incredibly low price. There has on the part of most students of the matter been a gradual hardening of opinion against either of these extremes, and an agreement that the problem calls for the greatest effort, and the closest possible collaboration, of three parties, the state, the local authorities, and private builders.

HITHERTO about half the houses that have been built have been so by private enterprise alone. About a fifth have been built by private enterprise aided by state and/or local subsidies, and about three-tenths by local authorities so aided. Very few of these houses, even in the latter categories, have been within the reach of the poorer families.

Many people now consider that only drastic measures will produce better results. They would like to establish a national housing corporation with the duty of surveying the problem, and the power to raise money on government guarantee which might be reloaned cheaply to housing societies, local authorities and private builders. This it is hoped would stimulate such agencies to press forward with the building of cheap houses to let. They would wish also to establish a central buying agency, lest the competition of many local authorities and private builders bidding against one another for raw materials and labor might force the price of these up to unncessary heights.

They would like to rearrange the system of local taxation, and the distribution of State and local housing subsidies, so that the burden of the former, and the advantage of the latter, instead of being spread equally over many householders, without relation to need, could be removed from and concentrated on respectively the poorer and larger families, which most need, and are least able to afford, new and improved accommodation. They would like to take industry as well as population out into the country, where land is cheaper, both by the creation of satellite towns and garden cities, and by the development of rural industry. And where this is not possible they would wish to pull down and reconstruct ill-planned, overcrowded city areas, and to economize on space by building upwards—that is, housing displaced families in flats instead of the traditional cottages.

During the last 12 months at least four important private or semipublic committees of inquiry, and also two political parties, the Labor and Liberal, have produced reports embodying some, if not all, of these points. Newspapers and magazines have given the matter, and these reports, considerable attention. Public opinion has in consequence become stirred. It is not surprising, therefore, that the government has taken action.

The King's Undies.

("Queen Mary, on a shopping spree at the British Industries Fair, replenished the King's supply of underwear, sending some of the more modern styles to the palace for approval."—News item.)

The Queen has gone a-shopping,
The Queen is at the Fair
Refurnishing the King with
A stock of underwear.

She's driving through the gate;
She's off to buy some undies
To ornament her mate.

"Oh, here is something sporty,
We got 'em in this week,"
Proclaims the busy salesman,
"They're ultra smart and chic.

"Observe these shorts so nifty—
They're something very new;
I think they'd be becoming
Upon the King, do you?"

The Queen inspects the latest
In gents' fine underclothes
And says, "I'd hate to see him
In things as gay as those."

"They may be quite the fashion,"
The Queen says with an air,
"But royalty, I think, should Avoid such underwear."

"I think you are mistaken,"
The salesman's chatter ran;
"A monarch's tastes in undies
Are those of any man."

"The world is marching forward"—
Thus ran the salesman's gab—
"And King's should be discarding
Their undies plain and drab.

"What Britain needs is color
And cheery things today—
The King, for dear old England,
Should wear 'em very gay."

The Queen was seen to weaken—
Then came the royal voice
"Well, send 'em on approval
And let George make the choice!"

• • • •

A problem now shakes England
And puts it on the wrack
Will George decide to wear 'em
Or will he send 'em BACK?

Hailstorm Rages In Honolulu; 6 Die

6 Missing, Damage Mounts in Terrific Rain.

By the Associated Press.

Honolulu, Feb. 28.—A night of terrific rain, accompanied by hail, a rare phenomenon in this tropical setting, left six persons dead, six reported missing and a variety of damage on Oahu Island today.

About 6 inches of rain fell in downtown Honolulu during the late afternoon yesterday and last night. Dowsett Highlands, a residential section overlooking the city, had 14 inches.

At the Kamehameha School, 1¼ miles from the downtown district, the rain gauge registered 15.72 inches.

Some residents who never had seen hailstones refused at first to touch them, not knowing whether they were cold or hot.

United States Army troops, National Guardsmen and citizen volunteers turned out when the skies cleared today and helped police prevent possible looting, repair damage and remove debris.

Scouts to Test Archery Skill In D. C. Contest

Bow-and-Arrow Expert to Promote Tourney, Instruct Boys.

Marice L. V. Bates, an archery expert, has agreed to promote an archery contest among the troops of the District of Columbia Council. The contest leads to the archery merit badge. Any troop having eight Scouts interested in archery may request Mr. Bates to visit it for instruction. After the troop team is organized, elimination contests for a division team may be held and later a tournament will be conducted to select the winning division team and the best individual archer. Mr. Bates has a special archery merit badge list and may be consulted for information as to sources of supply. His address is 1316 Vermont avenue and phone North 7547.

Headquarters would like to hear of any Scouts of Scouters, present or past, who play the accordion. Please notify Assistant Executive Talley.

Courts of honor are scheduled Saturday at Christ Church, 620 G street southeast, and Saturday, March 16, at Powell Junior High School, Hiatt place and Lamont street northwest. Quarterly court of award will be held Saturday, March 23, at Powell Junior High School. Miscellaneous awards will be made at this court, including a scoutmaster's key to Scoutmaster Virgil Howard, a scouter's training award to District Commissioner Richard Rule and other training certificates.

Redskin Division.

The Redskin Division, District Commissioner W. H. McConnaughy, will hold its first-aid contest at the headquarters of Troop 58, in the Christian Church, at Fifteenth street and Kentucky avenue southeast, on March 9, at 7:30 p. m.

Recalling the invitation to Boy Scouts to hold their first national jamboree in Washington, D. C., August 21 to 30, President Roosevelt, in his message to Boy Scouts, February 8, Scouting's twenty-fifth anniversary, drew special attention to the manner of selection upon merit which characterizes the naming of jamboree members. Boys must have outstanding qualifications and must pass far-reaching tests as to health, safety training, camping experience and meet other important regulations before they will be chosen for the jamboree contingent in their particular community.

The first restriction in jamboree attendance arises from the fact that, despite the hundreds of thousands of Boy Scouts who want to attend, accommodations can be provided for only 30,000 Scouts and leaders. This has led to the important provision that the selection of jamboree Scouts be made on the basis of one jamboree member to each of the 30,000 troops in the United States.

Must Be First-Class Scout.

The boy must be a first-class scout in good standing, have served at least one full year as a registered scout and have had at least ten days' camping experience. He must be recommended by his scoutmaster, who must certify that the scout has an excellent record "for scout-like conduct in putting into practice the scout oath and laws and ideals of service and response to leadership." Higher scout officials pass upon this data and attach recommendations.

Each scout must present evidence that his physical condition is such as to justify the expectancy of a healthy and safe experience. He must have been inoculated against typhoid. There must be a report of whether the jamboree applieant is in physical condition to take part in a scout program of strenuous outdoor activities, including swimming.

Second-Class Awards.

To second class—Troop 201, Charles Beeler; Troop 221, Richard Warner, Pete Vial, William Bragg, Romer Dudley; Troop 225, Harold Brill; Troop 235, Paul Harrison; Troop 238, Roger Miller.

Qualified for merit badges: Troop 8, Brook White, handicraft; Finley Wright, civics, safety. Troop 200, James Ward, pathfinding and personal health; Philip Kromas, farm home and its planning. Troop 201, Fillmore Burton, swimming, public health and life saving; William White, bird study, pioneering; Vernon McKinstry, public health, safety and leathercraft. Troop 225, Angus McDonald, first aid, bird study and safety; William Fill, first aid, safety, bird study; William Ball, bird study, public health and first aid to animals. Troop 235, Richard Lee, bookbinding; William Atwater, signaling; first aid to animals, mechanical drawing; Robert McGrath, public health and reading; Edward Atwater, pathfinding, first aid to animals. Troop 238, Roland Roby, plumbing, first aid; Robert Mosley, first aid; Lester Wells, handicraft; Elmer Wells, handicraft. Troop 201, Robert Dorn, bookbinding and metal work. Troop 225, William Ferris, bookbinding. Troop 200, James Barry, farm home and planning. Troop 225, Carey Singleton, safety; Norman Enzor, handicraft, pathfinding and personal health.

Buying Middie Liquor Laid to Marylander

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Annapolis, Md., Feb. 28.—Arrested on a charge of obtaining whisky for a midshipman of the Naval Academy, Sulveless Brown, colored, was held for action of the Anne Arundel County grand jury, following a hearing before Police Justice Thomas G. Basil today.

Patrolman Norman Finkle, who made the arrest, said he saw the Negro accept money from an unidentified midshipman and purchase the liquor in a local drug store.

All Hotels Here Approve a Ban On Hidden Bar

Beiter Says Palmisano Has Indorsed Amendments to His Bill.

Hotel managers are unanimously in favor of abolishing the "hidden bar" in the District, a survey conducted by Representative Alfred F. Beiter (Democrat), of New York, disclosed yesterday.

Responses to a questionnaire, Beiter said, were favorable to all amendments set forth in a bill he introduced last week. One manager objected to one feature, and that was the filing of menu lists, showing the ingredients used for all mixed drinks, with the Alcholic Beverage Board.

Beiter said that Representative Palmisano (Democrat), of Maryland, chairman of the sub-committee that will consider his bill, has indorsed the amendments and promised early hearings.

The sub-committee of the House District Committee will at the same time consider the Dirksen liquor law amendments, one of which is also intended to abolish the hidden bar but by a different method.

Dirksen's bill simply states: "All alcoholic beverages offered for sale or sold by the holder of such (retail) license shall be displayed and dispensed in full sight."

Under Beiter's measure there would be a ban on curtains, stalls, partitions, stained glass, or any other obstacle that would prevent a customer from seeing how his drink is mixed and whether the glass is clean.

Another amendment which was indorsed by the hotel managers was the proposal that liquor or wines be sold for consumption on the premises after 1 o'clock Sunday afternoons.

Both bills would prohibit importation of more than a case of spirits by a nondealer without payment of District taxes.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Westminster, Md., Feb. 28.—Willard Hawkins, of New Windsor, was elected president of the Young Republican League of Carroll County, at a meeting here last night.

Plans were discussed for a banquet probably in April, in honor of Walter Rudy, of Mount Airy, who has been recommended by Gov. Harry Nice for the position of commissioner of motor vehicles. Preliminary arrangements will be in charge of Ray Hook, Sherman Flanagan, Westminster, and Guy Babylon, Wakefield.

Court Assumes Ballot Custody In Montgomery

'Spoiled, Rejected, Unused' Packets Leave Keeping of County Clerk.

The packets of "spoiled, rejected and unused" ballots which have been in the custody of F. Byrne Austin, clerk to the Montgomery County Board of Election Supervisors since the November 6 election, were handed over to the custody of Clayton K. Watkins, clerk of the county circuit court, yesterday.

The ballots had been turned into the office of Austin at the courthouse by election judges and not placed in the ballot boxes as prescribed by law, he testified at the three-day hearing on the petition for recount of Dr. Llewellyn Jordan and John L. Imirie, Democrats, who are seeking to unseat Joseph A. Cantrel and Walter M. Magruder, Fusionists, elected to the Maryland House of Delegates.

Judge Donald A. DeLashmutt, who presided at the hearing, ordered that they be placed in the custody of Watkins, who has custody of all other ballot boxes and keys used in the election. Watkins refused to accept custody when Austin offered them to him just after the election, it was testified, but an informal opinion by Judge Charles W. Woodward indicated it would be legal for him to accept them.

The packets were sealed and locked up in the presence of counsel for both sides yesterday.

Dr. Jordan said that if no other result comes from the hearings and contest he believes they at least will have forced attention on the need for voting machines. The doctor declared he felt certain that the county would vote with machines in the next election.

Man Found Dead In Woods Identified

Papers Indicate Name Was Benjamin Price.

The body of a man, tentatively identified as Benjamin Price, about 45, was found yesterday in a wooded patch off the Washington-Baltimore boulevard at Riverdale.

A passerby noticed the blanket-covered form and sought to arouse the man. When this failed, the Prince Georges County Rescue Squad was called and a physician pronounced the man dead, apparently of natural causes.

He apparently was a hitch-hiker, carrying the blanket and a small valise. The valise was used for a pillow. Papers were found indicating he was Price, who had lived in the Northeast section of Washington for a short time and in Tennessee. The body is held in the Hyattsville undertaking establishment pending positive identification and location of relatives.

Other officers named are: Vice president, John German; financial secretary, Edward Wintermyer; recording secretary, H. Wilson; treasurer, L. B. Carter; chief, R. J. Snyder; assistant chief, Robert Klosterman; trustee, J. W. Ritchie, and sergeant at arms, J. W. Crowe.

Utley Deranged, Alienists State At Murder Trial

Defendant Put in Class of Those Only 'Partly Responsible.'

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, Feb. 28.—Several defense alienists today placed Morris T. Utley in a class for those only "partially responsible" for their actions in testifying at his trial concerning his ailments and complaints during the past several years.

Utley was on trial in criminal court on a charge of slaying Charles Schimunek, a cake salesman, during the holdup of a chain store here two weeks ago. Utley was returned here for trial after his capture in Lancaster, Pa.

Dr. William H. Barker, assistant resident physician on the staff of the Johns Hopkins Hospital, told of the defendant's repeated complaints of constant severe headaches and reports of several medical examinations in unsuccessful attempts to trace the cause of the ailment.

While the physician said Utley had used headache tablets to excess, Dr. Barker declined to answer questions as to the possible effects of certain ingredients of the tablets.

Dr. Charles E. Holderby, physician at the Eastern State Hospital, an institution for mental cases at Williamsport, Va., asserted that from his examination, he has concluded that Utley is "definitely mentally deficient."

Dr. Holderby, when asked if the man would know the difference between right and wrong, asserted, "I don't think he would, in the abstract."

William J. Morgan, Utley's father-in-law, from Lancaster, Pa., described the defendant's actions and mannerisms, but his view that Utley was "despondent, melancholy and overactive" was ordered stricken out on the grounds it was an expression of opinion.

Utley went on trial yesterday, and the prosecution completed its case by offering into evidence a statement described as Utley's confession and a request for a verdict of first-degree murder.

Winchester Observes Rotary Anniversary

Winchester, Va., Feb. 28.—The Winchester Rotary Club observed the thirtieth anniversary of Rotary International here tonight with an informal ladies' night program, featured by a humorous address by Henry Holzaffel, jr., of Baltimore.

D. J. Howard presided at the session, which was attended by approximately 80 persons. The local club was founded by Fred E. Clerk 14 years ago. Since its organization it has taken an outstanding part in civic affairs.

Seven Seeking To Be Selected As Postmaster

Commission Lists Those in Field for Job at Fredericksburg.

There are seven applicants for appointment as postmaster at Fredericksburg, Va., the Civil Service Commission announced yesterday. The deadline for filing was February 26. The seven are: Gunyon M. Harrison, Robert J. Payne, Charles H. Hurkamp, Horace F. Crismond, Mason H. Willis, Oliver M. Armstrong and Edgar Wilson Dare.

The commission said inquiries to business men and officials at Fredericksburg regarding the fitness of the applicants would go out from Washington within 60 days.

After a study of the answers and interviewing of the applicants by Federal investigators, the commission will certify to the Postoffice Department three eligibles for appointment.

From the eligibles Representative Bland, of Newport News, whose district includes Fredericksburg, will recommend on appointee.

Six appointments to postmasterships in Virginia were included in a lengthy list of nominations sent to the Senate yesterday by President Roosevelt. They were:

Amherst, Rosalie H. Mahone; Appomattox, E. LeRroy Smith; Cartersville, Lavone A. Baker; Cleveland, Dewey Arrington; Dillwyn, Robert B. Spencer; Fort Defiance, James F. Walker.

Salisbury Deal To Buy Sewers Ends Litigation

Long Court Battle Halted by Plan to Purchase Firm's Property.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Salisbury, Md., Feb. 28.—A nine-year court battle, which three times went to the Maryland Court of Appeals, was ended today with the announcement by the mayor and council that the city will purchase the property of the Camden Sewer Co.

The Camden Co., organized in 1902 to construct sewers in that section of the city which then was a new residential development, has been in litigation with the city over the purchase and price of the company's property since 1926. At that time the city was installing new sewers and a water system and went into court to exercise an option to purchase the company's sewers.

An agreement could not be reached upon the price the city was to pay, and ultimately the mayor and council abandoned plans to make the Camden sewers a part of the city-wide system.

The company then sought a court order compelling the city to complete the transaction on the grounds that the municipality in its original court action had given notice it was exercising the option to buy.

Three times the lower court rendered decisions favorable to the city and as many times, was reversed by the Court of Appeals. The case was awaiting new trial upon instructions from the Appellate Court when the mayor and council today announced conclusion of the litigation. A statement by the officials said court instructions were being followed in the purchase of the property and further delay was costing the city $6 a day in interest charges.

The county delegation in the General Assembly will be requested to seek legislative authority for a $30,000 bond issue, approximately $23,000 to be used in the purchase and the remainder to defray the cost of connecting the lines with the city's present system.

Farmers Will Hear Address by Dr. Darrow Tomorrow.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Crisfield, Md., Feb. 28.—Spring being near, lower Somerset County farmers are talking about their 1935 strawberry acreage. They will meet at Marion Station tomorrow afternoon.

County Agent C. Z. Keller has arranged to have Dr. George M. Darrow, of the United States Department of Agriculture, give an illustrated talk on the Blakemore variety of strawberries. Dr. Darrow will discuss spacing of plants and fertilization. Dr. Darrow is the originator of the Blakemore variety.

A representative of the Maryland Department of Markets also will speak.

Of the 9,000 acres of the Blakemore variety grown in the United States last year, records show, more than one-third were grown in Maryland.

Miss Eleanor Heller (P), Legal Division, Treasury, will lead the George Washington University interfraternity prom tonight at the Willard with James Haley, Washington Quartermaster Depot, War, who is social chairman of the prom.

By Morgan Baker.

IN testifying before the special committee of the House Civil Service Committee on the Sirovich bill, John B. Switzer, chief clerk and personnel officer of Interstate Commerce Commission, declared he favored the classification proposed by the bill, optional retirement at 55 and end of the present system of efficiency ratings.

BAKER.

He said he favored reforms in two respects surpassing those provided by the bill, for he felt that emergency agency employes should take competitive examinations to obtain civil service status, and that persons involuntarily retired at early ages should receive larger annuities than they now obtain.

The noncompetitive plan seems best to bring the emergency agency employes under civil service. We have found this to be the opinion of employe leaders, members of Congress and departmental executives. Representative William I. Sirovich, chairman of the special committee, expressed this view, pointing out that in the past the "blanketing" process has been used, with the result that employes never feel secure because they can be "unblanketed" just as easily.

On the other hand, Dr. Sirovich stresses, competitive examinations would tax the resources of the Civil Service Commission unduly. In addition, Mr. Switzer and other proponents of the competitive plan are reminded, such a plan would almost totally disrupt the New Deal agencies by causing a wholesale upset in personnel. It has been estimated that an appropriation of several million dollars, employment of an added staff at Civil Service Commission and about a year's time would be required to handle the competitive examinations for approximately 100,000 persons already employed in the affected agencies—to say nothing of the additional hundreds of thousands of persons throughout the country who would stampede for the jobs.

Due to the death of T. A. O'Brien, chief clerk, Adjutant General's Office, War, the A. G. O. Lodge, No. 2, American Federation of Government Employes, has postponed its dance to March 9. It was scheduled for last night at the Willard.

HEADED by the Secretary of Agriculture and Mrs. Henry A. Wallace, members and friends of the Bureau of Biological Survey attended in large numbers the banquet and dance at Hotel Roosevelt in celebration of the fiftieth aniversary of the founding of the bureau.

In addition to a good representation of the present employes, the occasion proved to be a reunion of many who were connected with survey in its early days. Included in this class were Dr. C. Hart Merriam, first chief of the bureau, and Mrs. Merriam, who before her marriage was Dr. Merriam's secretary; Vernon Bailey and Dr. T. S. Palmer, retired biologists, who each served the bureau for about 45 years; Edward A. Preble, naturalist, who has been with the Survey since 1892; Arthur H. Howell, since 1895, and Dr. Hartley H. T. Jackson, since 1910.

Walter C. Henderson, associate chief, was toastmaster, the other speakers being Secretary Wallace, Dr. Merriam, J. N. "Ding" Darling, present chief, and Representative A. Willis Robertson, chairman of the House Special Committee on Conservation of Wild Life.

Two members of the Survey conspicuously absent from the celebration were Mrs. Viola S. Snyder and Miss May Thacher Cooke, both of the Division of Wild Life Research, who are recovering from serious operations in local hospitals.

Hugh G. Grant, Division of Western European Affairs, State Department, urges all Alabamans in Government service to make early reservations for the banquet, reception and ball in honor of Gov. and Mrs. Bibb Graves March 8 at the Willard, under auspices of the Alabama State Society, of which he is president.

Three New Little AAA's.

Crop control is the rule at AAA, but there seems to be no curtailment of the baby crop. Two employes in Press Section, occupying adjoining desks, have just become fathers. The vital statistics are:

Press Section has no monopoly, as we found an 8-pound boy was born to Mr. and Mrs. William E. Byrd, jr., February 23; christened William E., 3d. Mr. Byrd is assistant to Administrator Chester C. Davis.

Appointment of Robert M. Catherine as director of mortgage insurance is announced by James A. Moffett, Federal Housing Administrator.

Diary Guest Tickets.

IF (F), (P) or (C) follows your name in this column, call in person on the Federal Diary editor today. You will receive tickets to Loew's Fox (stage, Dave Appollon and his "International Varieties;" screen, Janet Gaynor and Warner Baxter in "One More Spring"); or to Loew's Palace (Ronald Colman, Loretta Young and cast of 5,000 in "Clive of India"); or to Loew's Columbia (Warner Oland in "Charlie Chan in Paris").

The Labor Advisory Board will give a dance tomorrow night at Hay-Adams House with many celebrities in the labor world attending, including Francis J. Gorman, first international president of the United Textile Workers of America; William F. Kelly, second president; Dr. A. Howard Myers, executive director of the Labor Advisory Board, and Solomon Barkin, assistant executive director. Arrangements are under direction of Callan B. Duffy (F), of the board.

Federal Bridge League.

The Bureau of Standards' team, the Phychems, climbed to within there boards of the leading Execs in this week's session of the Federal Bridge League. The Phychems have one leg on the team trophy, and are again bidding for an opportunity in the play-off.

Franklin Work On Relief Jobs Will Be Halted

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Waynesboro, Pa., Feb. 28.—Work on practically all relief projects in Franklin County today was ordered suspended as of March 2, 9, 16 and 23, in a letter from the State Emergency Relief Board in Harrisburg.

The largest project in the county, the Waynesboro sewer construction, was ordered discontinued March 9. The Waynesboro Airport job will be discontinued Saturday.

Shortage of funds was given as the cause by E. R. Young, chief engineer, in Harrisburg.

Heavy curtailment in the professional and nonmanual program was ordered as of Saturday. Also, it is required that nonrelief workers be suspended from projects. Where such removal will handicap the operation of the project, the order is to shut down completely. Under this classification are the housing project, registration of soldiers' graves, forest analysis and the engineering survey in Chambersburg.

There was nothing in the order to indicate whether the halt will be only temporary. Officials said resumption of work probably will depend upon Federal funds and those to be provided by the State Legislature.

The last project to be discontinued will be the sewage disposal plant in Waynesboro, March 23.

Wine Group Asks 'Chance' in Virginia

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Feb. 28.—The ABC Board was requested today to give wine a "fair chance" in Virginia by Bernard P. Chamberlain, of Charlottesville, president of the Monticello Grape Growers Cooperative Association.

The request was made at a conference here with members of the board.

Chamberlain said "light wine is no more an intoxicating liquor than is beer or buttermilk or coffee or tea; it is a food to be used as an accompaniment of other food at regular meals."

Chamberlain headed a delegation of members of the Monticello association in urging the board to eliminate its profit on wines, except a small gross profit to meet overhead charges, for a period of at least six months to give wine a "fair opportunity" to become popular in Virginia.

Preferred Stock To Be Exchanged

Commercial Credit Board to Meet March 27.

Baltimore, Feb. 28 (AP).—The board of directors of the Commercial Credit Co. today called a special meeting of its stockholders here March 27 to consider a plan to retire all of the outstanding classes of preferred stock through an exchange offer.

A. E. Duncan, chairman of the board, said the stockholders will be asked, in order to simplify the capital structure of the company, to consider amendments to the company's certificate of incorporation to provide for a new convertible preferred stock.

Duncan said the exact basis of the proposed exchange offer and the dividend rate on the new convertible stock, which will not exceed 5½ per cent per annum, will not be determined by the board until shortly before the special meeting.

The directors, at today's meeting, also declared the regular quarterly dividends on the 6½ and 7 per cent first preferred, 8 per cent class B preferred and the $3 class A convertible stocks and a common dividend of 50 cents a share, all payable March 30 to stockholders of record as of the close of business March 11.

Gingham Club Ready to Offer Novel Program

Gala Anniversary Fete at Childs to Begin on Wednesday.

By Kay Ware.

It all started with a little ad in the paper, whereupon a flock of Washington socialites flocked to Childs Gingham Club for try-outs Why? Because the Gingham Club wanted to celebrate its anniversary in a new way.

Next Wednesday, you'll see changes in entertainment. Five of the girls will appear masked, to sing with Jimmy Santmeyer's orchestra. Perhaps you'll know some of them—at least will recognize their noses and mouths, since their eyes will be covered with neat strips of black satin.

In addition, "The Stylist," a male singing, playing trio will come down from New York for an indefinite stay. These boys, so we're told, remind one of Paul Whiteman's Rhythm Boys.

Of course, final plans are still in progress. There'll be more Gingham Club news later.

An Argentine whip dance is the high spot of the Shoreham's floor show. The Gypsy Sister team, Asya Kaz and Thalia Zanou show what happens when there's jealousy over a man in the audience, and they use a 14-foot whip to do it. Another of their numbers is a Spanish heel bit. In this they wear authentic costumes of old Spain.

Talbert Haslett, barytone from New York's Casino de Paree, finds most requests are for "Chloe" and "Wagon Wheels." Faye and Wellington feature the Continental in a special arrangement by Barnee. Don Lee and Louise present tangoes, waltzes and a Mardi Gras number.

Segovia the Spanish guitarist, appeared at the Madrillon the other night. He wore the typical black velvet vest, trimmed with bright silver buttons.

Had lunch the other day at the Washington Hotel taproom. It's a fine, restful place with amusing caricatures against gold backgrounds on the walls. Best of all, it's big and red and brown, with soft lights and dark wooden tables.

But the high moment of the hour was a special fruit salad, a plate containing nine—no less—varieties of fruit, all fresh and delicious. They were, if memory doesn't fail, apples, pears, dark blue grapes, orange and pink grapefruit segments, melon balls, sliced banana, a neat pile of rosy strawberries, all laid around a circle of fresh pineapple topped with cottage cheese.

It was a sublime dish.

Notice, the next time you go to the Hamilton's Alexander Room, that the violinist plays with the mute. A fine idea, since it supplies plenty of "sweet music," but doesn't prevent you from conversing. Incidentally, the time we were there the violinist was doing "shadow practicing" between numbers. It turned out to be Bach's Preludium. He had to have it memorized before the next day.

The pianist is very good. These two make up a musical unit that has fine points, both as a background to a cocktail, and music for listening.

Casino Russe presents Aida Luciano, whose 4 feet 11 inches seems hardly adequate for her whirlwind of interpretative Spanish dances and songs. Felix Amstet and orchestra furnish music for dancing.

Lotus' specialty dancers include Helen O'Brien with a tap routine; Henrietta Lorraine, whose kicks are high and agile; Adrienne Carroll and Rosemary Mason, both with tap and toe numbers. Grace Hart is the specialty singer.

A chorus is added to the array.

Jockey's floor show: Two eccentric dancers, Al Evans and Bill Williams; Kitty Simons, blues singer; Maxine Moore, with tap dances, and Charley King, hill-billy. Music by Pete Pollet and boys.

If you've a mind for previews or hearings, drop into the Bamboo Room and hear Johnny Slaughter and his orchestra play hit songs from Bing Crosby's new film, "Mississippi." Very Southern in atmosphere. You'll have to follow through and order a mint julep.

The Lady in Overalls

Reception Honors Don Jaime Bridal

Royalty Flocks to Roman Event; Longs Guests.

By the Associated Press.

Rome, Feb. 28.—A glamorous royal reception in honor of the marriage, March 4, of Mlle. de Dampierre, attractive American-French girl, and Don Jaimie, tall, young son of the former King of Spain, was given tonight by the mother of the bride-to-be, Donna Vittoria Ruspeli, daughter of the former Josephine Curtis, of Boston.

More than 2,000 persons, including much of the royalty and nobility of Spain, France and Italy and many Americans, thronged the beautiful old Palazzo Poggio Suasa in the heart of Rome to pay honor to the couple.

Among the guests, in addition to the royal family of Spain, were the Crown Prince and Princess of Italy, former Grand Duke Dimitri, of Russia; Queen Amelie, of Portugal, and numbers of other "royal highnesses."

United States Ambassador and Mrs. Breckinridge Long, of St. Louis; Mr. and Mrs. Murray Hoffman, of New York; Mr. and Mrs. Dwight Harris, of New York; the Marchioness of Huntley, formerly Mrs. James McDonald, of Cincinnati, and her American son, Capt. Arthur B. Campbell, and Sir Holman C. Myles, now an American citizen, of Los Angeles, were among the Americans present.

Florida Bank Bandits Free Kidnaped Cashier

Haines City, Fla., Feb. 28 (AP).—Three unmasked men who robbed the State Bank of Haines City of $2,500 and kidnaped H. B. Angle, cashier, today released Angle at Winter Park about three hours after the holdup.

Joe Smith, a customer, also was taken with the bandits as they fled from the scene, but he was released on the outskirts.

On the Air Today

By Katherine Smith.

WOR's been sending in sheafs of material concerning the formal inauguration of its new 50,000 watt transmitter at Carteret, N. J. The President will press a telegraphic key that will start the formalities, Mayor LaGuardia of New York is expected to speak, guest stars are Eddie Cantor, Stoopnagle and Budd, Rudy Vallee, Jack Benny, Kate Smith and many others.

From 8 to 11 p. m. on Monday you can get this program, on 710 kilocycles. Other dedicatory programs come through at 12:30 p. m., 3:30 p. m., 11 p. m. and 12:30 p. m.

Correction of yesterday's column: "World Builder," presented by George Washington University students, will be heard Saturday at 7:15 p. m., WMAL, instead of time previously given.

Speeches today:

Mrs. William H. Pouch, on WJSV, 1 p. m., tells you of the educational activities of the D. A. R.

Mrs. Roosevelt speaks on "Is the Woman's Place in the Home?"

Miss Mary Fokahr is heard on WOL's Ruth Hubbard program, 11:15 a. m.

"The Caste System in India" is the topic of the talk by SwamiVividishananda. WOL, 1:15 p. m.

THE March of Time high-lights the Administration setback on the work-relief bill, the return to New York of the play, "Green Pastures," and the result of the prosperity thrust upon the honest sandwich man who returned $42,000 worth of lost securities. WJSV, 9 p. m.

Bea Lillie can't seem to make up her mind. Was scheduled to do "David Copperfield," now the release says she's confronted with the problem of taking care of a small nephew. Also, she'll pretend to be a bad rifle shot, hardly fair, since she's an expert markswoman. On WMAL, 9 p. m.

Maybe she postponed "David Copperfield" to see how Joe Penner does it Sunday.

Amateur night, broadcast from the stage of the Howard Theater, brings you Harlem via WOL. This show begins a new weekly series to be heard on this station at 9 p. m.

"The O'Flynn" makes its final appearance tonight, and the traditional curtain call will bring you the "bows" of the members of the cast. On WJSV, 10:30 p. m.

Benay Venuta, a golden-haired young singer, makes her debut for C. B. S. today at 3 p. m., WJSV. She will present a series of programs to be heard each Friday. Was born in San Francisco, is 5 feet 7½ inches tall, weighs 138 pounds, has, in addition to the blonde hair, gray-blue eyes.

MUSICAL high spots:

The Minneapolis Symphony inaugurates a new series of weekly broadcasts on WJSV, 3:15 p. m. Paul Le May, assistant director, conducts the following program: Overture from Lalo's "Roi d'Oys," symphony in B flat major, by Ernest Chausson; Mozart's "Kleine Nacht Musik" and Chaikovski's "Romeo and Juliet" overture.

Ravel's "Bolero," in vocal and instrumental arrangement, is played and sung by Frank Black's orchestra and chorus of 25 voices. No lyrics are used; voices are employed as musical instruments.

Dr. Damrosch, on the NBC Music Appreciation Hour, WMAL, 11 a. m., includes performance and discussion of two movements of Beethoven's Symphony No. 8 and selections from Wagner's "Nibelungen Ring," music dramas.

Red Nichols is heard locally tonight on WMAL, 11:30 p. m., from the Willard, where he is playing for the G. W. U. interfraternity prom.

The Man-Tilla Players, who were pushed off the air last Saturday, go on tonight in a one-act play by Theodore Tiller, "Thirty Minutes to Go." Give it a dial twist. It ought to be good. WMAL, 10:30 p. m.

Broadway

By Ed Sullivan

The Whole Town's Talking.

NOW THAT Lily Pons, Gladys Swarthout and Helen Jepson, three Metropolitan stars, have proved what they could do with "Minnie the Moocher," a song heretofore confined to the Harlem precincts of Cab Calloway, I suggest that the financially harassed directors of the Metropolitan could get themselves out of the red by liberalizing their schedule for 1935-1936.

Instead of opening the next winter schedule with "Aida," it would be better showmanship if the Met opened with "Hot Lips." I do not know how Mme. Marie Jeritza is on what Tin Pan Alley calls "hot licks," but her artistic background is assurance that her version of "Hot Lips" would be authentic. Supported by such hi-de-hi and ho-de-ho specialists as Richard Crooks, Frederick Jagel, Rose Bampton and perhaps Lucrezia Bori, I'm positive that Jeritza would make the grade.

Second on the operatic schedule should be "Tony's Wife," with Mme. Schumann-Heink singing the role of the frau, and Tony Wons as her Tony. The opera "Lohengrin," which calls for a white swan, could be artistically enriched by the substitution of Joe Penner and his duck in place of Giovanni Martinelli.

"I'll Be Glad When You're Dead, You Rascal You" would jam the Metropolitan. This French tragic grand opera has never been done in this country. It had its premiere at La Scala when the African barytone, Louis Armstrong, introduced it. If the Met would cast this properly, with John Charles Thomas interpreting the Rascal, and with Marion Talley, Lotte Lehman, Milton Berle, Tito Schipa and Wheeler and Woolsey in support, it would double the box-office receipts of such trite offerings as "Faust," or "Barber of Seville."

Grace Moore singing the leading role in "Having a Heat Wave," Lawrence Tibbett singing "It Don't Mean a Thing If You Ain't Got That Swing," and Rosa Ponselle interpreting "I Can't Give You Anything but Love, Baby," would pulmotor the Metropolitan.

As an opera lover, I pass along these suggestions with no thought of profit. The directors of the Met can take 'em or leave 'em, gratis.

Georgie Jessel just telephoned from Palm Beach. I reprint his conversation: "Hello, Ed, this is George Jessel. I want you to do me an important favor, not for myself, but for my mother. As you probably know, that fellow who boasts that he never mentions a married man or woman in his column has been trying to embarrass my wife and myself. It must be an obsession with him. On Monday, he reported again, erroneously, that we had a fist fight.

"Norma and I don't care about ourselves. We are so deeply in love that nothing can affect us. However, Ed, my mother is very sick. The neighbors quite naturally rush to her every time a silly line appears, and she becomes quite upset over it, as mothers do. The doctor just called me on the long-distance phone and said that another shock like this might have grave consequences.

"Will you please tell the world that she and I are very happy and very much in love. I'll appreciate it for my mother's sake."

Magicians Most Honest People In the World, Magician States

Who are the most honest people in the world? According to one young man who is an expert in deceit, the answer is—magicians.

Melbourne Christopher showed his even white teeth in a broad collegiate grin. "We magicians know we can short change, rob, trick people by means of our knowledge of deceit," he said. "But we must have overdeveloped consciences, because we never do. Even in the trick of the burning dollar bill—"

This is the one in which the donor always gets the same dollar back. Whether or not a real dollar burns is another matter—and an expensive one for the conjurer—but the serial numbers prove it to be identical. Christopher's pulling this one on Madrillon patrons this week, where he adds amazement to the floor show.

Men want magic they can see; women want magic they can't, he believes. "Men live in the present," he said, "women in the future. Women want to be told about their love affairs—they go for the mentalists who tell them they'll marry a tall, handsome brunette. But people as a whole are still willing to believe in miracles, they think a magician is vested with supernatural powers. They want to believe it."

How does a mentalist get his facts, then? "By detection— and deception," says Mr. Christopher. "Here's a trick. Write the name of a friend on this slip of paper while I turn away. Fold it twice—that's right—so I can't see the name. Now I'll tear the paper into bits into the ashtray. Have you a match? Will you light the little bonfire? Now there is nothing but ashes. I'll dust the ash on the palm of my hand—you're concentrating on the face of your friend?—I see the letters H . . . A . . ."

That's enough. We're convinced. There are miracles.

Hawks Plans Speed Hop, New York to Argentina

New York, Feb. 28 (AP).—Plans for a flight to Santiago, Chile and Buenos Aires, Argentina, were disclosed tonight by Frank Hawks, speed flier. He said he would take off from Floyd Bennett Airport at 2 a. m. (E. S. T.) Friday.

It was said at the airport that Hawks would attempt to set new records on the flight. His first stop will be Havana, thence to the Panama Airport in the Canal Zone. Hawks hopes to be in Buenos Aires by Sunday.

THREE MEN AND DIANA

By KATHLEEN NORRIS

• Nothing mattered to Diana except that Bruce didn't return her love.

"People don't die of this, you fool!" she told herself. She could not breathe; she could not endure the agony of it.

Everything said "Bruce" to her. Somehow the days followed one another—but there was no relief. How will it end?

For the answer, read "Three Men and Diana," which

New Territory To Be Visited By Hiking Club

Trip Will Take Group to Dead and Turkey Runs and Old Quarry.

By Robert Shosteck.

For most of the Wanderbirds, the trip planned for Sunday along Dead Run and Turkey Run will be through new territory, the chief points of interest being the old soapstone quarry above Snake Hollow and the scenic falls and rapids of Dead Run near the Potomac. Amateur sculptors are advised to bring along saws or hatchets to cut off the easily-worked rock at the quarry.

Readers of the Washington Post and club members planning to go on this five-mile trip will meet in front of the Post Building at 10 a. m. for the bus ride to Dead Run, on the Leesburg road, the start of the hike. The fare will be 35 cents for the round trip and reservations must be made at Nat. 4200 before 9 a. m. Sunday. Bring lunch and a cup for coffee.

From the road the trail follows the right bank of Dead Run past rolling meadows and pasture. About one-half mile down, the run abruptly enters a gorge and flows turbulently over boulders and rocks. The steep slopes are densely covered with mountain laurel and hardwoods as far as the mouth, where the run drops nearly 50 feet over a short series of rapids. To the left of this minature falls is a fine spring near an abandoned sawmill road which leads to the highway.

Turkey Run, our first goal, is about a mile downstream. The trail is open and easy most of the way, but one can expect short stretches of rocky terrain and places where the trail is overgrown. This run presents the same scenic features as Dead Run, though the falls are not as spectacular. We cross this stream and continue along the riverside trail for a short distance to a spring where the group can lunch.

The old soapstone quarry is about one-half a mile beyond the spring. The cut is about 150 yards from the river up a small ravine. The ruins of the old sawing mill and machinery are still visible at the base of the hill. There is an abundance of soapstone left in the quarry and one can find samples which can be carved with a knife like chalk.

Snake Hollow is an interesting ravine about one-half a mile below the quarry. An old sawmill road leads through the woods to the Leesburg road. A large, well-protected spring is to be found a short distance up the hollow. An alternate route to the pike from the quarry is along a steep trail uphill to Reid's farm, thence along the Leiter road to the Leesburg road. Dr. Ulke recommends the latter route. A campfire will be made on a promontory overlooking the river and after coffee the hikers will follow the dirt road for nearly a mile to the buses on the Leesburg road. Club emblems and the spring hike calendars will be distributed on this trip.

INFLATION AHEAD!
What to Do About It

W. M. Kiplinger

Author of INFLATION AHEAD!—WHAT TO DO ABOUT IT. Editor and publisher of the famous Kiplinger Washington Letters for 15 years. Shrewd, courageous, accurate predictor of trends and reporter of government in its practical effects on business, whose published forecasts are followed eagerly by his large and important clientele; confidante of Washington officialdom through several administrations.

Distinguished for simple, concise presentations of complicated subjects in easy-to-understand language; unbiased, dispassionate, constructive critic of government policies, who calls spades spades; frequent contributor to leading magazines.

HE Has Been RIGHT in the Past... and Well Ahead of Time...with These Important Predictions On:

Government centralized control of banking and credit, predicted two years ago.

The precarious banking situation, months before the collapse of 1933.

The more-than-seasonal business decline, spring to summer, 1933, at a time when most observers were predicting only the usual summer slack.

Devaluation of the dollar, indicated as probable eight months ahead.

The low point of the depression.

Spectacular spurt, summer of 1933, and the collapse.

Rise of NRA, the changes, and decline.

Decline of interest rates, more than a year ahead.

Reorganization of farm mortgage lending policies.

Levels of unemployment, six months ahead.

Rise of silver prices.

On price fixing of agricultural products, months ahead. On all AAA policies.

The fate of scores of important bills in Congress, indicated accurately months in advance,—a consistent record for many years.

Frederick Shelton

who assisted Mr. Kiplinger in the preparation of this book. For the past 14 years an analyst of governmental and business trends. Thoroughly grounded in politics and economics. Lawyer. Seasoned observer. Always sound, cool. Always well-balanced in his judgments.

Has wide reputation among Washington technicians for his objective attitude on issues when they are at their most heated stages, and for his ability to look beyond the immediate present. Knows usually "how things will wash out."

INFLATION is now definitely under way. Not because of the Supreme Court's gold decision. Not despite it. But because of a constantly increasing number of causes, circumstances, conditions, and events. In the steady march toward Inflation the gold decision is merely one of the latest incidents. Among sophisticated observers of trends, doubts as to the inevitable Inflation did not exist even before the decision was rendered. Even if it had been "unfavorable" to the Government it would not have prevented Inflation. New routes would have been found anyway, new channels cut.

To learn exactly how to protect yourself against Inflation, and even to turn it to your advantage, read this entirely new book just off the press—"INFLATION AHEAD!—WHAT TO DO ABOUT IT." This is not a general textbook of economic theories. It is a specific guide for every individual who either earns a salary or draws an income from investment—for business men, lawyers, doctors, teachers, farmers, trustees or investors. It is in the practical form of 25 semi-personal letters covering every angle of the subject—written in simple language by W. M. Kiplinger and Frederick Shelton.

This book is entirely hardboiled. It wastes no time arguing whetrer Inflation is good or bad. It tells what WILL be—not what should be. These 25 letters face reality and tell you what to do now.

Publisher's Note:

We are book publishers solely. Neither the authors nor we are in any way connected with the selling or buying or promotion of securities or commodities. Nor are we interested in either furthering or retarding Inflation, or in the promotion of any economic doctrines. We publish this book because it is timely, because Mr. Kiplinger's and Mr. Shelton's analyses of the prospects of Inflation are authoritative, completely disinterested, able, and therefore important to the public. THIS NEW BOOK TELLS

How to Protect Yourself Against Inflation

—And Turn It To YOUR Advantage

This book answers the following questions, and hundreds of others, which you will have to face during the coming weeks and months. It tells what to do about Inflation, what not to do, what to look out for.

What will Inflation mean to you personally — based on your present income, business, age, savings, taxes, debts, insurance, and investments?

How will it affect your earnings—whether you are the owner of a business, an executive, or an employee?

Will you be safer in building a home or in renting one—and should you try to get a long or short term lease?

Should you contract for a new car or any other sizable purchase on installment payments?

Is your income within the range of those which will suffer most, unless you start planning now to "beat Inflation"?

Will your money now be any safer in Government Bonds than in savings banks or building and loan associations?

Why is it that while Inflation may have comparatively little effect upon the insurance companies, it may seriously affect your own insurance policies?

Which is the best hedge against Inflation — stocks, bonds, commodities, or real estate?

Compared with the experiences of other countries — such as the crises leading to the revaluation of the franc and the German paper-mark catastrophe — what chances have we to control, hedge, limit, or confine our own Inflation?

Why is the purchase of Commodities not the best protection against Inflation for the average individual?

How is the usual process of Inflation after depressions being further accelerated by present Governmental policies, plans and actions?

Is this a good time to start or expand a business — or should you wait?

Will interest rates continue to go lower?

Is it really true that bond prices will go down if stock prices go up?

What new factors should you now consider before deciding what to do about life insurance or annuities?

In what specific ways can you take advantage of Inflation in order to offset losses and the inevitable increased taxation?

Exactly what should the "ordinary business man" do about Inflation?

What will the Government's new attitude toward holding companies mean to stockholders during the Inflation period?

When may you expect to feel the peak-effects of Inflation on business volume, credit expansion, investments, taxes, living costs?

How should you plan now to turn Inflation to your advantage in 1935, 1936, 1937 and 1938?

Plum Seekers Called Thorns in Sides Of Both Administration, Taxpayer

Mrs. Malcolm McBride Says Citizens Are Aroused by Patronage Evil.

By Hope Ridings Miller.

POLITICAL plums, patronage and persistant (but unqualified) job hunters have proved a menace both to the Administration and the taxpayer. Trying to satisfy voters reared in the tradition of the "spoils system" has been a problem since the days of Andrew Jackson. The result, in many cases, has been the appointment to office of unqualified persons.

These are observations of Mrs. Malcolm L. McBride, prominent member of the Cleveland branch of the National League of Women Voters, who is now visiting in Washington.

"More recently, however, taxpayers have become more vitally concerned about those who spend their money," Mrs. McBride said yesterday. "They are much more conscious of the shortcomings of public officials than in the boom days when paying taxes was no great task."

Merit System Gains Favor.

The result is they are gradually coming to realize many governmental problems could be solved if merit instead of political backing were the deciding factor in filling more Government positions, Mrs. McBride said.

With this as a goal, the League of Women Voters has launched a two-year campaign in behalf of more trained personnel in public service. A member of the special committee in charge of this project, Mrs. McBride has given much attention to the rising tide of discontent among taxpayers.

"The basis of this is a growing realization of the lack of fitness of many persons in public office," she said. "The situation could be cured speedily by expanding Civil Service."

Would Widen Civil Service.

Even now the machinery of the Government is operated by those who have passed Civil Service examinations, Mrs. McBride pointed out. "If the people we depend on for the real work in our public offices have obtained their jobs by fulfilling such requirements, why shouldn't all Government appointees be subjected to the same tests?" she asked.

An extension of Civil Service to embrace all public service—except elective and, possibly, Cabinet offices—would be a protection to members of Congress, Mrs. McBride believes. "Relieved of the patronage problem, our Representatives and Senators could concentrate on more important issues," she said. "Patronage, in fact, would cease to be a problem at all. Futhermore, voters would cease to consider candidates for election in the light of whether they could get a job for Uncle John or Aunt Susie."

This, she believes, would result in election on the basis of merit, and ultimately the elevation of persons best qualified for election.

Lauds Roosevelt's Selection.

Judging by the appointments the President has made, Mrs. McBride is convinced he is a firm believer in merit as an important factor.

"He has appointed more persons of ability and fitness than any President I can remember," she said. "His consideration of the qualifications, rather than party affiliation, of prospective candidates has, of course, aroused the ire of many persons who grew up in the tradition of the 'spoils system.' An extension of civil service, therefore, would at once eliminate the 'spoils system' and serve as a protection both to the taxpayer and the Administration."

A niece of Mark Hanna and a cousin of Mrs. Albert Simms (Ruth Hanna McCormick), Mrs. McBride has campaigned for better government for a number of years. She has been an outstanding member of the League of Women Voters since its origin.

In addition to her work with the league, she is a member of the Cleveland Board of Education. Her activity in this capacity has led her to believe the greatest hope for a permanent establishment of the merit system lies in high school and college students of today.

"A decade ago school children as a whole weren't interested in government," she said. "But now there is a new trend. Much concerned about public affairs, these students are becoming increasingly conscious of the deficiencies of those in public office. They—the citizens of tomorrow—will reap the fruits of the success of the project we are working on now."

The campaign to eliminate unqualified persons from public office was launched at the 1934 convention of the league. It will continue through 1936.

"By that time we hope the taxpayers will have become sufficiently conscious of their rights to demand that all those in public office be sufficiently qualified."

Stores Fete Customers.

Customers of a store company in Ireland are being royally entertained. Dances are given for them every week at the leading hotels in towns where the stores are located.

The day will come when getting a job for Aunt Susie or Uncle John ceases to be a determining factor in filling public offices, predicts Mrs. Malcolm L. McBride, prominent member of the League of Women Voters.

This BUSINESS of LIVING

Should Working Mother Accede to Demand of Jobless Husband That She Turn Her Salary Over to Him for Administration?

By Mary Haworth.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: I am a married woman and the mother of two children. My husband has been out of work for several months and we are living with his family. I have found a job and have been working for about three months. I make pretty good money, but not enough to pay all of our expenses by any means.

* * * *

My problem is this—my husband thinks, since he is the head of the family and out of work through no fault of his own, so he says, that I should turn the money I make over to him. I have been giving him a certain amount of money every week, not much, it's true, but all I feel we can spare. I never ask him what he does with it, and the rest I pay out for board to my mother-in-law and for clothes for the children, my husband and myself.

* * * *

My in-laws own their home and we have one large room there and a sleeping porch. The children are in school. I work from 9 to 5 and do my share of the housework morning and evening. Since I work so hard, it seems to me I'm entitled to the spending of the money I make. It isn't a question of me being stingy, since every penny goes for necessary things. But still my husband says it puts him in a false position having no say in the family finances.

* * * *

When he was working he made good money, and we lived nicely in our own apartment. He never was close-fisted in money matters, and always gave me a certain allowance every week for household evpenses. I had charge accounts for clothes for the children and myself. We never had a word about money matters, and I would never have thought of demanding the right to handle his salary. Do you think it's fair of him to demand it of me?

* * * *

I love my husband and he is devoted to me, but losing his job seems to have changed him a great deal. I don't want us to grow apart, as so many husbands and wives do after a few years of marriage, when hard times hit them. What should I do? WORKING WIFE.

Demand Is Unreasonable.

DEAR WORKING WIFE: Turning your salary over to your husband would be only a makeshift stop-gap in stemming his rising dissatisfaction with the existing order of domestc affairs. He doesn't realize that, of course; nor the fact that his fault-finding is a futile gesture of resentment directed not so much against you as against circumstances which have relegated him temporarily to a back seat in the family picture.

* * * *

To submit meekly to the unreasonable dictates of a petty tyrant whose petty tyranny is but the expression of wounded ego, is scarcely to help that person recover a sane outlook on life, it seems to me. Rather, to give serious consideration to a resentment which is rooted in self-contempt is to promote in the afflicted individual the growth of self-pity, a vicious and destroying emotional attitude.

* * * *

Your husband is suffering from wounded false pride. False pride is at best a piece of excess baggage which most of us lug along when times are fair, but which all of us could do without. When it's damaged, it's high time to get rid of it, rather than waste strength attempting to repair it. He's humiliated, of course, but that's no fault of yours. As a matter of fact, I feel your conduct under the circumstances is above reproach. You are doing your very best under the circumstances and doubtless are better qualified from experience to spend a dollar to best advantage than he would prove to be.

* * * *

It's a test of character to be able to adapt oneself as gracefully to reverses as to good fortune, and I'm afraid it's a lesson your husband must begin to learn. His present conduct is ungraceful, to say the least, and his demand both unfair and unwarranted.

* * * *

However, it behooves you to bring a great deal of tact, as well as firmness, to bear, in meeting this situation. If you could open your husband's eyes to the real nature of the shoals in which he is floundering at present, it should prove a valuable object lesson to him. He might get a firmer grasp on realities and go out and find the job which will be the only cure of his festering resentment. M. H.

Boastfulness Seen as Trait Of Delinquent

THE CHILD who is overly talkative and boastful is likely to develop delinquent tendencies as he grows older, Dr. Asher T. Childers, famed Cincinnati psychiatrist, believes. Dr. Childers is also convinced many children between the ages of 6 and 10 are overactive because their homes are "generally disordered and chaotic."

Lack of restraint along constructive lines is responsible for a good deal of the hyperactivity manifested by boys and girls below 10 years of age, according to the psychiatrist. Frequent home changes, too many movies, irregular meals, late hours and feeling of insecurity also contribute to youthful hyperactivity, he said.

The best way to deal with overly active youngsters is to surround them with an institutional program which provides for restraint and regularity of living, the psychiatrist believes.

Dr. Childers knows of many children who have passed into an aggressive type of delinquency after an earlier period of hyperactivity. These older children became sullen and developed a resentment toward any kind of social restraining influence.

In addition to overtalkativeness and boastfulness, hyperactivity in children is usually associated with restless sleep, attention-seeking and distraction, according to the psychiatrist.

Doctors Take Medicine.

Distasteful medicine doesn't bother the members of some African tribes, in which the doctors, instead of the patients, take the dosage.

Let the Child Draw Crudely, Parents Told

Correcting the Youngster's Concepts Declared Peril to Creative Urge.

WHEN A CHILD of pre-school age draws a few crude lines on a paper and thinks he has drawn a horse, his mother should agree with him if she wants him to progress normally in art. It is up to the adult to see with the child's eyes and enjoy his picture with him since it is an expression of his experience. Since he has created it, the horse looks real and natural to him. Only when a child has become aware of his own lack of knowledge and is dissatisfied with his work is an art teacher necessary.

These and similar beliefs are expressed in a dozen or so versions in "Art for Today's Child," a new bulletin published by the Association for Childhood Education. The association has its headquarters in Washington.

Among those who have contributed to the symposium are Elizabeth Ogg of Greenwich House, New York City; Adeline Case and Virginia Lignell of the Bronxville, N. Y., public schools, and C. Pollock of the City and Country School, New York City.

Encouragement Necessary.

Each child in learning art should be permitted to choose the subject he is going to paint, draw, or model believe Miss Case and Miss Lignell. They are convinced a child can keep from becoming afraid or inhibited only if he is encouraged to draw out what is creative within him without regard for adult standards. As long as the youngster works hard and remains interested he is undoubtedly growing, according to both Miss Lignell and Miss Case.

"Children seem to be born with a desire to draw," write these two teachers in the new bulletin. "We let the youngsters paint simple concepts of things without fussing over details. What if the figures or objects are out of proportion? The important thing is that they have a certain rhythm and swing to them."

According to another contributor to the symposium:

"Hands Off," Adults Advised.

"Adults can not possibly teach a child how he should paint. He can do it much better if they keep hands off."

The satisfaction which comes to a child after he has finished a picture, no matter how crude the picture may be, helps to build up self-confidence if he has been backward in ordinary school work, Elizabeth Ogg points out in her article in the bulletin.

Dionne Case Brings to Mind Abuses That Have Resulted From Blind Sentimentality

By Malvina Lindsay.

Woman's Page Editor.

A FLOOD of oratory (chiefly masculine) on the divine rights of parents may be expected shortly if Mr. and Mrs. Oliva Dionne continue to push their request for control of their quintuplets—and a share in the babies' $100,000 trust fund. Whether or not American showmen are inciting the Dionnes to action, as the Canadian premier charges, the fact remains that the situation will offer a new opportunity for venders of sentimental shibboleths to spring to the colors.

* * * *

To argue the Dionne case is superfluous. Everyone knows that if the Dionne parents had not been given the aid of science, government and their fellowmen, there would have been no quintuplets today—and no $100,000 trust fund. The world even in the remoteness of northern Ontario has reached a cooperative stage and no man, much less the father of 11 children, can live to himself alone.

* * * *

The agitation about the Dionne parental rights is significant chiefly because it has disturbing ghosts and mischievous offspring. Pet sentimentalities, which for the most part have centered about women, children and the home, and which have found men their chief trumpeter, have been one of the greatest bars to feminine progress and to social advance that the world has known.

TAKE THE matter of parental authority. Men juvenile judges, particularly those politically chosen and without sociological or psychological training, are fond of repeating, "any kind of a parent is better than none." All persons familiar with juvenile courts have seen the abuses such blind sentimentality has worked. They have seen children kept in homes of crime and starvation merely because of blood ties; they have seen them taken from capable and devoted foster parents and returned to self-seeking and irresponsible relatives on no other grounds than "blood is thicker than water." No one will deny that in general a child is best off under parental care, but slavish and unintelligent devotion to such a principle may become criminal sentimentality.

* * * *

Today a parent's right of control is being used as a smoke screen to permit industrial exploitation of children. Foes of the child labor amendment find this sentimentality their most able ally in seeking to put boys and girls back into cotton and textile mills. A few years ago this same old jargon was used to oppose the Children's Bureau when congressional demagogues raised a hue and cry about "old maid"—as the baby and maternity experts were called—telling the "motherhood of the Nation" how to rear children.

* * * *

A five-worded aphorism, "woman's place is the home," for centuries kept woman in polite peonage and handicapped her in efforts to obtain advantages for her children. Even today its echoes still resound, most recently in the mouth of a Texas State Senator who, opposing the appointment of Mrs. Sarah T. Hughes as district judge, thundered, "she is a married woman and should be at home washing dishes." Almost simultaneously in Washington the theory was advanced that an unmarried juvenile judge could not render a fair decision because she had not undergone the experience of motherhood.

FIFTEEN years ago Rose Macaulay wrote "Potterism," as a protest against "muddle and cant and second-rate sentimentality." She sought to show how unthinking cant as voiced by the Potters of the world shackled civilization. A typical Potterism was the clarion war call of the Potter press, "England expects its women to prove themselves worthy of its men."

* * * *

The book depicted young Britishers forming an anti-Potter League, which of course accomplished nothing. For the Potters we have with us always and they can not merely be shouted down. Women, who have been their chief victims, long ago realized this and have learned to deal with them with humor, objectivity and long patience.

* * * *

Women being more practical minded than men are the world's chief hope against the modern Potters—the hark-backers, the private-righters, the political necromancers, the military alarmists. As mothers, educators, club women, they are in the most strategic position to combat old platitudes and superstitions, to nip new ones in the bud. Any offensive they can make now against sheep thinking and parrot utterance may save social and economic muddles later on.

Skin Is Cleared By Citrus Fruit Facial Cream

Antiacid Dressing Among Ideas Discovered on Shopping Tour.

By Ruth Anne Davis.

A WOMAN who had become careless of her skin overheard two acquaintances discussing her.

One of them said: "She dresses beautifully, but you can't get around that face!"

The other one replied: "That's true. She looks like a dried-up crab apple."

"And yet," interposed the first speaker, "her features aren't bad. It's just that her skin is so miserably rough and leathery looking."

"Terrifically wrinkled," vouchsafed the second. "And all because it's been allowed to become dry and drier."

The subject of their conversation felt miserable and tried to console herself by thinking: "They're nothing but old cats!"

Mirror Tells Truth.

Alas for her, however. She could realize small comfort from this, for whenever she peered in the mirror she was forced to admit the truth of their criticism. Her skin was leathery. It was coarse. It was a mass of fine wrinkles. But, she ...red, could all these things be ...ult of an abnormally dry ...n?

first step in finding out was to ...sult a dermatologist who advised her to use a certain grapefruit cream which he said was ideal for dry or sensitive skins. It had a way, he explained, of penetrating the pores, and flushing out the acid. This enabled the natural oils to function properly and the skin to lose its shriveled look.

The outcome of the story has no surprises. It is just what you are expecting. True to the specialists' prophecies, the cream did normalize the woman's skin. Wrinkles were smoothed out, the harsh leathery look was supplanted by a fresh youthful glow. She says that sometime she is going to tell the two women what she overheard—and thank them for making her "skin-conscious."

Shoppers Hunt Blouses.

One of the surest signs of spring s the ardor with which shoppers re searching the stores for blouses. There seems to be a general demand for a blouse that is both practical and becoming, a blouse that is neither too dressy, nor too plain, a blouse that is as attractive with a coat suit as simply with a skirt. Try and find it!

You'll meet with quick success if you stop at the neckwear department of a local store. Ask for the 'sorority blouse." It's an attractive white crepe de chine affair, with tucking around the top that gives an effect of a circular yoke. Five buttons fasten down the front of the yoke. The collar is a simple turn-down, a small version of a Peter Pan.

This is a blouse which may be worn tucked in or over a skirt. It s suited to any occasion, launders well and costs but $2.

Better Hosiery Wanted.

"Imagine there's an international congress of mothers who somehow or other have managed to leave their homes and families for this brief vacation.

Imagine they take a vote on modern conveniences, helps to mothers, etc. Don't you know that a large percentage would vote for a new type of children's hose, those that simply wouldn't wear out, never have to be patched and sewn up.

The answer to their wishes has arrived at a downtown store. Children's hosiery that has been reinforced at toe and heel, not once, but three times! It literally never wears out. In fact, it's advertised as hosiery that is "outgrown before it's outworn."

It is available in either socks or anklets, in plain colors with contrasting border, or in the merrier stripes. It is made of a durable lisle, long famous for the wearing qualities.

Bargain Hair Brush.

No one can expect to have lovely hair or a healthy scalp who doesn't appreciate the value of a hair brush. And no one can expect to buy a good hair brush for less than $2 or $3. At least, not usually. Right now is an exception. It seems to be hair-brush time in a downtown store, for here on a long center counter is a section devoted to hair brushes—long, short, round, square, all shapes, all sizes—and all of them priced at 69 cents. Don't for a moment think this was the original price. Oh, no! Suffice it to say they once sold for more than twice this amount.

You can find brushes in the military style, or plump, paddle-like brushes, any kind you like, all of them with sterilized stiff bristles that will give your scalp the kind of brushing over it needs.

Culbertson on Bridge

The Auction in Contract.

We have been asked by some players, beginners in the game of contract bridge, to state in simple terms the definition of an auction. There seems to be some confusion in their minds. I am always glad to clear up the perplexities encountered by those making their debut on the stage of contract.

The auction is that period during which any player in proper turn may make a call. A call comprises a pass, a bid, double or redouble. The auction begins when the deal is finished and ends when three players have passed a bid, double or redouble.

The dealer must open the auction by making the first call; thereafter each player in turn (clockwise) must make a call. If the dealer's first call is a pass, and the other three pass in turn after him, the hand is abandoned. In duplicate play the cards are returned to the board and the score marked as a "pass." In rubber play, the hands are thrown in and the deal passes to the next player on the left, who uses the other pack for a new deal.

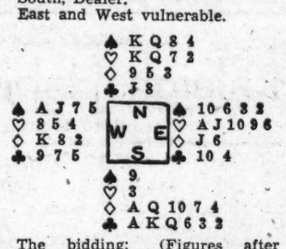

If a player changes his call in practically the same breath, so that it is obviously to correct a slip of the tongue, the call stands as corrected. A player may not otherwise change any of his calls, except as provided under the laws of "Insufficient Bids."

All calls should be made simply, without undue emphasis or delay but in clear tone of voice. It should never be necessary for your opponent or partner to ask you to repeat your call.

Listen to Opponent's Bids.

In today's hand East was asleep at the switch, though South's bidding fairly shrieked that he held 11 cards in the minor suits.

South, Dealer.
East and West vulnerable.

South	West	North	East
1♣	Pass	1♠	Pass
2◇	Pass	2NT(1)	Pass
3◇(2)	Pass	3NT(3)	Pass
5♣(4)	Pass	Pass	Pass

1—North is not sure that South has 11 minor suit cards.
2—By rebidding the shorter length. South indicates the six-five distribution.
3—North persists in the hope that South will take his word about the major suits and play for the nine-trick game instead of the 11 trick.
4—South decides that the minor suit game offers a better chance.

The Play.

West opened his top heart, East winning with the ace. Had East listened attentively to the bidding, he would have realized that if two additional tricks could be secured in the minor suits they could be obtained at any time; but the only chance to obtain another trick in the major suits was to return a spade immediately. But East supinely returned a trump, probably remembering the old adage, "When in doubt, lead trumps." The saying did not apply to this hand. Declarer took two rounds of trumps ending with the Jack in dummy and discarded his spade on the King of clubs. After this the opponents could take one diamond trick.

Had East returned a spade, West would have taken his ace, and though declarer could have obtained three diamond discards on the established major suit cards in the dummy, he would still have had to lose to the King of diamonds.

How to Keep Well

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

Heart Writing—An Aid in Diagnosis.

EVEN in medicine we are living in a mechanical age. Instruments for measuring the functions of the body have in a fairly large degree replaced the observations of the physician. Most of these devices have been designed to tell just exactly what the heart, the lungs or the kidneys may be doing. Through some of these procedures minute amounts of substances in the blood may be measured, as for example, sugar; and from a few drops of blood we may determine the exact condition of a patient with diabetes.

Among the many instruments of fairly recent use is that known as the electrocardiograph (heart writing by means of electricity). A Dutch physiologist, William Einthoven, discovered that the heart in beating generated minute electrical currents which could be made to influence a delicate electrical instrument. Subsequently it was found possible to produce on a photographic plate a record of the heart beat (electrocardiogram or heart writing). This record will disclose the difference between the beat of the lower and upper chambers, between the right and the left side of the heart, and also tell something about the mechanism that causes the heart to beat.

Under normal conditions the heart writing changes but little in a given individual from year to year. It is so delicate, however, that slight changes in the beat or in the power of the heart muscle are quickly and easily detected. For example, if a coronary vessel that nourishes a portion of the heart itself should be plugged or blocked from any cause, the fact would show on the heartbeat photograph.

Parfait Glass Is Recommended As a Tempting Dessert Service

Goodwin, Post Staff.

Just the appearance of a tall crystal parfait glass, revealing its contents of rich chocolate sauce, cherry preserves or fresh crushed strawberries combined in swirling effect with vanilla ice cream will spell the perfect ending for your Sunday dinner. Glassware by Dulin & Martin.

Possibilities for Dressing Up Ice Cream Portion Seems Unlimited.

By Dorothea Duncan.

A SLENDER parfair glass offers unlimited possibilities for varying America's favorite dessert. Vanilla ice cream will find favor when other desserts fail to tempt, especially when served in one of the many attractive ways made possible by this tall, crystal glass.

A combination of chocolate sauce and vanilla ice cream is delicious when served merely from a plain dish, but it has far more effect when served from a transparent one that shows off to a pleasant effect the marbling of the dark sauce and the creamy white of the ice cream. The same goes for any number of other combinations; fresh crushed strawberries, bright red cherry preserves, minted pineapple sauce. One of these in combination with vanilla ice ceam will take on an appearance of elegance when swirled together in a parfait glass.

If you feel that your desserts are losing their distinction, perhaps because they have been served too frequently, try a parfait for the Sunday dinner dessert.

Following are suggested weekend menus.

Saturday Dinner Menu.

Baked stuffed veal chcops
Creamed new potatoes
Escalloped tomatoes
Grated carrot and cabbage salad
Whole wheat bread and butter
Pineapple orange sponge
Coffee Milk (for children)

Sunday Breakfast Menu.

Grapefruit halves
Hot cereal Top milk
Omelet Cinnamon rolls
Coffee Milk (for children)

Sunday Dinner Menu.

Fruit cocktail
Celery hearts radishes
Roast duck with apple dressing
Mashed potatoes
Buttered lima beans
Bread and butter
Chocolate parfait
Coffee Milk (for children)

Sunday Supper Menu.

Tuna fish a la king on toast points
Fruit salad
Cake Hot cocoa

Pineappel and Orange Sponge.

1 package orange flavored gelatin
1 cup boiling water
1 cup pineapple juice and cold water

Veal Among Items Listed in Menu Suggestions for Week-End.

1 cup canned, shredded pineapple, drained

Dissolve gelatin in boiling water. Add pineapple juice and cold water. Chill until cold and sirupy. Place in a bowl of cracked ice or ice water and whip with rotary egg beater until fluffy and thick like whipped cream. Fold in pineapple. Turn into molds. Chill until firm. Unmold. Serves eight.

Apple Stuffing.

¼ cup diced salt pork
½ cup chopped celery
½ cup chopped onion
1 cup fine bread crumbs
¼ cup chopped parsley
5 tart apples, cut in pieces
½ cup sugar
Salt and pepper.

Fry pork until crisp, remove pieces. Cook celery, onion and parsley in fat 3 minutes and remove. Put apples in fat, sprinkle with sugar, cover, and cook slowly until tender. Uncover and cook until glazed. Add crumbs, salt pork scraps and cooked vegetables, and season.

Sauce for Chocolate Parfait.

1 square unsweetened chocolate, cut in pieces
3 tablespoons water
Dash of salt
4 tablespoons sugar
1½ tablespoons melted butter
Few drops vanilla.

Combine chocolate, salt, water and sugar in top of double boiler. Heat and blend. Add butter and vanilla. Beat well. Makes two-thirds cup sauce.

Pattern No. 831.

SLEEVES are one of the season's fashion headlines this spring. All sorts of new treiks have appeared to make them the most important single feature of the frock. Here is a charming new version, a one-piece dress whose slim lines are an excellent foil for the soft tucked fullness of the sleeves.

The buttoned-down-the-front closing suggests a coat dress, and is another important bit of news. This is one of a group of frocks featuring interesting sleeves shown in the Pattern Book mentioned below. The pattern comes in sizes 12 to 38 and in size 16 (34) requires 4 yards of 39-inch material.

What Today Means

"Pisces."

IF MARCH 1 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 10:45 a. m. to 12:45 p. m., from 2:45 to 4:45 p. m. and from 7:45 to 9:45 p. m. The danger periods are from 6:45 to 8:45 a. m., from 5:45 to 7:45 p. m. and from 10:45 p. m. until midnight.

It may pay to be a good listener, rather than too talkative on this date. Be careful in social and business conversations that whatever you say can not be misinterpreted, thus causing unintentional offense being taken by a very sensitive type of person. The average business executive will have plenty to absorb his time on March 1, so brevity in telephone or personal calls should be your rule.

If a woman, and March 1 is your birthday, your ability to conceive original, as well as artistic ideas, if commercialized, should not only result in money, but also in an enviable reputation. All you need to achieve success, is sufficient ambition to spur you on to greater effort.

You should make a very successful marriage, as a home should mean a great deal to you. Designing, illustrating, writing, window dressing, interior decorating, as well as needlework, are among some of the lines of activity in which you should have no difficulty to excel.

If a man, and March 1 is your natal day, be careful false pride does not act as a stumbling block on your road to success. The legal, medical, as well as educational professions and journalism, have a great deal to offer a man of your capability.

SHADOWS in PARADISE

By INEZ WALLACE

RALPH called at ten minutes to five, saying he was at the restaurant rehearsing.

"Have you a few minutes to talk?" I asked.

"Certainly. That's what I called you for. But I want to see you later tonight."

"Well, I'm sorry, Ralph, but you can't see me. I'm through and this time I mean it. I've had plenty of opportunity to think it over in the past few weeks. We can't go on this way——"

"Look, sweet, are you letting me down?"

"No, not at all. And I'm not losing you, either. One can't lose something they've never had. You meant what you said the first time you were out here—that success meant more to you than anything in the world. I hope I've helped, in a small way, with that success. Now I've done all I can, so I'm quitting."

"But I don't understand. Why can't we go on?"

"Because I don't like the way you treat me. I don't like always being second best in your life. You say you love me. You say so, but when it was a case of me or Lucille Murphy, she came first. The same thing is true with your wife. The only time I come first is after everybody else—and I think I deserve something better than that. All my life I've wanted the best. I've worked for it and I have it in all the other details of my life. So I'm going to be first with the man in my life—whoever he is."

"This amazes me."

"Perhaps it does. You've done a good job of calling this attitude of yours by another name. You say I'm broadminded when I let you get away with these little things which hurt my feelings. Well, I don't want to be broadminded, if that's what it means. You've come first with me. I've given up everything for you—but it wasn't enough. The very fact that I'm having to call your attention to it now, proves that. No, Ralph, it's no use. You're married to a fine person—one who evidently understands you as I could never do. So go on back to her."

To Tell Gloria.

"Listen, sweet, this all sounds swell—but it leaves me cold. You're not getting to first base with this line of talk. You're acting like a child. I know how you feel. I know it's been tough. But it hasn't been all sunshine and roses for me, either. If you think I'm letting you go, after what we've been through together, you're just plumb crazy."

"You don't have to let me go. I'm gone."

"Whenever you stop raving, I'd like to tell you something. The trouble with you is, you always want to run the show. Well, this is one show you can't run—'cause I'm the boss. When I saw Jim Nelson in the hotel last night, I had a sudden feeling that I might lose you. I know he'd give his right arm to get you back.

"Well, that's not happening. You're right about this arrangement being bad. I see now it would never work, so we'll not try it any longer. I'm going to tell Gloria tonight that I'm through. She'll have to get the bad news some time and it may as well be now. You'll be free any day now and I'll get my divorce in Mexico and we'll be married immediately. If you're 'between pictures' let's run off right now. We're going to be front page whenever it happens and we may as well take it on the chin and have it over with——"

"Ralph, will you please stop talking?"

"Not till you say yes. Let's get out of here, away from all these people. You can take Vera with you for a chaperon till we can be married, but, for goodness sake, let's go. How'd you like to go down to Palm Springs, where all this started? It's not far and if that place means to you what it does to me you'll go. Would you care for Palm Springs, sweet?"

Amazing Decision.

It wasn't I—it was some other girl who said breathlessly, "I should adore it."

"All right. We'll fly down tonight. I'll go home after the first show and tell Gloria. Then I'll pick you up immediately after the second show. Get packed and don't take too many clothes, just sport stuff. Good-by, my darling."

I walked around my bedroom in a daze, forgetting to call Florette, taking riding clothes from the closet, satin pajamas, pongee shirts, a bathing suit. I'd have to phone Vera and I ought to talk to Lawson. He'd raise the dickens. I wondered——

Then there was a knock at the door and Perkins was standing there when I opened it.

"Mrs. Ralph Nome is calling, madame," he said.

"Ask her to come up here."

"She's right here, madame," and Gloria came in and closed the door.

"Hello, Helen. I'll have to apologize for this."

"I'm surprised to see you, Gloria, but sit down."

"I'll just walk around, if you don't mind. And I'll explain at once why I'm here."

"First let me ask you," I said. "Have you seen Ralph?"

"No. I purposely left the apartment before he got home. You see, an important business wire came in from New York this afternoon just before 5 o'clock. I tried to phone Ralph at the hotel and the switchboard operator put me on a busy line. I heard Ralph say, 'sweet' and recognized his voice. It only took a minute to discover he was talking to you. You don't have to explain, Helen, for I heard everything he said."

"I'm sorry. I wouldn't have taken a thousand dollars and had it happen this way. He owed it to you to tell you face to face."

"That's not important, Helen. The big point is that he's leaving me. Just how he told me wouldn't change the issue any. I can tell from what he said, his voice, and all, that anything I could say would't make any difference to him. Helen, you're my only hope."

This Was Different.

"Why, Gloria, how do you mean? Surely you don't want to hold him if he doesn't want to stay?"

"I know you won't understand. I can't expect you to. I've been married to Ralph eight years and nothing like this has ever happened before—well, not quite like this. That's why I'm scared. Always, before, I could get him back but now I know that unless you relent and leave him, he is lost to me for good."

"Sit down, Gloria, won't you—and let me think. I'm terribly embarrassed. If you could know how all this happened——"

"I know. I know Ralph, and how attractive he can be. I'm not blaming you. I'm only asking you to give him up. You'll not miss him so much. You're a great star—you can get a hundred men, while with me there'll never be anybody but Ralph. You said on the phone that you'd given up everything for him. Well, so have I. It was my money which helped get him started. That's why he didn't want to leave me—his sense of fairness. You're a square shooter, too. I could tell it by your phone conversation. Don't you see you took him away from me? He's really mine. You knew he was married. What had you intended to do about me?"

Only One Course.

"I knew it, yes, but not until it was too late to do much about it. You've got to believe that. Then I tried to get over it. But I couldn't. It was too strong for me. I went away but it didn't help. Nothing did. It'll be that same way if he goes now—that awful emptiness——"

"But don't you see that life is bound to be empty for one of us, and, oh, Helen, you're so much more of a person than I am. You'll come out of it tomorrow. Please give him back to me. I'll do anything. I'll——"

"Don't say any more, Gloria. I've made up my mind. You can have him. But get him out of Hollywood and get him out right away. I'll never see him again—I promise you. I couldn't. I wouldn't dare risk it. When you leave here, I want you to go direct to the hotel. Tell him what I've said. You must leave town tonight. He was planning on that, anyhow—the only difference will be that you'll go with him instead of me. And now, please go. Don't thank me—just go!"

I didn't hear her leave the room. I lay down on the bed and cried and cried.

Shortly after midnight an envelope was slipped under my door. I tore it open mechanically.

They had gone.

His telegram was very short. All it said was:

Eat for Future, Not the Present, Expert Advises

EAT FOR the future instead of the present is the advice of Prof. Henry C. Sherman, outstanding authority on the chemistry of nutrition.

At the request of the American Child Health Association, Prof. Sherman has explained how a child may eat to fortify the body against nutritional deficiencies that may occur in later life. He says:

"The two factors—calcium and vitamin A—which in the past have been least adequately supplied by the average American diet, fortunately can both be stored in the body when it receives a surplus above its immediate needs. Therefore every time a child gets a good day's ration of milk, you may say that he puts calcium and vitamin A in his bank as well as adding to his working capital. And every time he eats a plentiful helping of a leafy vegetable he is adding to his reserve of vitamin A.

A surplus of calcium, Prof. Sherman explained, is stored in the body in ways which actually strengthen the bones and teeth, while at the same time adequately supplying the blood and the soft tissues. Moreover, a store of vitamin A does its part as insurance against future needs and strains.

The public health has borne up as well as it did during the depression was due, in Prof. Sherman's opinion, to the increasing attention paid to diet preceding the years of economic crisis. He says:

"We entered the depression with bodies better stocked not with fat, but with mineral elements and vitamins, than would have been the case even a decade earlier."

Child's Recital Causes Fining Of Mrs. Dorsey

Concert Manager Ready for Appeal Upon Ruth Slenczynski Case.

Judge Fay L. Bentley, of the Juvenile Court, yesterday imposed a fine of $25 on Mrs. Dorothy Hodgkin Dorsey, concert bureau manager, who was found guilty of a charge of violating the District's anti-child labor law.

Her attorney, Robert E. Lynch, immediately notified Miss Bentley of his intention to appeal the case to the United States Court of Appeals.

The charge against Mrs. Dorsey was that she presented Ruth Slenczynski, 10-year-old child pianist, in a recital at Constitution Hall. The girl, it was admitted, had received pay for the performance. Both the District Government and the defense submitted the case to Miss Bentley on an agreed statement of facts, without calling any witnesses to testify.

Mrs. Dorsey contended the girl did not "work" in presenting her selections, because she liked to play the piano. The manager also said that it was not a "gainful occupation" because the recital had brought about a deficit, although the child's father received $1,400. Lastly, she claimed the concert did not come within the scope of the child labor law.

Judge Bentley, in overruling the contentions, held that presentation of the prodigy was a violation of both the spirit and intent of the law. She pointed out that the girl's father had made $6,000 in a year managing her and had bound her by contracts to perform at recitals.

Thomas Gillespie Walsh, assistant corporation counsel, agreed with Mr. Lynch to make the case a test of the law.

$3,310 for Code Overtime.

Beaumont, Tex., Feb. 28 (AP).—T. Anderson, former truck driver for the Southern Motor Lines, was awarded $3,310.40 in district court here today for overtime claimed under the President's national re-employment agreement and code of fair competition for the trucking industry.

D.C. Minors Sue For $100,000 Crash Damage

Realty Firm Asked to Pay $10,000 Because Door 'Stuck.'

Damages aggregating $110,000 were sought in three damage suits filed yesterday in the District Supreme Court.

Roy L. Glover, a minor, through his father, Roy L. Glover, sr., asked damages of $50,000 from the Hermann Ginger Ale Co. because, on October 8, 1934, he charged, he was struck by a company truck at First and I streets northwest.

The boy suffered a fracture of the skull and permanent impairment of his vision, Attorney Franklyn Yasmer charged.

A second $50,000 suit was filed when Madeline M. Duncan, through her mother, Mrs. Nellie H. Duncan, 1624 Maryland avenue northeast, sued Ira Matz, 2121 New York avenue northwest. Matz, alleged to have been the driver of an automobile that struck another car in which the plaintiff was riding, was charged with negligent driving.

Attorneys Cyril S. Lawrence and Lester Wood said in her petition she had been seriously hurt when the automobile in which she was riding stalled alongside the road at Beltsville, Md., and was struck by Matz's car.

Almeda Sykes, 3034 Connecticut avenue northwest, demanded $10,000 damages of the Dixie Realty Co., 1417 L street northwest. She charged, in a petition filed by the law firm of King & Nordlinger, that she suffered injuries when she broke the glass in the door of the apartment at 3430 Connecticut avenue northwest last November because the door stuck and she was forced to push it open.

Boy Dead in Lake; Slaying Suspected

Note Leads to Body of Youngstown Youth.

By the Associated Press.

Youngstown, Ohio, Feb. 28.—An anonymous note led today to the discovery of the body of 13-year-old Frank Suhovecky at the bottom of Lake Cohasset, in Mill Creek Park. Discovery of the body terminated a ten-day search. Police expressed theories the boy had been slain.

The note, received by Mike Suhovecky, 28-year-old brother of the boy, said the body would be found near the point in the lake at which it was recovered.

Police tonight searched the home of a trapper who is held as a suspect in an attempt to trace the note paper. They said tests would be conducted to determine whether the suspect's handwriting was similar.

Lamson Juror 'Related' To Deputy Prosecutor

San Jose, Calif., Feb. 28 (AP). Shortly after a jury of eight men and four women had been agreed upon today for the second wife murder trial of David A. Lamson, one juror was found to be related by marriage to a prosecutor, and a recess was called to consult authorities on procedure.

P. T. Peabody, Gilroy rancher, admitted under questioning by Defense Attorney E. M. Rea that he was a cousin by marriage to Deputy Prosecutor J. P. Fitzgerald. Eight days already had been consumed in maneuverings for a jury.

Child-Labor Proposal Hit In Maryland

House Votes Against Ratification of Amendment.

By Francis O. White, Jr.,
A Staff Correspondent.

Annapolis, Md., Feb. 28.—The Maryland House of Representatives today overwhelmingly voted down the proposal for ratification of the child labor amendment of the Federal Constitution, notwithstanding strong advocacy of the proposal by representatives of 32 organizations in the State at a committee hearing yesterday.

By a vote of 8 to 1, the Federal relations committee brought the measure out with an unfavorable report and Delegate James H. Broumel, Harford County, committee chairman, led the fight against it on the floor. Pointing out the proposal has been before the Assembly for the last decade, Broumel said it would take away States' rights and put the question in the hands of the Federal Government. He asserted Maryland is as capable as the Federal Government to handle the issue. Several other delegates participated in the debate. Vote finally was taken on a motion to set aside the committee report and it was lost, 91 to 12.

A bill providing for unemployment, old-age and social insurance appeared in the House. Introduced by Paul L. Cordish, Baltimore City, by request, the measure would set up a commission of 12 members, 8 of whom would be workers and farmers, elected from those groups. The other four would be the Governor, the commissioner of labor, the chief of the department of labor and State treasurer. The board would be empowered to appoint a salaried secretariat. The measure provides for compensation equal to the average local wages, in no case to be less than $10 per week, with $3 for each dependent. In the case of social service, conditions would be age limit of 65, maternity and industrial injury or other disability, with compensation as already listed.

Fight Forestalled.

The fight anticipated on the floor of the Senate today over legislation designed to cure the State's financial difficulties was forestalled when Senator J. Allan Coad, St. Marys County, chairman of the finance committee and majority floor leader, announced the committee would not report the bond issue proposal agreed upon by the Governor and fiscal leaders until next week. Coad said the committee had agreed upon a favorable report after reducing the original bond issue proposal from $10,000,000 to $8,500,000. The committee lopped off $500,000 from the $1,000,000 of the State bond annuity fund and one-third of the $3,000,000 allotted the State roads commission to replace funds transferred in the original budget to meet road and bridge requirements. Despite the latter paring, the roads commission eventually will be the gainer, in view of the defeat yesterday of the administration bill to reduce automobile license fees. This means that a total of $1,792,000 will be available from this source for the two-year budgetary period.

Other new proposals received in the House included: Amending the liquor laws for Allegany County and authorizing the sale of beer subject to referendum in Garrett County.

Directing Anne Arundel County commissioners to establish zoning districts for purpose of levying for special privileges (Annapolis, which constitutes the Sixth District, not to be included).

Bills Sent to Senate.

The following House bills were passed and sent to the Senate: Authorizing liquor-control boards of Wicomico and Worcester Counties to purchase alcoholic beverages from nonresident producers and import them for sale.

Providing for the election of three councilmen for Salisbury in odd years and the mayor and two other councilmen in even years.

Dividing Wicomico County into five commissioner districts, with commissioner representation from each.

Increasing the salary of the stenographer of the First Judicial Circuit from $1,000 to $1,500 a year, Dorcester, Somerset, Wicomico and Worcester Counties to bear a proportionate share.

The House also passed and sent to the Governor Senator Veasey's bill permitting Ocean City taxpayers to vote at municipal elections, regardless of whether taxes are paid.

In the Senate these new measures were received:

Providing that waters of Chincoteague Bay, Worcester County, shall not be subject to lease for oyster purposes for a two-year period.

Requiring the orphan's court of Worcester County to meet every Tuesday, instead of the first and third Tuesdays of each month, as under existing law.

Tax Exemption Forwarded.

The Senate also passed and sent to the House the bill to exempt from taxation the Washington, Brandywine & Point Lookout Railroad.

The Senate judicial proceedings committee filed an unfavorable report on the bill to outlaw the so-called "yellow dog" contracts, but upon motion of Senator Robert Kimble, Allegany County, its author, the measure was made a special order of business for Tuesday at 1 p. m. The same committee also reported adversely on the bill by Senator Ridgely P. Melvin, Anne Arundle County, to give the Court of Appeals jurisdiction in prescribing educational requirements of candidates for admission to the bar. This measure was made a special order for Tuesday at 1:30 o'clock.

The Senators and Representatives threw aside legislative cares tonight and attended the reception given by Gov. and Mrs. Harry W. Nice at the Executive Mansion in honor of the Assemblymen. The affair was from 8 to 11 o'clock. There were approximately 2,000 guests, including many from Washington. After the reception Gov. and Mrs. Nice joined their guests at an informal dance at Carvel Hall.

Club Prepares for Institute Today

$265,000 Set As Maryland's Rate Cut Quota

Commission Limits Edison Out-of-State Benefits to $60,000.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, Feb. 28.—The State public service commission ruled today that $265,000 of the total $325,000 reduction in gross income ordered for the Potomac Edison Co. must go to Maryland customers. The commission imposed its own schedule of rates on the utility concern to make its order effective.

The electric service company, which serves western Maryland counties and portions of three other States, had sought to allot $218,000 to Maryland customers and $106,500 to out-of-State subsidiaries. The commission's order cuts the out-of-State reduction to $60,000.

R. Paul Smith, president of Potomac Edison, reached by telephone in his Hagerstown office, said he could not express the company's policy regarding the order until he has obtained a copy and studied it.

May "Iron Out" Matters, He Says.

"It may iron the whole matter out," he said. "I hope it does so, although I have responsibilites toward my company which prevent me from saying what we may do until I have studied all angles of the decision."

The reduction of $325,000 in gross income amounts to approximately 10 per cent of the utility's earnings. Under the rate schedule imposed by the commission, varying reductions will be made for small power users, effective immediately.

As an example of the new rate, electricity used in domestic service in Cumberland will receive a reduction of approximately 16 per cent. Other cities will receive similar cuts.

Rate Scales for Towns.

The domestic service rate imposed on the utility concern and applicable in Brunswick, Frederick, Frostburg, Hancock, Lonaconing, Luke and Westernport was shown as follows:

First 30 kilowatt hours used per month, 7 cents net, 7.5 cents gross, per kilowatt hour. Next 70 kilowatt hours, 4 cents net, 4.5 cents gross, per kilowatt hour. The next 100 is 3 cents and all over 200 kilowatt hour is 2 cents per kilowatt hour.

A minimum charge of 75 cents net, 80 cents gross, is permitted for light and appliances only, "and shall be increased by $1 per horsepower for the first 5 horsepower, and 50 cents for each additional horsepower for all motors in excess of 1 horsepower." Certain discounts were also ordered.

The order was signed by Harold E. West, chairman; J. Frank Harper and Steuart Purcell, commissioners.

Donnelly Rites Tomorrow.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Waynesboro, Pa., Feb. 28.—Funeral services for Mrs. Cecilia (Bradley) Donnelly, 70, wife of John Donnelly, who died yesterday morning at her home in Rouzerville, will be held Saturday morning in St. Andrew's Catholic Church. Death was due to an attack of acute indigestion. She was a native of Fallston, Harford County, Md.

Along the Tri-State Trail

With

C. B. Carr
The Post State Editor.

SPRING, publicized by poets, made a hesitant bid for page one throughout the tri-State vicinity this week, but was soon routed by snow.

Not only did poultrymen feel winter's return taking away possibilities of steady egg production, but fruit growers have since been warily searching for damage indications. In Page County, Va., microscopic examinations show that early peach buds encouraged by the high temperatures have been killed.

Around Elkton, Md., baseball was abandoned for sledding within 24 hours, as light winds piled snow drifts of traffic-snarling proportions. At Leonardtown, Md., impatient jonquils and other harbingers of spring made an unsuccessful fight as the mercury dropped many degrees below the freezing point.

Hazy memories of the past were echoed in Winchester, Va., the other day as members of the common council settled down to the business of modernizing the city's ordinance governing licensing.

It seemed that the ordinance contained many provisions that were not exactly necessary for this day's changed commercial pursuits.

"We don't need that—ought to take it out," some one would say as Commissioner of Revenue Charles P. McVicar read items in the long list. And in consequence, the ordinance would be purged of a provision governing the sale of lightning rods. Miniature golf provisions met the group's blue pencil. No more use for such, the committee decided.

Livery stables barely escaped, although it was brought out that there were none in operation at present.

Our hats are off to the little town of Marshall, in Fauquier County, Va., which has recently won a fight of 138 years to effect incorporation. During that time, the smart hamlet, which boasts a bank and a high school in its metropolitan area, has had its name changed twice.

This month Marshall will have its long-awaited first election. Candidates already entered in the race include Dr. W. N. Sturgis, for mayor; Henry Fishback, C. F. Ramey, J. Nachman, P. W. Anderson, O. M. Pyne and T. H. Maddux, sr., all for town councilmen.

Bill Proposes Allegany Shift In Liquor Laws

Wide Changes Urged; Measure to Permit Beer in Garrett.

By a Staff Correspondent.

Annapolis, Md., Feb. 28.—Sweeping changes in the liquor laws for Allegany County are embodied in a bill placed before the House of Delegates today. Sale of beer would be permitted in Garrett County, the only dry sector in Maryland, under another proposal offered in the House.

The Allegany County delegation sponsored the liquor bill for that territory. It provides for shifting power of granting licenses from the judges of the Circuit Court to the clerk of the court, eliminates existing classification for the sale of light beer generally, and provides for a referendum in any district under certain conditions. The scale of license fees is laid down as follows: Manufacturer and wholesaler, $1,000; beer distributor, $75; beer, on and off sale, $75; beer, wine and liquor, on and off sale, $300; off sale only, $250; on sale and clubs, $150. Each licensee would be required to give $1,000 surety bond and $500 personal security.

The bill also would strike out a provision limiting the number of licenses on a basis of population. Referendum may be obtained upon petition of 25 per cent of the voters of any district. Sunday sales also would be permissible under the bill, although the delegation appears divided on this clause and may eliminate it.

The Garrett County beer bill, presented by Delegates Harry Edwards and Martin Groves, carries a referendum clause. The measure fixes license fees of $100 for retailers and $200 for wholesalers.

Liberal Arts Education System Is Attacked by College Leader

Dean Miller, Shenandoah, Assails 'Teaching' of Culture.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Dayton, Va., Feb. 28.—Dean Wade S. Miller, of Shenandoah College, attacked the present system of liberal arts education in an address before the student body of Shenandoah College yesterday. Himself a leader in the field of liberal arts, Mr. Miller disregarded his position to attack the synthetic methods of the liberal arts college to produce personal growth and culture. He said that growth and culture can not be measured in terms of semester hours or accumulated by so much time in the classroom, for all that the student obtains there is information, while it is formation that he really needs.

Mr. Miller used the example of the football coach to stress the point of the futility of the information system of eductaion. He said, "Imagine a coach on the ball field lecturing to his players on the history of the sport, the philosophy of it, about the biographies of the forgotten kings of the gridiron, on the evolution of the single wing and double wing backs, on the development of the headgear, the equities of refereeing, or in the psychology of crowds.

"How long do you suppose," he continued, "the coach could keep his job, if his team could not really get out there on the field and really play the game?"

Dean Miller offered as a solution to the problem a system whereby the student should not be graduated "until he is prepared to be a servant of society, as Plato held to be the purpose of education." He also added that it is criminal for a college to send out a student who does not display a sense of ethical values and moral responsibility.

VERA Set-up Of Six Areas Is Effected

Supervisory Districts of Organization Reduced by Three.

Personnel Will Travel Around to Instruct Chiefs and Staff.

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., Feb. 28.—A reduction in number of supervisory districts for the Virginia Emergency Relief Administration was effected today in a new set-up for the organization.

In place of the former districts, numbering nine, six new districts were designated, each embracing previously established areas. The new districts will have headquarters either at VERA headquarters here or at some area administrator's office.

Under the new set-up, supervisory personnel will travel about the entire district to give guidance in their respective fields to the area administrators and their staff and to the local personnel.

District No. 1 will have headquarters here. The personnel will include Miss Adelaide Barker, district relief supervisor; Col. M. A. Butler, district engineer; E. M. Estes, district rehabilitation supervisor. The district will include the areas having the following headquarters: Franklin, Norfolk City, Petersburg, Portsmouth, Richmond City.

Miss Henna Superviser.

District 2 will have headquarters here. The personnel will include Miss Catherine Henna, district relief superviser; Henry W. Roberts, district engineer; R. O. Delano, district rehabilitation supervisor, and Miss Amelia Lankford, district home economics superviser. The district will include areas having the following headquarters: Lee Hall, Onley, Warsaw and West Point.

District 3 will have headquarters here. The personnel will include Miss Gene Smith, district relief superviser; J. G. Watson, district engineer; H. S Barksdale, district rehabilitation superviser, and Mrs. Mary Thompson, district home economics superviser. The district will include the areas having the following headquarters: Charlottesville, Fredericksburg, Manassas and Richmond County.

District 4 will have headquarters in Lynchburg. The personnel will include F. E. Ferguson, district engineer; Miss Mary Hardy, district relief superviser; O. G. Bailey, district rehabilitation superviser. The district will include the areas having headquarters at Blackstone, Danville, Farmville, Lynchburg and Martinsville.

Staunton to Be Base.

District 5 will have headquarters in Staunton. The personnel will include Miss Harriet Tynes, district relief supervisor; Frank M. Glover, district engineer; William C. Larue, district rehabilitation supervisor, and Mrs. Kate Estes Hoge, district home economics supervisor. The district will include the areas having headquarters at Clifton Forge, Front Royal, Roanoke, Staunton.

District 6 will have headquarters at Abingdon. The personnel will include Miss Maude Evans, district relief supervisor; H. E. McCreedy, district engineer; C. R. James, district rehabilitation supervisor, and Mrs. Olive Gose, district home economics supervisor. The district will include the areas having headquarters at Abingdon, Christiansburg, Clintwood, Big Stone Gap, Tazewell and Wytheville.

Loudoun Board to Act On Rehabilitation Fund

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Leesburg, Va., Feb. 28.—A special meeeting of the Loudoun County Board of Supervisors is called for tomorrow to reconsider the application of a $1,500 rehabilitation fund for Loudoun County for March. The session was called after a meeting today of the rehabilitation committee, of which H. C. Rogers and P. J. Coleman, supervisors, are members. The board, meeting Monday, refused to sign the application blank, members saying they did not know how the money would be disbursed.

Rogers, who opposed the project at the board meeting, and Coleman, who was the only member of the board who favored the fund, attended the meeting today.

Elon Henkel Dead at 80 In Virginia

Former Publisher Was Widely Known in the Shenandoah.

Funeral Services Set for This Afternoon at New Market.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

New Market, Va., Feb. 28.—Suffering a paralytic stroke, Elon O. Henkel, 80, New Market's "grand old man," and one of the Shenandoah Valley's most prominent and widely known citizens, died at his home here last night.

Although he had been in ill health for several years, Mr. Henkel's death came as a shock to this community. A former newspaper publisher, editor and author, Mr. Henkel was a descendant of the Counts Henckel von Donnersmarck, and was a lineal descendant of Dr. Johann Henckel, some-time chaplain to Queen Marie of Hungary. He was connected with a family which, throughout the country's early history, was one of the most distinguished in the Lutheran Church in America.

Received Degree in 1875.

Mr. Henkel was born here May 5, 1855, and was a son of the late Rev. Dr. Socrates and Eleanora Caroline Henkel. He received his A. B. degree from the old New Market Polytechnic Institute in 1875, and later that institution conferred on him the honorary degree of master of arts. Mr. Henkel also studied law under the late Prof. John B. Minor at the University of Virginia.

Of a line of ministers, physicians, lawyers, authors, editors and publishers, Mr. Henkel, upon completing his education, actively engaged with his father and brother, Ambrose L. Henkel, in the printing and newspaper business. For more than 50 years he was connected with the publishing establishment founded here in 1806 by the Rev. Ambrose Henkel. He was the sole survivor in a direct lineal descent of the fourth generation of Henkel editors and publishers.

Mr. Henkel became sole owner of the printing establishment upon the death of his brother in 1913, and became widely known as the author of the terse and homely editorial comment contained in the Shenandoah Valley. He also wrote "The Life and Character of Joseph Salyards," New Market educator.

Published Theological Works.

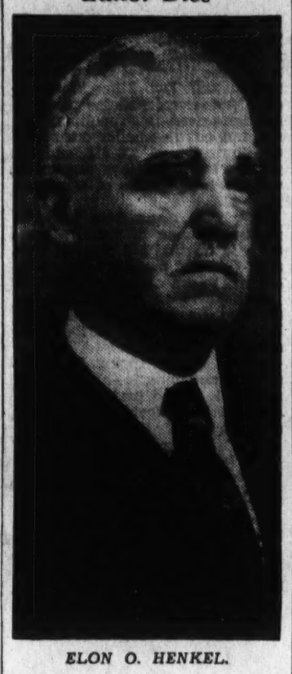

Operating under the name of Henkel & Co., the establishment during Mr. Henkel's management was said to have gained the distinction of publishing more Lutheran theological works in the English language than any other publishing house in the world. In 1925 Mr. Henkel sold his business, the oldest establishment of its kind south of the Mason-Dixon line, which has been continued under the Henkel name.

Mr. Henkel was a lifelong member of Emmanuel Lutheran Church here, and frequently served as teacher and superintendent in the Sunday school, and as deacon, elder, trustee and secretary of the church council. He often was sent to synod meetings as the representative of his church.

Besides his wife, Mrs. Julia K. Henkel, whom he married in 1907, Mr. Henkel is survived by several nephews and nieces and numerous other distant relatives.

Funeral services will be held tomorrow at 2 p. m. at Emmanuel Lutheran Church, conducted by the Rev. Lewis Koon, and interment will be in Emmanuel Cemetery.

Editor Dies

Manslaughter Verdict Given In Morris Case

Jury Fixes Four-Year Term in Slaying of Brother-in-Law.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Harrisonburg, Va., Feb. 28.—After three hours' deliberation a Rockingham Circuit Court jury late today found Alexander B. Morris, 39, who had lived at Rockingham and formerly was employed as a foreman at the Grottoes CCC Camp, guilty of involuntary manslaughter in the death of Henry Raines, 52, his brother-in-law, near Port Republic, last November and fixed his punishment at four years in the penitentiary.

The trial lasted two days and was attended by a capacity crowd of spectators. The State maintained Morris killed Raines in a fight over a quart of moonshine whisky. The defense insisted Morris had nothing to do with the slaying and merely helped to carry the injured man into a nearby house, where Raines was found dead the next morning.

Raines died from a fracture of the skull and there was a wound in his forehead.

Bell Returns; Bond Placed At $10,000

Told Not to Visit Home; Prosecutor Calls Six Witnesses.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Fredericksburg, Va., Feb. 28.—Edward C. Bell, the 60-year-old church deacon who faces a second trial on charges of administering poison to his invalid wife, returned to Fredericksburg this afternoon from the Southwestern State Hospital at Marion, Va., where he had been under observation since his first trial resulted in a hung jury.

Looking pale, thin and haggard the churchman who, four State alienists have declared, now is sane, arrived in the city about 2:45 p. m. in company with City Sergt. J. C. Chichester and Chief of Police S. B. Perry. Proceeding at once to the offices of Judge Frederick W. Coleman in the courthouse, Bell was bonded for $10,000 for his appearance before the corporation court on March 7, at which time the date for his new trial will be set. W. A. Bell, brother of the accused, served as surety on the bond.

Court Fixes Bond.

After reading the court order fixing the bond, Judge Coleman admonished the defendant that the injunction restraining him from visiting his home where his wife resides remained in effect and he must not go to the premises under a penalty of forfeiture of his bond and other court action.

W. W. Butzner asked if it was permissible for Mrs. Bell to see her husband elsewhere, to which Judge Coleman replied:

"If she wishes to see him at some other place that is agreeable to me, but I must take precautions to protect that home."

Mr. Bell left the courthouse in company with his brother, with whom he will stay on Washington avenue until the second trial.

Asks Immediate Trial.

Prosecutor Albert V. Bryan, of Alexandria, has asked for an immediate trial and it was announced today that six prosecution witnesses had been summoned. All of them testified in Mr. Bell's first trial in December.

Carl Laemmle Spikes Latest Report That Universal Has Been Sold Down River

Rumor Angers Old War Horse Of Moviedom

Will Observe Anniversary; Best-Dressers Sought; Theater Notes.

(Reprinted from Yesterday's Last Edition.)

By Nelson B. Bell.

News service wires from the West Coast have sizzled these past several days with a new crop of reports that Universal Pictures Corporation has been sold, lock, stock and barrel, or is about to be, to some unnamed purchaser—usually hinted as John Hay (Jock) Whitney—for a sum reputedly in the neighborhood of $5,000,000.

This column has consistently discounted these rumors for several reasons. Primary among them is a purely personal conviction that $5,000,000 would not buy Universal. Knowing something of the founder's point of view and his pride in perpetuating the company with which he "broke the trust" away back in the days when the motion picture industry really was an infant—and an orphan infant, at that—about three times $5,000,000 would be the sum that might tempt him, if any could.

But it appears from advices just to hand that not any can. Carl Laemmle yesterday sent the following straight-from-the-shoulder message to exhibitors of motion pictures throughout the Nation who are Universal's present and prospective customers:

Count that day lost
Whose low descending sun
Has not seen Universal "sold"
To some wise son-of-a-gun!

I have taken liberties with somebody's famous poem to express, in the above lines, the situation with regard to Universal.

If we can believe the trade papers, old Universal is "sold" not less than once a week. This has been going on for a quarter of a century. It is still going on.

But Universal, like Ol' Man River, it just keeps rolling along!

I have often been asked why I do not deny every fake rumor that is circulated regarding Universal.

The truth is, I haven't the time. If I took time to deny every one of the thousands of rumors, I wouldn't have an hour left for picture-making and picture-selling. And these things seem more important to me than the actual denial of repeated rumors.

So Universal continues to play Ol' Man River and just keeps on rolling along. Somehow, I feel that the average exhibitor is just as well pleased to have Universal continue to roll along. I do not know where the rumors start, but I do not believe they originate with the exhibitors.

Twenty years ago, on March 15, we opened the largest studios in the world at Universal City. We have been far too successful and have learned far too much by experience there to dispose of this property on our anniversary, or any other time.

A Record of Prosperity.

And that seems to be that. There is a record of prosperity back of Universal that probably is not realized by the casual moviegoer of the large Eastern cities. In the old days of the silent picture the two most consistent money makers in the industry were Universal Pictures Corporation and Fox Films Corporation. Neither enjoyed too many of the high-priced, metropolitan first runs, but out in smaller communities, where the $5, 10, $15, and $20 bookings are made, they practically were the beneficiaries of a monopoly.

The profits made from this tremendous volume of "small" business paid for that big plant at Universal City and made it possible for Tom Mix to draw a salary of $10,000 a week years on end, despite the fact that he was never seen off Ninth street but once in the Capital and then disastrously!

So it is not surprising that Universal is not for sale—all of which is going to sound pretty silly if it turns out that "Jock" Whitney has bought it, and for $5,000,000, too!

One of the most remarkable deals in the history of the cinema in this country, incidentally, has just been agreed to between Universal and Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. By this arrangement, the entire production staff, story, personnel and finished footages of "The Great Ziegfeld," which Universal has had in production for the past year, will be transferred bodily to the M-G-M studios.

This transfer arose from two causes. One was that William Powell's time was controlled by M-G-M and could not be by Universal. He was wanted for the title role, but was scheduled for three pictures on his home lot. The other was a disagreement between Universal executives and William Anthony McGuire on production plans and the huge estimated cost of the completed film. Carl Laemmle therefore gave McGuire the privilege of selling the production and all the preliminary work on it to another studio, reimbursing Universal for its expenditure to date. So next week the McGuire unit will move intact to Culver City.

How Not to Grow Old!

Who are Washington's best-dressed women?

Warner Brothers have asked local newspaper fashion editors to decide. And please get me straight—this is no part of the decision, but merely a report of it, as far as it has gone!

Zone Manager John J. Payette of the Warner organization in the Capital wishes to invite those nominated to see Kay Francis in "Living on Velvet," opening tomorrow at the Earle.

Last December, it may be recalled, Miss Francis was named one of the world's ten best-dressed women. Recently she was chosen as the screen's best-dressed woman by the American Fashion Designers. In "Living on Velvet," she wears 30 different costumes, designed by Orry-Kelly—which I am afraid is all the direct "plug" on the picture the publicity department, presided over by Old Dr. Frank LaFalce, need have any reason to expect today.

Nominees Number 22.

So far, 22 Washington women have been named as "best dressed."

Foremost among these, by reason of having been named on more than one list, are Mrs. Campbell Pritchett, Miss Helen Wardman, Mrs. Jasper Dubose and Mrs. William Cushman.

Others selected by those who ought to know include the following: Mrs. Kent Legare, Miss Eleanor Roosevelt, Mrs. John Caswell, Miss Ann Nelson, Mrs. C. Brown Nast, Miss Jacqueline Story, Miss Valerie Prochnik, Mrs. W. Warren Barbour, Mrs. T. Jefferson Coolidge, Mrs. Sam Conner, Mrs. C. Matthews Dick, Mrs. James Clement Dunn, Miss Jane Esther Platt, Mrs. Heywood Newbold, Miss Mary McDowell, Miss Mary Cootes, Baroness van Bruegel Douglas, wife of the Counselor of the Netherlands Legation; Senora Dona Espil, wife of his excellency, the Ambassador of Argentina; Mrs. Oscar Coolican, Mrs. Marshall O. Exnicias, Mrs. Patrick J. Hurley and Mrs. Robert Moran.

Additions, revisions and complaints—if any—should be addressed to the Warner executive offices, in the Earle Theater Building, not to this department, which sticks its neck out sufficiently often, as it is!

And who should it be on the other end of one of the C. & P. Telephone Co.'s livelier wires yesterday but Mr. Charles Warren McClintock, that eminent publicist, globe-trotter and bon vivant, just back in town from a successful season as avant courier for that distinguished actress, Miss Cornelia Otis Skinner, and her delightful repertoire of dramatic sequences and character sketches!

Mr. McClintock's pause in the city of his adoption is to be a brief one. In a few days, one learns with feelings of some contempt for those who can't "take it" when the temperature gets below 105 degrees Fahrenheit, he will ease his rickety torso into the tropical splendors of Palm Beach, Fla., where he still believes that fountain really exists even if Ponce de Leon had no luck whatever in locating it! After a little Grade A basking in Palm Beach, Mr. McClintock will proceed to the training camps of the big league ball clubs, conditioning in the South, where he will sit on the sidelines sipping long, cool ones while the lads in uniform work off that extra poundage. The big so-and-so!

Columbians Climb High.

Roles created on the Broadway stage by some of America's foremost actors will be assumed by a cast of local favorites when the Columbia Players present Chekhov's "Uncle Vanya" in Pierce Hall, Fifteenth and Harvard streets northwest, on Wednesday and Thursday nights, March 13 and 14.

Eileen Fowler, as Helena, and Wayne Bobst, as Uncle Vanya, will have the roles played by Lillian Gish and Walter Connolly when Jed Harris produced the play in New York five years ago. The role played by Osgood Perkins in the Broadway production will be taken by Arthur Westover in the local presentation, and Dorothea Lewis, as Sonia, will play the Johanna Roos part. Joe Bourne, Wade Robinson, Bess Dyer and Dorothy M. White complete the Columbia Players' cast.

The production is in charge of Aurora Poston, with Jane Lasater Rubey as technical director. The costumes, which are of the late 1880s, have been designed by Maria Howard, formerly costume designer for the Munich Civic Theater.

Tickets will be on sale at the T. Arthur Smith Bureau, 1330 G street, with reserved seats priced at 85 cents.

Sidney B. Lust, one of the motion picture industry's most inveterate post-carders, who is attending the annual national convention of the Motion Picture Theater Owners of America in New Orleans, La., mails one of which the gist is, "Lots of everything here and then some." What with the Mardi Gras, horse racing, a golf tournament and a few other items, in addition to the convention, I am inclined to think that perhaps Sid is right.

Mr. Lust you will immediately identify, of course, as one of the Capital's more prominent independent exhibitors, operating several houses in Washington and others in nearby Maryland and Virginia. Upon turning Mr. Lust's card over, I find on the reverse side a view of the New Orleans water front in 1852, probably the approximate date of Mr. Lust's first visit to the Crescent City!

What's-in-a-Name Note.

"Shark Island" has been selected by Darryl Zanuck as the title of the forthcoming Twentieth Century production based on the life of the physician who attended Booth after the shooting of President Lincoln.

His name was Mudd!

Theater Bills For New Week Are Announced

(Reprinted from Yesterday's Last Edition.)

In "Clive of India" Ronald Colman is said to reveal a new and unsuspected power as the young clerk who conquered all of India in one short year. Through the picture, which will begin its local first-run engagement in the Palace Theater tomorrow, also runs a love story that will engage the sympathetic interest of all lovers of romance. Loretta Young is the youthful actress who is cast opposite Colman in the feminine lead. Richard Boleslavsky directed "Clive of India." The supporting cast includes Francis Lister, hailed as one of the year's real "finds;" Colin Clive, C. Aubrey Smith and Caesar Romero. News events, with running comment by Edwin C. Hill; a Mickey Mouse cartoon comedy and a Laurel & Hardy subject will complete the bill.

"Living on Velvet" is the title of the new vehicle for Kay Francis, to be seen for the first time in Washington as chief feature of the screen bill announced for the week beginning tomorrow at the Earle Theater. Two leading men support the star in the persons of Warren William and George Brent. The stage portion of the new bill will be headlined by the Dorsey brothers and their orchestra, with additional acts by Paul Kirkland, "the high stepper," and Robert Williams and Red Rust, a boy and his dog. Bob Crosby, young brother of Bing, and Kay Weber, are soloists with the orchestra. The program will be rounded out by newsreel and house orchestra, under the baton of C. Frederick Clark.

* * * * *

Janet Gaynor and Warner Baxter are the costars of "One More Spring," coming to the screen at Loew's Fox Theater for the week beginning tomorrow. In the supporting cast of this plaintive tale of three unfortunates who spend the winter in a park toolhouse, are Walter King, Jane Darwell, Roger Imhof, Grant Mitchell, Rosemary Ames, Nick Foran and Stepin Fetchit. Dave Apollon will bring his new revue to the Fox stage to headline the vaudeville half of the bill. It fetaures Lowe, Burnoff and Wensley, dancers; Danzi Goodell, Rosemary Deering, Six Arabian Sheiks, 12 Danny Dare girls and Apollon's famous Hawaiian Orchestra. Fox Movietone News and orchestra, with Phil Lampkin, will complete the entertainment.

* * * *

As the second attraction of its newly inaugurated policy of presenting foreign-made films exclusively, the Belasco Theater, beginning Friday, will present "Power," a Gaumont-British production, adapted from the novel by Feuchtwanger. "Power" is one of the most pretentious undertakings G-B has essayed and brings to the screen in the principal roles such well-known players as Conrad Veidt, Gerald Du Maurier, Cedric Hardwicke and Benita Hume. Thirty players of less importance appear in the secondary roles. The central figure in the story is a brilliant financial genius. The bill will be supplemented by short sound subjects.

* * * *

Earl Derr Biggers' famous detective, Charlie Chan, will take possession of the screen at the Columbia Theater beginning tomorrow, when Warner Oland once more will impersonate the intrepid sleuth in "Charlie Chan in Paris." Mary Brian has the foremost feminine role in this latest in the Shan series to reach the silver sheet. Others in the cast include John Miljan, Murray Kinnell, Minor Watson, Henry Kolker, Ruth Peterson and Erik Rhodes. Short sound subjects will be added.

* * * *

By reason of the phenomenal business the picture is attracting, RKO-Keith's announce the continuance of "The Scarlet Pimpernel," starring Leslie Howard, with Merle Oberon, Raymond Massey and others of note, through a second week on Fifteenth street, beginning tomorrow. This sterling picturization of the Baroness Orczy novel is breaking house records and far exceeding the popularity, so far, of "It Happened One Night," which enjoyed a five weeks' run exactly one year ago. "The Scarlet Pimpernel" eventually will be succeeded by Irene Dunne, Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers in "Roberta."

* * * *

"Devil Dogs of the Air," starring James Cagney and Pat O'Brien, with Margaret Lindsay in the principal feminine assignment, will resume its downtown run at the Metropolitan Theater tomorrow. Like its two famous predecessors, "Here Comes the Navy" and "Flirtation Walk," this film was made with the active cooperation of the United States Government. It will be supplemented by a bandreel, featuring Charlie Davis and His Orchestra and a full 15-minute newsreel.

* * * *

A change in program is announced by the Monte Carlo Ballet Russe, which returns to the National Theater for matinee and evening performances on Sunday, under the local management of the T. Arthur Smith Concert Bureau. The afternoon program will open with "La Scuola di Ballo," followed by "Aurora's Wedding," "The Sleeping Beauty" and the Polovetzian dances from Borodin's "Prince Igor." At night, "La Boutique Fantasque" first Washington presentation of "Les Presages" (Omens) and "The Three-Cornered Hat" will be offered.

* * * *

The Carroll Sisters, probably the most popular sister team in burlesque, will be the stars of the "Brevities" company coming to the Gayety Theater for a week's engagement, beginning with the customary Sunday matinee. The comedy cohorts will be led by Bobby Vail, a Dutch dialect comedian. Lloyd and Murray, reunited, will render yeomen's service. The distaff disturbers will include Dorothy De Haven, Marion La Mar and Joan Dare. The extra added attraction will be Nora Ford.

Dionnes, Government Agree on Quintuplets

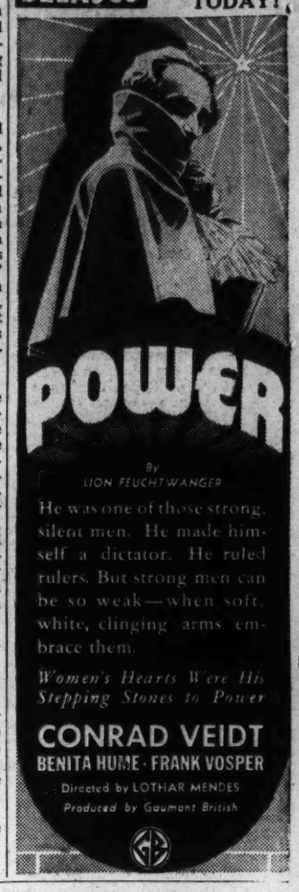

Toronto, Feb. 28 (AP).—Premier Mitchell F. Hepburn said today the Dionnes agree with the Ontario government that the quintuplets, 9 months old today, should not be placed upon exhibition at the peril of their health.

The Ontario premier made the statement after a conference with Paul Martin, the parents' counsel.

Martin declared the conference was "satisfactory," but said he and the premier had agreed to reveal no details until a final settlement was reached.

Wild Crowd Hails Ruth At Boston

City Officials Join in Welcome After Wait of 15 Years.

May Play in 100 Games This Year, Babe Says; Signs Contract.

By the Associated Press.

BOSTON, Feb. 28.—A wild-eyed, cheering mob at the tiny Trinity place railroad station tonight almost lifted the roof as it welcomed Babe Ruth back to Boston after a 15-year absence.

Police kept most of the crowd on the upper level of the station, but several hundred managed to get down to the incoming train platform where Police Commissioner Eugene M. McSweeney and Supt. Martin H. King gre ted Ruth.

Mrs. Ruth was presented with a bouquet of roses and went to the Copley Plaza Hotel, where the major events on the welcome Ruth program were to be held.

Fuchs Board Train.

Ruth and his party finally pushed through the swirling crowd and made their way to a hotel, where the Bambino retired to wash off the stains of travel.

Then he sat down with President Fuchs and C. F. Adams, owners of the Braves, to sign the contract that guarantees him a salary of $25,000 for whatever playing he does, $5,000 for executive work and a share in the club's profits.

100 Games, Maybe.

After the signing the Babe warily backed against a wall to take an onslaught of questions.

Where would he play? Wherever they needed him. But the sun field is out.

"I haven't played in the sun field in 15 years," he said.

He thought he would be able to compete in 100 games.

"The only time I won't be in there is when I can't be."

He said he was in shape to play in the Braves' exhibition games.

Observers were of the opinion that Ruth, after this season, would become manager and that Bill McKechnie, present manager, would be given the post of general manager.

At Beck and Call.

"How will you get along with McKechnie?" he was asked.

"I'll do whatever McKechnie wants me to do," the Babe replied.

"Will you become manager in 1936?"

"There is nothing definite about my managing the club in 1936."

"If McKechnie got through this season would you step in?"

"I suppose I'd have to."

Asked if he would invest in the Braves' club, Ruth said it would be a matter of years before he would invest in the club, and that then it would depend on how well the club was faring.

Old Shore League May Operate Again

Reorganization Is Urged by National Association.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Salisbury, Feb. 28.—With the support of the National Association of Professional Baseball Leagues, agitation has been started here and in other towns for a revival of the old Eastern Shore League which suspended operation as a Class D circuit eight years ago.

In a communication to former officials of the Shore League clubs, including S. Franklyn Woodcock and Clarence W. Whealton, president and vice president, respectively, of the erstwhile Salisbury club, Joe F. Carr, director of the promotion department of the National Association, urges the clubs to organize for operation this season.

Cape Charles and Parksley, Va., Crisfield, Salisbury, Cambridge and Easton, Md., comprised the circuit when it suspended.

Although the Shore League has not operated for nearly a decade, a half dozen of its former players, including Cochrane, Foxx and Clint Brown, remain major league headliners.

Lambros and Cassell Star in Annapolis Clash.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Annapolis, Md., Feb. 28.—American University, of Washington, bowed to St. John's College, of Annapolis, at basket ball tonight for the second time this season. The score was 35 to 17.

At the intermission, the Johnnies were in front, 23 to 10.

Lambros, St. John's forward, was a veritable sharpshooter. The work of Cassell, of the Eagles, was almost as impressive.

Dawson Pressed In Carnival Golf

All Favorites Advance in New Orleans Play.

New Orleans, Feb. 28.—Favorites emerged with flying colors today in first-round play of the fourth annual carnival golf tournament.

Johnnie Dawson, of Chicago, was the only ranking player to encounter difficulty. He found plenty of opposition in a little-known Jefferson City (Mo.) youth, J. P. Leslie, who carried him to the eighteenth hole before acknowledging defeat.

Johnnie Goodman, of Omaha, Nebr., former United States open champion, and Freddie Haas, jr., 19-year-old New Orleans youth, who holds the Southern amateur title, won easy victories.

W. & L. Wins In Court Tourney

Joins Tarheel Fives in Semifinals of Title Event.

By the Associated Press.

RALEIGH, N. C., Feb. 28.—Washington and Lee's defending champions tonight joined the three Tarheel representatives—North Carolina, Duke and N. C. State—in the semifinals of the Southern Conference championship basket ball tournament as the result of a 29-to-25 triumph over Clemson.

Earlier in the evening, Carolina's favored White Phantoms had crushed South Carolina, 46 to 25. In the afternoon first-round games, N. C. State conquered V. M. I., 42 to 30, and Duke eliminated Virginia, 39 to 32.

The Generals tonight rallied to turn back the Tiger quintet, which held a 15-to12 margin at the half. North Carolina was never in danger against the Gamecocks, leading by 18 to 9 at the intermission.

Tomorrow night's semifinals will pit North Carolina against N. C. State, while Washington and Lee opposes Duke. The survivors clash Saturday night for the title.

Clarendon Stars Invade Norfolk

Bowlers, Led by Clarke, Would Retain Title.

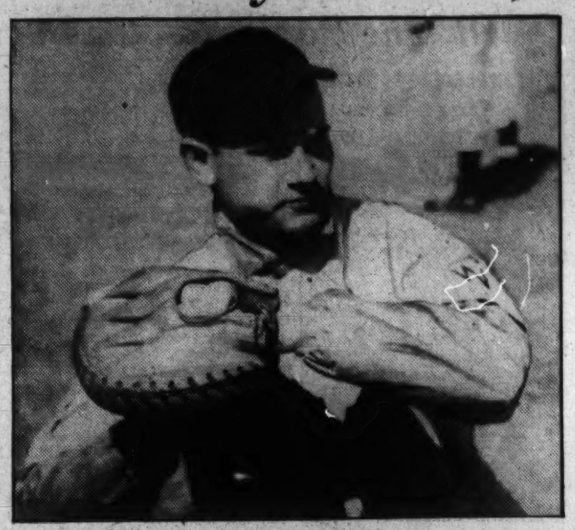

Astor Clarke and his A. L. Kelley & Son team, of Clarendon, Va., will journey to Norfolk tomorrow to defend their championship of the Virginia State tournament won at Rosslyn, Va., last season.

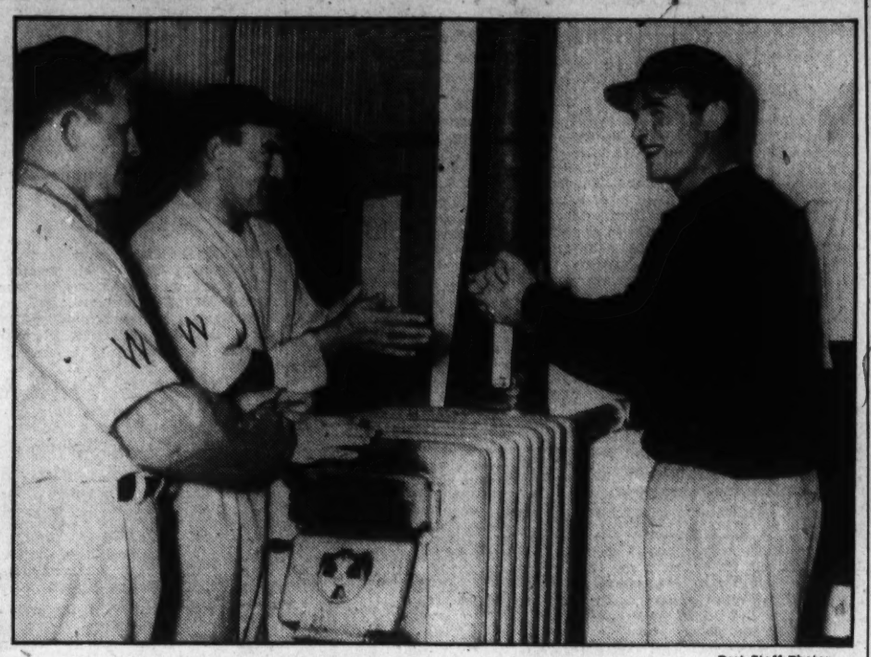

The A. L. Kelley & Son team will be represented by the same bowlers. Astor Clarke will be ably supported by Bill Kingsolver, Russell Spillman, Gene Gordon, Belvin Weekly and Thurston Furr.

Three titles were annexed by the Clarendon duckpinners last year. The team carried away top honors with an 1,802 set; Furr and Clarke rolled 789 to win the doubles crown and Astor Clarke totaled 1,172 to capture the all-events title.

By Jack Cuddy.
United Press Sports Writer.

NEW YORK, Feb. 28.—Now that Babe Ruth has gone to Boston, who will take his place in the Yankee right field? Who will patrol the greensward vacated by the game's greatest showman? Who will try to make the "Ruthville" bleacher fans forget the grandeur of barrel-bodied spindle-legged Bam?

George Selkirk is the guy.

"Twinkle-Toes" Selkirk, so ticklish that he giggled out of wrestling into baseball, has been selected by Yankee brass hats for the ticklish job.

The brawny 6-footer, who bounced around the International League like a rubber dollar for the past six years and who was ready to quit baseball in disgust only last spring, suddenly finds himself ogled by Dame Fortune and given a chance to strut where the spotlight beams brightest—right where Ruth stood.

According to present plans, Selkirk will be in right field when the season opens. Bullet Ben Chapman will be in left. Between these buffer men Earle Combs will attempt to carry on, protected on both sides to prevent another fence crash like the one at St. Louis last summer which fractured Earle's skull. It is an outfield that may be very good or pathetic, depending on how Combs and Selkirk come through.

Selkirk was bought back from Newark by the Yanks when last season was more than two-thirds over. He played in 46 games with New York, usually in left field, and hit .313. In the previous 105 games with Newark he batted .358.

The Yanks figure he will make a fine showing this season if he polishes up his fielding. He was called "Twinkle Toes" because he is so fast in the outer garden. Despite this speed, however, he is somewhat awkward as a fly-chaser. He is expected to do more distance hitting because last season he cut down on his swing against big league pitching, to gain confidence.

Moreover, Babe Ruth, a playful feller, will not be around to tickle Selkirk. Last season the Bambino had George jumping around the dugout like a distraught flea.

Red Sox Work Despite 32 Degrees

By a Special Correspondent.

SARASOTA, Fla., Feb. 28.—Disregarding the cold wave of 32 degrees above zero, Joe Cronin today put the Boston Red Sox baseball squad through its first workout under his management.

Simple throwing, bunting and jogging around the field comprised the initial session. Most of the players also took a turn at the medicine ball, with Trainer Roland Logan doing the pitching and a few slightly rotund stomachs the catching.

Lefty Grove's arm appeared to be in good condition. The arm and shoulder girdle is well relaxed and appears to have no congested area, according to Trainer Logan.

Bill Werber, star infielder from Washington, was the first member of the squad to arrive last Sunday, the first to enter training quarters this morning and probably will continue to be a leader in various items as he is showing excellent spirit and scrappiness.

Cronin's first statement to the Boston newshawks was that this year's Red Sox will be a fighting ball club.

Wins Class Title.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Martinsburg, W. Va., Feb. 28.—The freshmen team won the class basket ball championship at the high school here yesterday afternoon by defeating the junior girls in a spirited game, 24 to 15.

If Dempsey Had Beaten Tunney, What Then? But Mauler Says, "He Did Me Great Favor"

By Paul Gallico.
A Special Correspondent.

NEW YORK, Feb. 28.—Herewith beginneth a new series. It will be called "If" and will appear here from time to time. It will be purely imaginative. If you have any "ifs" that you would like answered, send them to me. I may not have the right answer. What is an "if" and how is it worked? Very simple. It goes something like this:

From a story of the second Dempsey-Tunney world's heavyweight championship prize fight, Thursday night, September 23, 1927 . . . "In the seventh round, suddenly Tunney went down and out from a sudden vicious flurry that Dempsey unleashed, with Tunney on the ropes. Right, left, right, crashed against Tunney's jaw, as a terrific scream burst from the throats of 150,000 spectators. Down sank Tunney on his back, his head hit the floor, his mouth was open and gasping; with his left hand he clutched at the lower strand of the ropes. He was out. No question about it. His legs refused to function. His mind was gone.

"What was happening? Dempsey had gone to the nearest corner. It happened to be his own. The referee turned his back on Tunney and motioned Dempsey to go to another corner. Dempsey did not understand. The referee moved over to Dempsey, took him by the arm and motioned him to another corner. Dempsey finally ran to the southeast corner and the referee then turned to observe Tunney. He had not counted up to this time. The timekeeper, however, had been counting, but when did he start? The referee picked up at 2 and counted to 9 when Tunney was able to get up. . . . and went into ignominious but clever retreat and retained his championship."

What if Dempsey had gone to the proper corner immediately, and the story had ended thus . . . "Dempsey ran quickly to a neutral corner . . . at the count of 5 Tunney stirred . . . but it was no use . . . Dempsey was again heavyweight champion of the world . . ."

M-m-m. If. If he just had made Tunney get up three or four seconds sooner than he did, Dempsey would have been champion of the world again. That was seven and a half years ago. This is February, 1935. Whose lives would have been affected if Dempsey had taken those right steps instead of the wrong ones? Would Max Baer be heavyweight champion of the world today? Would Carnera ever have been champion? Would Gene Tunney be the father of two boys? Would Dempsey have been the father of a girl? Would your life have been affected in any way? Would Madison Square Garden be any different? Would Leo P. Flynn, then Dempsey's manager, still be alive today? Would Dempsey still be champion? Would Harry Wills still be on his trail? Would there have been a Dempsey-Schmeling fight? Would Dempsey have returned? Would Tunney have married Polly Lauder? Would there have been a third Dempsey-Tunney fight?

Matmen Open Conference Tourney

Begin Competition Today; N. C. State and V.M.I. Threaten W. & L.

By the Associated Press.

LEXINGTON, Va., Feb. 28.—Southern Conference wrestlers gathered here tonight for the annual tournament, with Washington and Lee's title and long record of victories jeopardized principally by the presence of strong teams from North Carolina State and V. M. I.

The grapplers, representing six institutions, will weigh in tomorrow at 11 a. m. and the pairings will be made shortly afterward. First-round matches will begin at 3 p. m. and the semifinals will start at 7:30 p. m. Finals will be at 7:30 p. m. on Saturday night.

Bonino Meets Farley.

Hugo Bonino, captain of W. and L., and conference heavyweight champion—the only defending champion—probably will meet his strongest opposition in Farley, of V. M. I. Undefeated this season, Bonino has saved at least two meets for the Generals, getting falls in the matches with North Carolina State and Michigan that turned the score to his team. So far none has been able to match his 233 pounds of brawn and clever wrestling tactics.

In the 118-pound class, Rowland Thomas, of the Generals, title holder in that division two years ago, is regarded as likely to repeat, but will have to defeat the speedy Umstead, of North Carolina, to regain his laurels.

Others Outstanding.

Currance, captain of the V. M. I. matmen; Efland, captain of North Carolina, and Ed Seitz, Washington and Lee veteran, are considered outstanding in the 165-pound class.

Ardolino, one of the two men entered by Duke, who has gone through this season without a defeat despite his team's poor record, is a threat in the 145-pound class.

Play Opens Today At Shepherdstown

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Martinsburg, W. Va., Feb. 28.—Drawings for the Eastern Panhandle Sectional High School Basket Ball Tournament, which starts tomorrow afternoon and runs through Saturday, follow:

Martinsburg vs. Hedgesville.
Charles Town vs. Harpers Ferry.
Shepherdstown vs. Bunker Hill.
Paw Paw vs. Berkeley Springs.

Martinsburg, Charles Town, Shepherdstown and Paw Paw were the seeded fives, selected on the basis of their seasonal showings in the league. The tournament will be played on the floor of Shepherd College at Shepherdstown.

1,500 See Garibaldi Throw Fred Grobmier

Gino Garibaldi, Italy, defeated Fred Grobmier, Iowa, in a three-fall wrestling match witnessed by 1,500 fans at the Auditorium last night. Garibaldi won the first fall in 19 minutes with a squash hold. The second fall went to Grobmier in 15 minutes on a body scissors. The deciding fall was awarded to Garibaldi on a disqualification after 8 minutes when Grobmier knocked down Referee Cyclone Burns.

In a semifinal scheduled for 45 minutes, Dick Daviscourt tossed Son Jennings in 20 minutes with a body press and arm lock. In 30-minute preliminaries, Abe Goldberg and Boros Demetrith worked to a draw and Andy Rasher gained an 18½-minue fall over Jim Henry with a flying scissors.

This Morning . . .

With Shirley Povich

Biloxi, Miss., Feb. 28.

THE difference between Dizzy Dean and Babe Ruth was typified for baseball followers the other day when both found occasion to issue statements. Dean may be the greatest pitcher in baseball and every bit as great a character as Ruth, but he has succeeded in endearing himself to fans about as much as rain in the fifth inning.

DIZZY DEAN.

While Ruth was saying the right thing upon his entrance into the National League with the Braves, declaring that he welcomed the opportunity of batting against such pitchers as the Deans and Hubbell, whom he understood were certainly great pitchers, the Dizzy One was working up a fine case of hate against the man, who, more than any other player in baseball history, made it possible for ball players to earn big money.

Dizzy "resented," he said, the Babe's intrusion into the National League. Why didn't he stay in the American where he made all his money, Dizzy asked. He would put Ruth on the pan at every opportunity, the beloved character of the Cardinals added. The only thing he left unsaid was his probable intention to add injury to insult by dusting the Babe off when they meet as pitcher and batter.

DEAN'S statement might have been taken as a press agent's gag, except for the fact that Dizzy has no press agent. Long ago he discovered that he needed none as long as he continued to win ball games and keep talking. A press agent for Dean would be as superfluous as a second Hitler. A man gifted with such pitching ability as Dean's, and such loose vowels, can break into print without trying, which doesn't mean that Dizzy doesn't try.

RUTH himself was no shrinking violet in his younger days, but he never went out of his way to insult his colleagues. He did have a profound dislike for the late manager, Miller Huggins, but to his credit he later attempted and succeeded in setting matters aright between Huggins, himself and the New York public. He possessed the force of character to make fans and ball players forget that he was once a pouter and a sulker by turning square at the peak of his success and earning the respect of players and public alike.

Perhaps it was because Ruth was better advised than Dean, who has discovered that success covers a multitude of personality sins in baseball. There was the time in Washington during the 1928 season when the Babe, a confirmed supporter of Al Smith in the presidential race, refused to heed photographers' requests and pose with Smith's rival candidate, Herbert Hoover.

The Babe simply had an imbiding faith in the Democratic nominee and his refusal to pose with Hoover was intended as no insult. He saw no reason for it and construed it only as a potential shock to his friend, Al Smith. Thus, he was the victim of simple faith in Smith, for the story of the Babe's act was broadcast throughout the land and the reaction was terrific.

RUTH saw the error of his action almost immediately. That is, his manager, Christy Walsh, convinced him over the long-distance telephone that he had been a very foolish fellow. So the Babe attempted later that evening to do the right thing. He had misunderstood the photographers' request, he said, had intended no insult to Mr. Hoover, and would be glad at any time to pose with such an estimable gentleman. The Babe was like that.

Biloxi Bunts.

MANAGER BUCKY HARRIS' appearance on the field tomorrow will be sad news to at least six of the uninvited rookies . . . they will be shooed home to make room in the dressing rooms for the regular pitchers who arrive on Saturday . . . but with 18 pitchers on the squad, any kid who pretends to be a catcher will be kept until the Nats break camp on March 29 . . . Owner Clark Griffith was confined to his room today with a digestive disorder . . . the two-buck green fee which the Biloxi Golf Course is charging the ball players is doing the front lawn of the Biloxi Hotel no good . . . divots litter the place when the players get in their golf with mashieniblick and pitch shots directed at the flower pots . . . Dick Lanahan, the Washington sandlot hero, was at the park in mufti today, nursing a wrenched ankle . . . Pitcher Bump Hadley, who will join the squad here Saturday, is the father of a 3-month-old rookie . . . The Biloxi slot machines this year are streamlined and extremely modernistic . . . but they pay off strictly in the old-fashioned way . . . every day is pay day for the shrimp packers here and the nickels flow in and out of the machines, mostly in, on pay day . . . the concessionaires are thinking of installing electric buttons instead of the old-fashioned pull-down levers on the machines to save wear and tear on the customers . . . you're not a native unless you have hit the jack-pot in Biloxi.

Perth Amboy, N. J., (AP).—Joe Medwick, hard hitting outfielder of the St. Louis Cardinals, today left Perth Amboy General Hospital, where his tonsils were removed two days ago.

Medwick, who returned to his Carteret home with his mother, said he was feeling "fine" and was waiting to hear from the St. Louis ball club about his contract.

By Shirley L. Povich.
A Staff Correspondent.

BILOXI, Miss., Feb. 28.—Official Biloxi welcomed Manager Bucky Harris to the Washington training camp tonight. He stepped off the train in company with Coach Nick Altrock, was dutifully greeted by the mayor, his official family, and the Chamber of Commerce, and then Harris and Altrock went their different ways.

Harris betook himself to the Nats' hotel to confer with Owner Clark Griffith and Altrock was escorted to the West End Fire Department atop a speeding hose cart with sirens open as befits an honorary chief of the West End Fire Department.

Owner Griffith was not among the welcoming delegation. He was confined to his hotel room today with a digestive disorder and Harris' first action was to pay respects to his boss, while Altrock annihilated a heap of shrimp at the firehouse.

Conference Is Short.

Their conference was short, and, according to Harris, only perfunctory. They did not discuss the holdout troubles that are besetting the club and threatening Harris' attempts to place his strongest team on the field.

"We never discuss players' salaries, Griffith and I," said Harris. "That's his job, to keep the players in line, and I don't interfere because I know he wants no interference."

"I'm starting from scratch, you know," Harris said. "I don't know how any of these lads shape up, and perhaps its lucky for them. I didn't sign to manage the team until after the season was over, and none of these rookies are my choice. Perhaps it's better for them that it's that way. I'll have an open mind and it will be strictly up to them.

"Anyway, every lad down here will have his chance. His future will be strictly in his own hands. I want to take a look at all of them and if there are any big leaguers among 'em, why, nobody will be happier than I."

Thomas, Mills Arrive.

Overlooked by the welcoming delegation at the station when they descended at a different end of the car were Pitcher Al Thomas and Mrs. Thomas, and Joe Mills, the young Washington sandlotter, whose tryout with the Nats is being financed by The Washington Post.

At a press conference later tonight Harris declared he was not only prepared to enter the pennant race with his present roster, but under the circumstances, was forced to stand on the squad as it is currently constituted.

"Mr. Griffith is in the market for at least another pitcher, but I know how difficult it is to get one," said Harris. "That's the only phase of the club that worries me, and, if we have luck, it might not be among my worries."

Advised Lyn Lary.

Harris revealed that Shortstop Lyn Lary had telegraphed him, before his departure here, seeking his aid in settling the player's contract squabble with Grifith. Lary played under Harris la styear at Boston.

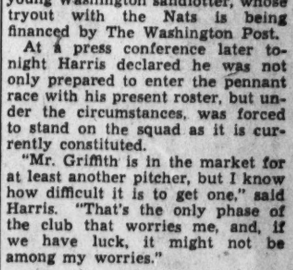

"I told Lary I'd be glad to help him," said Harris, "but I advised him to reduce the figure he was demanding."

Harris leaned toward Lary as the club's regular shortstop, but declared that Ossie Bluege was still a powerful contender for the job. In any event, no matter which was the successful candidate, he foresaw no difficulties at shortstop. "Lary's youth is in his favor, and he's a better man on the bases than Bluege," said Bucky, "but you can't discount a ball player like Ossie."

High Hopes for Powell.

High hopes that Jake Powell, the former Takoma Park sandlotter, would justify the promise he showed with Albany last year when he was the third leading batter in the International League, was expressed by Harris.

"We cna use a bit more strength in our outfield and if Powell makes good, I'll be happy. It will mean thath as beaten out a man like Fred Schulte, and the felow who can do that is quite an outfielder. From what I have heard about him, though, Powell has that chance."

TOUGH

Some Knight Is Second In Mile

Chartres, Choice, Fails; Six of Seven Events Claiming Races.

By the Associated Press.

HIALEAH PARK, Fla., Feb. 28. Kindacorn, which has been racing successfully over the turf course, returned to competition over the main track here today, and, although sadly neglected in the betting, won the fifth event of 1 mile in easy fashion. The mare, claimed out of her last race by A. Papa, registered by a length at odds of $43.70 for $2, running the 8 furlongs in 1:37 3-5.

Some Knight, coupled with Long Bit, took the place by a length from Broad Meadows, while Long Bit was a tired fourth.

A featureless program was offered, six of the seven being claiming events, with the fifth attracting the best field.

Changed Hands Twice.

Kindacorn originally ran in A. Papa's silks this season, but she was claimed for $1,500. She changed hands a second time before returning to her old stable for $2,000, and today the mare ran for $2,500.

Chartres was favorite in the eight-horse field. He chased the early pace cut out by Broad Meadows and then dropped entirely out of contention. Kindacorn, showing more early foot than she did on the grass, moved up fast around the final bend. Collaring Broad Meadows turning for home, she opened up a safe lead. Some Knight finished resolutely, but Meade was easing up the winner in the closing strides.

Those who journeyed here for a day of sport this afternoon found a very chilly, strong wind blowing and those without overcoats found conditions decidedly uncomfortable. The opening dash for juveniles saw 14 maiden colts and geldings chasing down the 3-furlong chute with the wind at their backs. Lemont, the $4.70 favorite, led the field all the way, running straight down the inside path and holding on gamely to beat Willow Wood, always the chief threat, by a neck. Dnieper closed fast to finish third, two lengths behind. Aided by the wind, the winner made the fast time of :33 4-5.

Rain Delays Net Play.

Hamilton, Bermuda, Feb. 28 (AP). Rain today caused postponement until tomorrow of semifinal matches in the annual Bermuda lawn tennis championships.

At the Post . . .

with Bill Bennings.

Dear Al:

Hialeah Race Track, Feb. 28.

It is just possible that the trip to California did some good after all. Since returning to old Miami shore Bennings, Inc., seems to have turned into a three-a-day firm instead of the usual two-a-day proposition. Our three today were Lemont, Stavka and Shot and Shell. In addition we had two seconds and our usual quota in the money. The betting here is bouncing merrily along. The daily average for the 36 racing days is $299,088 and the total wagering is $1,418,809 ahead of last year. Black Helen's victory of yesterday has made the Bradley filly prominent in the Florida Derby field, and she has been cut to 2-1 in the future book for the race. George Phillips is leading the local trainers for the $500 track prize. Jockey Silvio Coucci, who has made two round trips to the West Coast by air, says that he likes to draw his pay for airplane riding as well as for horse riding. In fact, Coucci has ambitions of owning a plane. Trainer Joe received a note from his landlady today. It seems she followed up on Sun Monk and cashed a good bet when he won. "All is forgiven," the note read, "come and get your suitcase."

BILL.

First race—Zowie appears to be a rather solid sort of juvenile. Has earned his way hereabouts and seems to have found a spot in this race. Haines breaks him off the rail and I expect no mistakes. Banderilla and Deliberate are the pair likely to cause trouble.

Second race—Impromptu draws Johnny Gilbert as the rider and a weight assignment of 117 pounds. I believe he can win despite the heavy poundage. Scotch Soldier for the place and Waterset to show. The latter may surprise under Coucci's handling.

Third race—Knight's Hope is far down the list, but is too fit to disregard. Gets in with only steadying weight. Idle Along's recent form is good and this one will be there or thereabouts when the money is sighted in the stretch. Judge Schilling, the ancient one, has a fighting chance.

Fourth race—Cristate has run in-and-out races since arriving at this course. Tomorrow will be an "in" day, I understand. Wright is entrusted with the jockey work. Seawick will be ready if the top one makes mistakes. Show Boy to show.

Fifth race—Tearout has several impressive races to recommend him in this field. A competent ride by Merritt is all that is needed. Billy Bee and St. Moritz are at tops now and will be hard to nudge out of the money circle.

Sixth race—Col. Greene breaks from the outside in this mile test and figures to do a lot of running. Asked to carry 112 pounds, but he is used to weight. Grampa's Boy is a possible surprise. Stickhandle to take care of the others.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—LEMONT, $4.70, $3.30, $2.80; WILLOW WOOD, $8.80, $4.80; DNIEPER, $3.00.

LEMONT, under a hustling ride from the start, was kept going and held on well. WILLOW WOOD drew away from the rest of the field in final sixteenth and was wearing the winner down. DNIEPER worked his way over from the outside and was finished gamely. SUN ASIA, away well, ran a good race. PLAYFUL TOUR ran in front bandages.

SECOND RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $800; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 2:58½. Off at 3:03½. Winner, J. Lowenstein's ch. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—OUR DAVID, $8.80, $3.20, $3.10; MY PURCHASE, $2.90, $2.70; SUN CLOISTER, $5.50.

OUR DAVID, away well, was allowed to rate along to stretch, where he closed with a rush and won in final stride. MY PURCHASE ran into lead entering stretch, but weakened in last 20 yards. SUN CLOISTER came around field and was gaining rapidly on the leaders. ST. OMER had plenty of speed for five furlongs, then tired.

THIRD RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $800; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 3:34½. Off at 3:40½. Winner, A. C. Urban's ch. f. Two-dollar mutuels paid—FAKE, $7.80, $3.00, $2.70; BLESSED AGAIN, $2.60, $2.30; JANEY LEE, $3.60.

FAKE, under light weight, ran into lead just after the start, displayed good speed, and easily held race safe. BLESSED AGAIN was ridden with poor judgment.

FIFTH RACE—One mile (out of chute). Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 4:45½. Off at 4:47. Winner, A. Papa's b. m. Two-dollar mutuels paid—KINDACORN, $43.70, $10.80, $5.70; SOME KNIGHT, $3.70, $2.80; BROAD MEADOWS, $3.60.

KINDACORN was kept well up to the middle of the turn, where boy sent him up and into lead. He drew away and won nicely in hand. SOME KNIGHT trailed far back for six furlongs, came with a rush, and was a fast-going second. BROAD MEADOWS had plenty of speed and made a game effort.

SIXTH RACE—One mile (out of chute). Purse, $800; claiming. For 3-year-olds. Start good. Won easily; place, same. Went to post at 5:20. Off at 5:22. Winner, A. W. Abbott's b g. (3) by Bright Knight—Loma Linda. Trained by S. Judge. Value to winner, $600; second, $125; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 1:38 3-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—STAVKA, $4.60, $3.40, $3.00; PANALONG, $6.10, $5.20; THE AENEAD, $7.90.

STAVKA was much the best. He broke well, was rated along on inside to the far turn, where he was taken to outside, assumed lead entering stretch, and won going away. PANALONG, badly outrun for the first half-mile, moved up with a rush on the outside and finished gamely. THE AENEAD was hustled along from the start and ran a good race. LULU LITE showed speed for a half-mile.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles (on the turf). Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 5:55. Off at 5:56. Winner B. B. Stable's ch. g. (4), by Man o' War—Maimouna. Trained by H. Jacobs. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:52 2-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—SHOT AND SHELL, $6.80, $3.20, $3.10; FOUR SPOT, $6.30, $4.60; FLOWERY, $7.70.

SHOT AND SHELL was much the best. He was sent to the front with a rush, was rated along to the middle of the turn, where he drew away and won nicely in hand. FOUR SPOT moved up very fast around turn and ran a good race.

23 Catholic U. Gridmen Get Letters

Eight of Group Seniors; Numerals Awarded to Freshmen.

TWENTY-THREE members of Catholic University's football squad, eight of them seniors, were awarded letters yesterday at an assembly of the student body. The "C's" were presented by Bill Barron, president of the Student Council.

Hyattsville, Silver Spring Get Places; Nugent Is Outstanding.

By Merrell W. Whittlesey.

AN all-star team, representative of the best that the first Intersuburban League can produce, leaves little to be desired for a high-scoring, smooth-working and defensive quintet. Three members of the champion Alexandria High School five, one from Hyattsville and one from Silver Spring comprise the team.

"Nappy" Nugent, Alexandria's flashy guard, the most valuable player in the series, and his running mate, Bennie Burrell, forward, are outstanding stars. Sammy Wolfe, of Silver Spring, but for a slight lack of aggressiveness might easily have been the best player of the year. Clinton Quantrille, Hyattsville, was shy on experience, but nevertheless the best center, while Jack Lynch, of the Twins, takes a guard post. This possibly is the weakest spot on the team.

Nugent is a triple-threat man. He can pass, guard and score and would make an all-star team in better competition. His coolness under fire is an asset. Twice in the latter part of the season when the Twins were trailing against Hyattsville and Silver Spring, Nugent brought the team back on its feet and started the rallies that sent his club to the title.

As a guard he was league high-scorer, averaging almost 13 points per game. Having the double task of covering men like Cooper, of W. and L., Wolfe and Moran, of Hyattsville, in addition to copping the high-scoring crown, is a notable achievement.

Burrel was runner-up for scoring honors with better than 11 points per game. The tall, blond youth was outshone only by Nugent, although his type of ball player is more for the welfare of the team than any individual honors. Consistency in all departments, with a great head, earned him undisputed possession of an all-star berth.

Sammy Wolfe, of the Springers, is gifted with basket ball ability and his floor work was one of the highlights of the series. Usually a high-scorer, Wolfe was off on his shooting in a majority of the league contests, possibly accounting for the team's low standing.

Wolfe undoubtedly is the best college prospect of the series.

Quantrille has much to learn about the court game, but he has a sufficient knowledge at present to be the cream of the center crop. Virtually 100 per cent on the jump and nearly as good off the backboard, he led the Hyattsville team, but lacked what they pay off on—point scoring. That should come with another year's seasoning and more than a cellar club to support him.

Jack Lynch was eligible for a guard position because Coach Givens used him at dierent positions. He excelled at guard.

Clyde Linkins, of the Springers, was headed for the guard post as his fighting, scrapping style of play pleased the crowds, but his offensive play and floor game was overshadowed by Lynch's better than average all around performance. Lynch was also a more consistent scorer. However, Linkins is the star of the second team.

Jimmy Cooper, of the Little Generals, third high scorer, received consideration for a berth. He was adept at finding the basket from the corners, but he was unable to stop the lowest substitute from dribbling or pivoting around him.

Boswell, at forward, and Evers, at center of Washington and Lee, make the second team by a shade. Brewer, the Twins' mite guard, was easily a second-string man. Like Linkins, he was barely nosed out for an all-star berth.

It is with regret that performers such as "Sugar" Cain, of Hyattsville; Charley Moran, of the same team; Alfred Shorb, of Silver Spring; Ray Wheeler, of W. and L., and Wood, of the Twins, must go unmentioned, but they all have another year.

Johnny Apperson, of the Twins, deserves honorable mention. He graduated at midseason and therefore was ineligible for a first-team position. He was headed for a position at that time. The same can be said for Mostow, of Hyattsville, who started too late, and played only two games.

South Atlantic Crown Aim Of Central

Capital Swimmers Vie in Baltimore Today; Massanutten Feared.

A SMALL army of 26 swimmers and divers representing Central High leaves this morning for Baltimore, where the Mount Pleasant school will step nto action this afternoon in the annual South Atlantic interscholastic championships, seeking its ninth victory in the 18-year history of the event.

Glaringly lacking in championship talent, Central is banking chiefly on its mass strength to garner enough second, third and fourth places to outpoint the defending champions from Massanutten Military Academy, of Woodstock, Va.

The meet will take place at the Baltimore A. C. pool.

The Central team:

50-yard free style—John Beatty, Edward Chamberlain, Joe Kelly, Leon Powell, George Martin, Charles Skipton, Robert Sutteerstrom, Roland Weber.

100-yard breast stroke—John Cullinane, Morris Goldberg, Gordon Leech.

100-yard free style—Jack Flett, Hooper McQueen, Curtis Porterfield, Ballard Jamison.

High-board diving—Bill Tarbett, Bob Shipley, Leon Briggs, Frank Black, Leland Higginbotham, Charles Thomas.

Rockville Tourney Is Slated Tonight

Event Looms as Closest in History of Event.

The most hotly contested sportmanship tournament in the seven-year history of the event looms tonight as four of Montgomery County's strongest quintets gather to battle for the bronze trophy donated annually by L. Fletcher Schott, of Rockville High School.

The opening encounter brings Gaithersburg and Rockville together at 7:30 p. m. Silver Spring and Sherwood clash at 8:30, with the winners meeting at 10 o'clock.

The point scoring will be on the basis of 10 points for playing a game, 5 for winning and 1 deducted for each personal foul, the team with the greatest plus total winning. Silver Spring is the defending champion.

Camden Pro Tossers Face Heurich Sunday

The Camden (N. J.) professional basket ball team, leader in the Eastern League, yesterday was booked to meet the Heurich Brewers at the Heurich gym Sunday. Two other games will be played. At 2:30, Sholl's will meet Olmsted Grill for the Heurich League title. At 1:30, Fort Myer and Fort Humphries will clash.

Edelin Grippe Victim, Not to Face G. U. Cubs

Gay Edelin, Eastern's all-high forward, will not play in the Eastern-Georgetown freshmen classic Saturday afternoon, Coach Charlie Guyon said last night. Edelin, the coach said, is confined to his bed with a severe attack of grippe.

Considered the highlight of the local scholastic basket ball season, Saturday's game experiences something of a blow from Edelin's illness. With its veteran star out of the line-up, Eastern, never conceded more than a 50-50 chance, slips decidedly to the underdog position.

Commissioner Allen to Toss Up First Ball in A. A. U. Tourney

More Than 80 Teams Now Entered

Draw Is Scheduled for Tomorrow; Two Games on First Day.

ALLEN.

Asked yesterday by A. A. U. Basket Ball Chairman Winfree Johnson to help dedicate the annual cage games, the genial Commissioner replied:

"With pleasure. What time shall I be there?"

Commissioner Allen, only recently appointed on the recreational coordinating committee with Frederick Delano Marshall Finnan and Henry Quinn, has long been an ardent sports follower. In his college days down in good old Mississippi he was a star athlete, and basket ball was one of his favorite pastimes.

The Commissioner, who also plays a good game of golf, tossed the first ball last season in the games at Roosevelt High, and was so interested in the proceedings that he remained for the games.

Draw Due Tomorrow.

Meanwhile the basket ball committee worked out final details for the biggest sporting event of its kind in this section. The draw will be made tomorrow and the pairings announced in Sunday's papers. The committee is hoping that two crack teams will clash in the unlimited division in the feature game.

Only two games will be played Monday, and the preliminary may find two fast 145-pounders in action.

More than 80 teams already have entered. The mail brought in five more girls' teams to raise the list in this division to 13—twice as many as last year. Jim McNamara entered his high-powered Jewish Community Center seniors, and they may prove troublesome. The Union Printers also entered a speedy experienced team.

With respect to the weighing-in, the committee calls attention to the fact that each player must jump on the scales before the opening game. And are those A. A. U. men who check your avoidupois tough! Why, if you're a pound overweight—don't try to talk your way into the 145-pound class.

Virginia Five's Hopes Hurt by Smith's Loss

Special Dispatch to The Post.

University, Va., Feb. 28.—Gus Tebell, Virginia's head coach of basket ball, is worried. As he sees it, Cavalier chances for victory in the Southern Conference court tournament have gone packing with the certainty that an injury is going to keep his best guard, Ray Smith, out of action.

Smith hurt his knee in the Washington and Lee game just after he had scored his seventh goal, as the Cavaliers defeated the Generals and ended their season with a record of ten victories against four defeats in games with State rivals.

Race Association Sets Meet Near Pinehurst

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Pinehurst, N. C., Feb. 28.—Three steeplechase races and two hunter trials comprise the card of the Sandhills Steeplechase and Racing Association's meet on its new course, near here, on Saturday, March 16, according to the program announced today.

The Pinehurst Steeplechase and the Southern Pines Steeplechase, both 2-mile contests over brush, will precede the feature event, the Sandhills Cup Steeplechase, a 3-mile contest over timber fences for 4-year-olds and upward.

Eight College Fives To Vie at Charlotte

Charlotte, N. C., Feb. 28 (AP).—Eight teams have entered the first Carolinas-Virginia invitation basket ball tournament, being sponsored here by those interested in promotion of a conference for the smaller colleges of the three States.

The tournament will be held March 7 to 9. Entries, now closed, are Lynchburg, of Virginia; Erskine, of South Carolina; Elon, Appalachian, Lenoir-Rhyne, Catawba, High Point and Atlantic Christian, of North Carolina.

Middletown Five Wins Southern Division Flag

Special Dispatch to The Post.

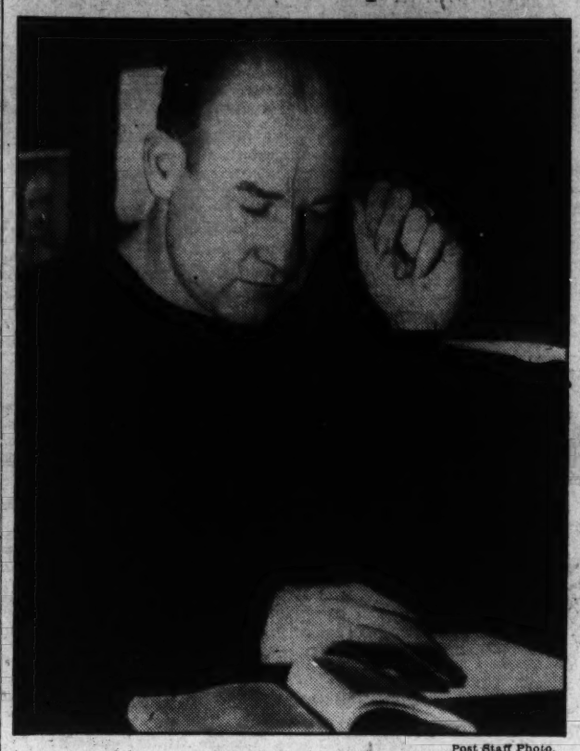

Frederick, Md., Feb. 28.—Middletown defeated Frederick for the pennant in the Southern Division of the County High School League at the State Armory, 14 to 11. The teams had ended the regular schedule on even terms. The victory enables Middletown to meet Emmitsburg, pennant winner of the northern division, for the championship of the county.

With the pennant at stake, both teams put up the best game of the season. At half time the score was 6 to 6.

Cotton's Pep Talk Once Cost Him $10.50 to Repair a Door

FORREST (FOD) COTTON.

By Lewis F. Atchison.

FOR a chap who gleaned the fundamentals of basket ball from a couple of referees over foaming beer mugs, Forrest (Fod) Cotton has done exceedingly well as coach at Catholic University in the last four years.

Catholic University closed its season last week with an overwhelming victory over St. Thomas College with a record of 12 victories and 5 losses—a good record but an unsatisfactory one to Cotton, who lost a total of only seven games in the two previous seasons.

Thus the reason for his decision to inaugurate spring practice—a popular custom in the Midwest, but virtually unknown in this vicinity. He is working members of the freshman team and reserves from this season's varsity with Lieb and Schmarr, around whom the '36 quintet will be built.

Odd, but Interesting.

Cotton's saga as a court coach is a bit odd, but interesting nevertheless. He assumed new duties as head coach of everything at St. Ambrose College with Knute Rockne's advice on coaching basket ball still pounding on his eardrums.

"Blow up a couple of balls and roll 'em out on the court."

"Fod" did just that, and it didn't work so well. But Sam Barry, now coaching at Southern California, and Rollie Williams, coach at Iowa, who refereed the majority of St. Ambrose's games, took him in hand and, while quaffing beer after the games, would point out his mistakes and outline plays for him.

Prestige Took Leap.

It wasn't long before Cotton overtook his instructors and began work on his own plays and St. Ambrose's prestige expanded to undreamed-of proportions.

"Fod" tells the story of their big game with State Teachers in his first year of coaching. It seems that the Teachers had an old-established custom of spanking the Ambrosians every year, but in this game the Saints pulled up at halftime on even terms with the foe.

Cotton still clung to the old football custom of giving the boys a pep talk between halves and had a particularly fiery one for this game. He raised their die-for-Rutgers enthusiasm to such heights that they literally tore off the dressing room getting out on the floor—and finally won the ball game.

Presented With Bill.

The next day Cotton received a note from the president of the institution. It looked like a raise in salary or at least a word of commendation, for hadn't he coached the team to its first victory over the enemy in years?

The president received him cordially, congratulating him on the splendid victory and presented him with a bill for $10.50 for repairing the locker-room door. He paid it.

"Fod" thinks "Buss" Sheary is the best courtman he has coached at Catholic U., and that the team's 38-39 victory over Navy last session was the most important victory any C. U. team under his tutelage has won.

His all-time record at Brookland, including the first year when the team won 7 and lost 11 games, is 41 wins and 23 losses.

Rappahannock Puppy Trial Date Set

Special Dispatch to The Post.

FREDERICKSBURG, Va., Feb. 28.—The tenth annual running of the Rappahannock Valley Field Trial Association's spring puppy trial will be held on March 7, at LaVue, estate of Mr. and Mrs. Herman O. Swanson, about 8 miles from this city.

The event, a one-day affair, will be preceded on March 6 by the association's annual business meeting, at which time officers will be elected, dates for the fall trials set and other matters transacted.

Drawings for the meet also will be made on the preceding night at 8 o'clock.

Charles B. Cooke, of Mount Holly, Va., and Irwin A. Hynes, of Baltimore, will judge the puppy trial.

Large Field Expected.

The affair is expected to attract one of the largest fields ever to compete in a Rappahannock event. Leo V. Timberlake, association secretary, said today entries will be sent here from all parts of the Old Dominion, Maryland, Pennsylvania and the District of Columbia.

Open to all setters and pointers whelped on or after January 1, 1934, the stake will provide silver trophies for the three top-ranking dogs. A special silver trophy will be awarded the best unplaced puppy whelped on or after May 1, 1934. Entries will close next Tuesday.

Officers of the association, in addition to Mr. Timberlake, are: President, G. D. Richardson, of Weedonville; first vice president, C. B. Carmichael, of Fredericksburg; second vice president, J. W. Dorsey Cooke, of Potomac Beach.

Terp Ring Pilot Undecided on Line-Up

Will Pick Men Tonight for Battles Tomorrow Against Army.

THE make-up of Maryland's boxing team for tomorrow night's skirmish with Army remained undetermined last night as four battlers strove for the positions vacated by the injured Ivan Nedomatsky and Lyman McAboy. Lieut. Jack Harmony, the Terps' tutor, confessed to be in a quandary, pending further information of Army's strength.

Harmony boiled the situation down to a selection of either Dick Babcock or Joe Jones for Nedomatsky's 135-pound berth, and Al Farrell or Johnny Birkland for the heavyweight spot.

To Decide Tonight.

The Maryland mentor will decide on his men tonight after hearing the latest report on Army, which will arrive in Washington at 6 p. m. The Cadets will be quartered at the Mayflower Hotel.

Babcock has had more experience than Jones, but does not pack a wallop as damaging as that of his rivals. The same situation exists in the heavyweight class, where Farrell has a wide edge over Birkland in boxing ability and experience, but does not hit as hard as the latter.

Others in Line-Up.

Maryland's other men will be Jimmy Young, 115; Bill Waller or Tom Birmingham, 125; Walter Webb, 145; Mike Lombardo, 155; "Stew" McCaw, Southern Conference light-heavyweight champion, 165; Johnny Gormley, 175. This aggregation is approximately 25 per cent weaker with Nedomatsky and McAboy out, but still formidable.

The Old Line quintet, which will play host to St. John's of Annapolis in the evening's curtain raiser, expects to take the Bay City team in stride. Maryland, which outpointed Johns Hopkins earlier in the week, is pointing for the season's finale against Georgetown on March 11 at College Park.

Beall High Girls Top Penn Avenue, 27-19

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Cumberland, Md., Feb. 28.—Coach Agnes Howat's Beall High School girls kept pace with Central High School, of Lonaconing, in the race for the championship by defeating Pennsylvania Avenue High School, 27 to 19.

Allegany Girls' Team Defeated by Central

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Lonaconing, Md., Feb. 28.—The Allegany High girls' basket ball team was knocked out of the Western Maryland Interscholastic League championship race when it was beaten, 22 to 21, by Central High here. A foul goal by Martha McGuire in the last six seconds of play gave the Orange and Black the triumph.

The Allegany boys won, 51 to 38, over the Central boys. William Miller paced the attack with 20 points while Johnny Meyers made a like numbed for the losers.

Championship at Stake.

Hampden-Sydney, Va., Feb 28 (AP). The Chesapeake Conference basket ball championship will be decided at Lynchburg tomorrow night in a playoff between Hampden-Sydney and Lynchburg College.

Oklahoma City Gets P. G. A.'s '35 Tourney

Sarasota, Fla., Feb. 28 (U.P.).—The 1935 National Professional Golfers Association tournament will be played at the Twin Hills Golf Club, Oklahoma City, October 14 to 20, George Jacobus, president of the P. G. A., announced today.

Jacobus said that plans for the tourney had been revised so that a field of 64, instead of 32, will qualify at the site of the tourney for match play.

Miller Stops Rival.

Corn Price Dip Carries Wheat To Lower Price

Cotton Sags in Response to Liverpool Trading, 3 to 8 Points Off.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Feb. 28.—Corn fell of its own weight at the last today and dragged wheat along. Selling that somewhat broadened in volume as the day approached an end made the fact apparent the corn market was without any aggressive support from buyers. Simultaneously, word of New York arrival of wheat from Argentina and of rye from Russia had a bearish effect.

Corn closed weak, at the day's low point, ¼ to ⅞ under yesterday's finish: May, 84½ to 84⅝; wheat, ⅛ to ½ down, May, 97⅝ to 97¾; oats, ⅛ off to ⅛ up, and provisions varying from 3 cents decline to an equal gain.

Wheat Drops After Rise.

Softening of prices for wheat followed an early fractional upturn that was associated with reports indicating domestic crop conditions Southwest were becoming critical. Holders, however, were disappointed that demand for futures contracts failed to show any urgency. The March unofficial monthly crop summaries will be issued on Monday, with estimates of farm reserve stocks of wheat. It was intimated the exhibit might not prove as stimulating as in some quarters appeared to be looked for.

Announcement from Winnipeg that the Canadian government proposed to establish a farm marketing board as an emergency measure was construed by the Chicago market as bearish.

Cotton Market

By the Associated Press.

New York, Feb. 28.—Cotton prices sagged today in response to relatively easy Liverpool cables and some further near-month liquidation. The market closed steady, at net declines of 3 to 8 points.

Liverpool's failure to meet the local bulge of late yesterday was evidently a disappointment to traders, which led to some selling of late months, while there was March liquidation incident to the circulation of notices estimated at about 1,700 bales.

Trade interests bought March discounts of about 11 points under May and there was a scattering demand for later deliveries, but prices gradually eased and closed within 2 points of the lowest.

Reports of slightly better inquiry for spot cotton from domestic mills may have been reflected by some trade buying on declines, but evidently failed to create aggressive interest. Exports today, 18,579, making 3,363,736 so far this season. Port receipts, 7,261. United States port stocks, 2,572,864.

Heavy Recent Domestic Buying of Copper Attributed Chiefly to Activity in Motor Industry, But Prices Are Lower in London.

By a Special Correspondent.

New York, Feb. 28.—Heavy demand for copper at a rate that has not been equaled since June of last year, has attracted considerable attention to the market for that metal. The chief explanation of the consistently larger weekly sales being reported by the refiners is found, according to informed quarters, in the current high rate of activity in the automobile industry.

The automobile industry has been "booming" since the turn of the year. The reason why the copper market did not until within recent weeks feel the effects of the high rate of production of automobiles is that substantial stocks of copper had previously accumulated in the hands of fabricators, who furnish the automobile manufacturer with most of the parts made of copper, which they require. These supplies are now largely exhausted, however, with the result that fabricators must come into the market for copper in order to maintain the volume of output that the motor industry is demanding of them.

What pleases copper interests most about the current increase in demand is their belief that the metal is being bought not to build up stocks in consumers' hands, but rather to be converted into automobile parts and accessories for actual sale. Last year, when the automobile industry was operating at a relatively high rate and giving large orders to brass works, a price increase was in immediate prospect in the copper market. As a consequence, fabricators had not only the large current orders, but also a speculative incentive, to cause them to buy copper heavily. This latter is not present this year, since higher copper prices are not contemplated, for the near future at least. The current buying accordingly is viewed as quite healthy.

No Demand Expected From Public Utilities.

While refiners expect demand to remain relatively good so long as the automobile industry continues active, they are distinctly conservative in their appraisal of likely demands from other sources. The public utilities, normally by far the heaviest consumers of the metal, are not in position to take much more copper than they turn back to the industry in the form of scrap. So long as this situation continues, substantial prosperity for the copper industry is not to be expected.

There is less enthusiasm in copper circles over current public works plans, including the contemplated construction of power-producing and distributing systems than might at first blush be expected. This is true not only because of the congressional situation, which renders the outlook for such projects uncertain, but also because the demand for copper from such developments must be computed on a net, rather than a gross, basis. These new facilities will merely replace, to a large extent, existing enterprises that would otherwise buy copper for replacements or extension of their facilities. On the other hand, existing utility companies would probably supply the market with scrap if their business contracts because of Government competition. In any event, whatever substantial net increase in the demand for copper may be generated by public power plans appears rather far in the future to the average copper executive, who, incidentally, has not always had satisfactory experience with Government authorities in selling copper for new installations.

Conditions Abroad Not Encouraging.

World producers have been conferring in London on an agreement to limit the output so as to permit a rise in the price abroad from the present level, around 6½ cents a pound, to 8½ cents a pound. African, Canadian and other foreign producers will confer with American producers of copper for copper here, at which it is likely an American export quota will be fixed equal to last year's shipments. This will make the export business more prosperous for these producers who now ship abroad. But it will not affect the American copper situation otherwise.

At the same time, the relative stability achieved under the code in the domestic market is a source of satisfaction to the copper industry. Despite a decline in the amount of withdrawals for domestic account of some 64,700,000 pounds in 1934, as compared with 1933, stocks of refined and blister copper on hand at the end of 1934 were estimated to be 277,000,000, less than the 1,201,000,000 pounds reported a year earlier.

U. S. Steel Plans To Bar Bonuses To Executives

By the Associated Press.

New York, Feb. 28.—Important changes in management policies of the United States Steel Corporation will be proposed for the stockholders approval at the annual meeting on April 1, it was learned today.

The shareholders will be asked to authorize the abolishment of the corporation's profit-sharing plan under which executives are eligible for bonuses when the net profits reach $100,000,000 in any year after all charges.

Another steel coporation policy which will be scrapped if the stockholders consent will be the allotment of common shares for employes' subscription.

At the same time the corporation, it was learned, will ask the shareholders to consider a plan for group life insurance for the employes, the cost to be borne jointly by the corporation and the workers.

Junior Bonds Of Railroads Are in Demand

Government Issues Weaker, Offsetting Steady Tone.

New York, Feb. 28 (AP).—A good demand for lower-priced railroad issues featured the bond market again today. A steady tone in first-grade corporate loans was offset by softness in United States Governments.

The turnover expanded to $14,207,000, par value, against $12,911,000 on Wednesday with the major portion of trading concentrated in secondary issues. The bond turnover for the month of February aggregated $224,851,000, par value, compared with $330,546,000 in January.

Although the railroad picture was further clouded by the Chicago Great Western's petition for reorganization under the bankruptcy act, and omission of the interest due tomorrow on the consolidated bonds of the Denver & Rio Grande Western, there were many firm spots in the lower-priced division of the market.

B. & O. 6s Rise.

Among the favorites gaining a point or more were Baltimore & Ohio refunding 6s, at 73; Panhandle 5s, at 72; Nickel Plate 5½s, at 68; New Haven collateral 6s, at 47¾, and Illinois Central 4¾s, at 53. Others selling higher included obligations of the Southern Railway Western Pacific and Kansas City Southern. Great Western 4s dropped 3 points, to 25, and Rio Grande 5s were ¼ higher, at 14¼.

In the industrial and utility section a moderately even tone prevailed. Childs Co. 5s were 1¼ higher, at 59¾; Chile Copper 5s were ½ higher, at 84, and Paramount 5½s gained 2 points, at 48½. Other issues selling higher included obligations of American Telephone, Warren Bros., Laclede Gas, Portland General Electric and Utah Light & Traction. The Associated Press averages were unchanged to .4 of a point higher.

United States Government obligations were uniformly lower with declines up to 5-32 sprinkled among the treasuries. Home Owners Loan, in which the turnover was heavy, advanced 1-32, to 100.1.

There was not much activity in the foreign section. South and Central American bonds were a trifle lower along with German obligations, while French and Austrian loans were fairly steady.

Paramount Co. Wins Approval Of Committees

Court Holds Proposal Fair and Equitable to Creditors.

New York, Feb. 28.—The protective committees for stockholders of Paramount Publix Corporation and for bondholders of Paramount Broadway Corporation announced today that they had adopted and approved the reorganization plan of Paramount Publix Corporation, which includes a plan of reorganization of Paramount Broadway Corporation. Both committees are advising stockholders and bondholders of the procedure to be followed by security holders in formally accepting the plan, which was recently approved by the Federal Court, with several modifications. The court's order held that the plan "is fair and equitable and does not discriminate unfairly in favor of any class of creditors or stockholders and is feasible."

Approximately 37,000 shareholders of Paramount Publix Corporation are being notified by the stockholders committee, of which Duncan A. Holmes is chairman, that it will accept the plan on behalf of all shares deposited with it and not dissenting by March 30. Of the 3,220,902 shares of Paramount Publix stock outstanding, more than 1,800,000 shares have deposited with the committee. Under section 77B of the bankruptcy act, acceptance by a majority of the stockholders is required for confirmation of the plan.

Upon the consummation of the plan, Paramount Broadway bondholders will be entitled to receive an amount in cash at the rate of 3 per cent annually from May 1, 1934, to February 15, 1935, from which date the bonds will bear interest as provided in the plan. "If this plan is not accepted by the necessary number of bondholders," says the committee, "payment of interest may be indefinitely postponed and it may never again be possible to evolve a plan as favorable to the bondholders as this plan which has resulted from two years of difficult negotiation on the part of the committee and its counsel.

Daily Credit of Reserve Banks Averages $13,000,000 Lower

By the Associated Press.

Member bank reserve balances showed a decrease for the first time in several weeks during the period ended February 27, the decline of $57,000,000 bringing the total to $4,588,000,000, estimated to be about $2,400,000,000 still in excess of legal requirements.

This level was $1,495,000,000 in excess of the total at this time last year.

The Federal Reserve weekly condition statement of its banks showed also that the monetary gold stocks of the Nation had risen $35,000,000 during the week to the unprecedented level of $8,524,000,000, or $1,086,000,000 above last year.

The condition statement said:

"The daily average volume of Federal Reserve bank credit outstanding during the week ended February 27, as reported by the Federal Reserve Banks, was $2,453,000,000, a decrease of $13,000,000 compared with the preceding week and of $121,000,000 compared with the corresponding week in 1934.

"On February 27 total Reserve Bank credit amounted to $2,450,000,000, an increase of $2,000,000 for the week. This increase corresponds with increases of $74,000,000 in Treasury cash and deposits with Federal Reserve Banks and $17,000,000 in nonmember deposits and other Federal Reserve accounts and a decrease of $2,000,000 in Treasury and national bank currency offset in part by an increase of $35,000,000 in monetary gold stock and a decrease of $57,000,000 in member bank reserve balances.

"Relatively small changes were reported in holdings of discounted and purchased bills, United States Government securities and industrial advances.

Stocks Droop; Trading Falls; Rail News Bad

Exchange Had Smallest February Volume in 14 Years.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Feb. 28.—Stocks were lower today after a fairly good start, commodities sagged and the dollar turned heavy in relation to leading gold currencies while maintaining an advance against sterling. Bonds got nowhere in particular, although scattered rail liens emerged with small gains.

The one encouraging feature of today's final February proceedings was that when stocks began to slip the trading volume died down quickly. The turnover amounted to only 573,540 shares compared with Wednesday's total of 946,588. The Associated Press average for 60 selected issues was off .1 of a point at 37.6. On the month this composite lost 1 full point.

The enthusiasm for the rails was noticeably luke-warm after overnight orders had been easily filled at higher levels. The transportation picture was not exceptionally bright. The Chicago Great Western applied for permission to reorganize under the amended bankruptcy act. Directors of the Denver & Rio Grande voted to omit interest payments tomorrow on the road's consolidated bonds and discussed plans looking toward reorganization.

In addition to rail uncertainties, Wall Street seemed to be a trifle disturbed over the New Deal's setbacks in the courts and the possibilities that the recovery program of the Administration may be further questioned.

Light February Sales.

New York, Feb. 28 (U.P.).—The stock market today gave a discouraging finale to the lightest February trading in 14 years. Results of the month—which few traders like to consider—include:

Sales totaled 14,404,525 shares, compared with 19,409,132 shares in January, the lightest February since 1921 and the smallest month since September, 1934.

Telephone Use Shows Increase In Past Month

By R. Karl von Lewinski.

Washington was served by 10,377 more telephones during January than during the same month of the previous year, according to the report of operations of the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. filed yesterday with the Public Utilities Commission.

Total installations in the city were 190,259 on January 31, compared with 179,882 on the same date last year.

Revenues for the month were increased to $834,549 from the corresponding 1933 month's gross of $804,875. Net income on the other hand was decreased to $158,929 during January, as compared with the net of $163,447 for the same month of the previous year.

Telephone calls made during the month showed a gain of more than 1,000,000. The figure for the past month was 21,177,000, as compared with 20,083,000 calls for the same month of 1933.

A. T. & T. Report.

Improvement in the business of the American Telephone & Telegraph Co. during 1934 was reported in the annual statement issued today. The Bell System under which the Washington Company is operating had a net gain of 298,000 telephone installations during the year, as against a net loss of 630,000 installations in 1933.

Net earnings during the year increased to $182,900,000 from $168,931,000 the previous year. Walter S. Gifford in his annual review of the company's operations, said that the proportion of net income of the Bell System was $5.96 per share as compared with $5.38 a share the year previous.

At the end of the year, according to Gifford's report, there were 13,548,000 Bell telephones in service, a decrease of 14 per cent from the peak level of 1930. Cash assets of the company, including funds temporarily invested in Government obligations, were approximately $255,000,000 at the end of the year. Of this amount the American Telephone & Telegraph Co. held approximately $199,000,000.

The company has continued to pay its $9 annual dividend.

Curb Trading Is Less Active; Trend Uneven

Montgomery Ward "A" and Parker Rust Proof Up 2 Points.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Feb. 28.—Irregular tendencies continued to feature curb exchange trading today. Dealings were quiet and price changes among active issues remained restricted.

Montgomery Ward A regained 2 points of its recent loss, and Parker Rust Proof recorded a similar advance. Losses of about 2 points were suffered by Bunker Hill & Sullivan and Perfect Circle, both on light transfers. Greyhound Corporation rose more than a point on volume trading.

Fractional declines were shown by American Gas & Electric, Newmont and American Cyanimid B, while shares finishing steady to a bit higher included Electric Bond & Share, Lake Shore, International Petroleum, Wright-Hargreaves and Swift Internacional.

$1,000 in Prizes Will Be Given by 'Bawl St. Journal'

New York, Feb. 28.—Prizes totaling $1,000 will be awarded for material used in the 1935 edition of The Bawl Street Journal, burlesque publication to be issued by The Bond Club of New York at its annual outing, Harry M. Addinsell, president of the Bond Club, announced today.

This year 35 prizes ranging from $20 to $50 each will be given. An instruction leaflet describing the types of copy for which awards will be made has been prepared by John A. Straley, 30 Broad street, New York, who will again edit the paper.

The practice of making cash awards for stories and advertisements was begun in 1932. In 1934 the work of 100 contributors from 16 States appeared in The Bawl Street Journal and 28 winners from 10 States divided the prizes.

Woman Fire Victim Expected to Live

Hope Held for Miss Maust of Grantsville.

By the Associated Press.

Grantsville, Md., Feb. 28 (AP).—Hope was held today for the recovery of Miss Eva Maust, who was severely burned in a fire which destroyed the Maust home near here last night.

She was taken to the hospital at Meyersdale, Pa., where her condition was reported serious, but attaches said she may recover. She is 45 years old.

Her sister, Ada, 50, who was burned about the hands and face, was reported at the hospital as doing well.

Their father, Truman Maust, 81, died in the fire. The women, awakened by smoke and the sound of crackling of the flames, assisted him downstairs from his bedroom but their exit was cut off by the flames.

Richmond Institute Of Government Set

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., Feb. 28.—Hundreds of women from six Southern States are expected here next week for the first of a series of regional institutes of Government to be addressed by Miss Frances Perkins, Secretary of Labor, and other women outstanding in national, State and local government.

The Richmond Institute, March 7 and 8, is being sponsored by the women's division Democratic committee. Mrs. Irving Whitehead, of Amherst County, Va., vice chairman of the Virginia Democratic committee, has been in Richmond two weeks arranging for the institute.

"This conference is for the women of Maryland, Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia and Florida, regardless of their affiliations," said Mrs. Whitehead today. "The only requirement is that they have a willingness to learn about government."

Besides Mrs. Whitehead, Virginia women participating in the institute will include Mrs. R. C. Watts, of Lynchburg, national Democratic committeewoman from Virginia; Mrs. Louise Galleher, of Leesburg; Mrs. Frank Jobson, Richmond; Mrs. Herbert Gregory, Roanoke; Mrs. Geline MacDonald Bowman, Richmond, president of the National Organization of Business and Professional Women; Mrs. A. J. McGuire, and Mrs. Nelson Beck, of Charlottesville, and Mrs. Robert Barton, of Richmond.

Boston Wool Active.

Boston, Feb. 28 (AP) (State Department of Agriculture).—A fairly active trade was going on in the Boston wool market, and demand was being received on a broader selection of wools than during weeks. In addition to continued activity in average and short 64s and finer territory wools, some calls were being received for good combing staple of this grade and for lower grades. Strictly combing 58s, 60s, ½-blood territory wools sold in fair volume at 63 to 65 cents, scoured basis.

Choice original bag 64s and finer territory wools moved at around 65 cents, scoured basis, although a larger part of the call was on the short French combing and clothing tupes at 58 to 60 cents, scoured basis.

Foreign Markets.

By the Associated Press.

London—Cheerfulness developed on the stock exchange today. The failure of the market was strength in gold mining shares, especially kaffirs, on the new high record price of bar gold. Gilt-edged securities were firm on cheap money and investment buying, and industrials and foreign rails were firmer. Other sections were dull. The market closed steady.

Paris—Better Wall street advices helped to improve prices, which were stronger on the bourse today. Copper shares were particularly influenced by talk of curtailment of production to be taken up at the producers' conference at New York next month. The closing was steady.

Berlin—Stocks reacted favorably on the boerse today to the decree reducing interest on additional German government bonds by converting them into securities paying lower interest rates. The firmness continued until the market closed, when a slight setback was registered.

Bank of France.

Paris, Feb. 28 (AP).—The weekly statement of the Bank of France shows the following changes in francs: Gold increased 148,000,000; sight balances abroad increased 1,000,000; bills discounted at home increased 430,000,000; bills bought abroad unchanged; advances decreased 60,000,000; circulation decreased 162,000,000.

Warrenton Hunt Sets Final Event

Point to Point Race to Be Held on March 16.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Warrenton, Va., Feb. 28.—The second annual point-to-point race, closing the hunting season for the Warrenton Hunt, was announced today for March 16. The event, inaugurated last season to close the sporting season for the members of the Warrenton Hunt, is in the nature of an old-fashioned point-to-point race, which is to say, time of the race, and place, are not announced until the day before the event.

There will be two races—the first, for individuals; the second, for team riders. Frederick H. Prince, jr., of New York and Boston, who recently purchased the Rosemont Farm, near Rectortown, will again donate the trophies.

The races, no doubt, will be the occasion for much entertaining, especially by the members of the Hunt Club, Country Club and North Wales.

Walt Mason, Himself

For Posterity.

AN English poet now admits that he's the greatest bard alive; his sonnets will be making hits three ages hence, or maybe five. He has no doubts, he has no fears, the while he plies his trenchant pen; he looks ahead 500 years and knows he will be honored then. What if at present he's ignored, if no one reads his ruddy rhyme? He knows at last it will have soared across the vast expanse of time. What if his name is seldom heard where bards foregather in the night? Those bards will all look cheap, absurd, while he is glowing in the light. One reads his statement with a sigh, his egotism is so vast; he knows his fame will never die, he will be recognized at last. He's written quite a hefty tome, descriptive of his long career, with now and then a sample pome, to charm the reader's tuneful ear. To me they do not seem so great and some of them gave me a jar; but he is qualified to state how good and beautiful they are. But much I envy such a gent, convinced of his surpassing worth; his soul is cased in calm content, he is the monarch of the earth. He writes his verse, he's tickled pink, as he surveys it, chunk by chunk; he doesn't care what others think; for their opinions are the bunk. The critics may send up their jeers, but small attention does he give; he knows that in 500 years they'll all be dead, while he will live. Impervious to rude rebuff, to caustic hint and jeering scorn, he goes ahead and does his stuff, his eyes fixed on an age unborn.

Insull Returns To Court—but As a Witness

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Feb. 28.—Samuel Insull, like an old grad back for homecoming, came into a familiar Federal courtroom today and in five minutes as a witness told how much he had forgotten about the $3,000,000 business he used to run.

He had been subpenaed by counsel for the noteholders and stockholders objecting to the current scheme of reorganization for Middle West Utilities Co.

Insull was in gay but not helpful mood as a deputy marshal interrupted his reading at the Seneca Hotel to take him to court.

He gave a quick glance at the 12 men in the jury box, and was reassured that they were lawyers, not jurors. Then he took his seat in the same chair where, a few months ago, he had sat as defendant until acquitted of a gigantic mail fraud charge.

Replies Are Vague.

Attorney Thomas V. Sullivan, for the dissatisfied stockholders, wanted to know what Middle West paid for certain subsidiaries.

But Mr. Insull was vague or negative in replies. Finally he interrupted.

"You know, gentlemen, you're asking me about things as they are now. I've been out of touch with the situation since early in 1932 and know practically nothing about Middle West or its subsidiaries."

He had quit a brief period of receivership for Middle West in June, 1932, and spent several months just ahead of the United States Government in Italy and Greece and the Mediterranean.

Insull Paid $1.85.

When Attorney Sullivan asked about certain subsidiaries, Insull asked him, "And where is that company, please?" He said he was not aware whether appraisals of the smaller companies were made or who made them, for "all I dealt in was matters of general policy."

Examination proving futile, Sullivan excused him from the stand and an opposing lawyer remarked to Sullivan, "Is that all of the act?"

Insull, who when pending criminal charges have been concluded is considering reentering business, was tickled at receiving $1.85 fee as a witness.

Woman Collapses In Matricide Trial

Jury Selection Halted as Defendant Faints.

By the Associated Press.

Laurel, Miss., Feb. 28.—Ouida Keeton, 33-year-old stenographer, on trial for the death of her mother, today collapsed in her wheel chair and halted the selection of a jury for more than an hour.

The comely young woman a few weeks ago was removed from the jail to a hospital because of her nervous condition.

The State charges Miss Keeton was implicated with W. M. Carter, 67, once prosperous leader of Laurel and her former employer, in the death of her mother, parts of whose butchered body have been found.

Minnesota Farmers To March on Capitol

St. Paul, Feb. 28 (AP).—A drought starvation show which will dwarf yesterday's pig-horse-sow exhibit was promised today—a march of 20,000 to 30,000 farmers upon the State capitol Wednesday.

John Bosch, president of the Minnesota Farm Holiday Association, said "a couple of truckloads of dead ones" (live stock) would be brought before legislators as evidence of cattle suffering from lack of food.

Winter's Coldest Wave Descends on Florida

Jacksonville, Fla., Feb. 28 (AP).—The bitterest cold wave of winter was predicted for Florida tonight as other portions of the South began to feel relief from subfreezing temperatures.

Weather forecasters and the Florida State Marketing Bureau warned citrus and vegetable growers to take all precautions against freeze and frost. Freezing weather was expected through the whole length of Florida.

Clean Out Kidney Poisons

Wash Out Your 15 Miles of Kidney Tubes

If kidneys don't pass 3 pints a day and get rid of more than 3 pounds of waste matter, the 15 miles of kidney tubes and filters may become clogged with poisonous waste and the danger of acid poisoning is greatly increased. Bladder passages are difficult, which often smart and burn like scalding water and cause discomfort.

This acid condition, brought about by poor kidney functions is a danger signal and may be the beginning of nagging backache, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swollen feet and ankles, rheumatic pains and dizziness.

Most people watch their bowels which contain only 27 feet of intestines but neglect the kidneys which contain 15 miles of tiny tubes and filters. If these tubes or filters become clogged with poisons, it may knock you out and lay you up for many months. Don't run any risk. Make sure your kidneys empty 3 pints a day.

Ask your druggist for DOAN'S PILLS, an old prescription, which has been used successfully by millions of kidney sufferers for over 40 years. © 1934, Foster-Milburn Co.

'The Best Dog Is'—the Irish Setter

He's the Most Beautiful and Very Friendly, Indeed, Says Mrs. Gray S. Foster of Her 'Engagement Present.'

Mrs. Gray S. Foster, charming and young and blonde, didn't pick Irish setters as her favorite breed of dog. She married an owner, but, after five years with anywhere from 3 to 13 of them around the house, she declared: "For a big dog, they are the most affectionate of the bunch. They think they are Pomeranians."

"I feel rather guilty for talking about Irish setters, for I know so little except from my own personal experiences with the breed over the past few years," Mrs. Foster said, in the living room of her home at 1519 Thirty-third street, Georgetown. She had just come in from a walk with Terry, a rich mahogany-colored dog who now stretched at her feet, one eye alertly on the stranger.

Terry was a sort of engagement present to her from her husband, while Sheila and Nora came into the family as wedding presents. The dogs are all from the kennels of Marchione di Fatta, one of the best known breeders in the country, whose place near Haverhill, Mass., is only a short distance from the North Shore summer estate of the Foster family.

"I think the thing I like the best about the Irish setter is his looks. He is the most beautiful dog there is. And you get more attention for your money from the breed than from any other that I have ever had," Mrs. Foster said. "It is an extremely friendly dog. Terry here is mad about the baby. He insists upon sleeping right under the crib if we allow him to. Terry is one of the gentlest dogs, yet he is an excellent watchdog. Irish setters are temperamental. They have to be humored like a baby. If Terry gets offended, he actually mopes."

The Irish setter is not as commonly seen as the English setter and few, like the writer, know the exact difference between the two breeds that seem so much alike and yet are so different. As a rule, the Irish setter is a heavier dog than the English, and his coat is smoother, silkier and finer. He has a deeper brisket and a more pointed muzzle.

The standard for the breed places emphasis upon the dark mahogany or rich golden chestnut color, the heavy smooth silky coat, fine brush and well-feathered legs. His head is long and inclined to leanness, the ears set on low and hanging in a neat fold close to the head. The eyes are not too large or full and in color are a rich hazel or brown. The tail should be well set on and carried slightly below the level of the back, reaching in length to the hock joint. The dog stands about 25 or 26 inches at the shoulder and weighs around 60 pounds.

State May Ask Death for 32 In Prison Break

Plane Aids Hunt for Chief of 12 Still at Large in Oklahoma.

By the Associated Press.

Granite, Okla., Feb. 28.—Oklahoma may demand the life of every one of the 32 State reformatory convicts involved in the sensational February 17 break here in which a guard was killed and eight convicts wounded.

"It is possible I will file blanket murder charges against all those figuring in the break," said County Attorney Victor Waters, son of Mrs. George A. Waters, replaced as warden since the break by Sheriff Fred Hunt of Tishomingo.

"If I get the right cooperation, somebody's going to burn for that break," declared Warden Hunt.

"I know who fired the shots that killed 'Uncle Pete' Jones, the guard, and I know where the pistols came from that armed the men for the break," Hunt asserted.

Meanwhile, radio-equipped police cars, directed by an airplane scout, patroled the short-grass plains and rocky hills of Blaine County, northeast of here, in a spectacular search for one of the most dangerous of the 12 remaining fugitives—Dale Stanphill.

Stanphill, identified as one of the three men who robbed the First State Bank of Seiling of $523 late yesterday, was reported seen at Fonda, between Seiling and Fairview.

Warden Hunt declined to name the ones he believed to be the actual slayers, but said they still were at large.

Man Struck by Street Car.

A street car struck Byron McNamee, 31, at G and Third streets northwest, last night. McNamee, who lives in a transient lodge at 300 Express court, suffered lacerations of the head. He is in Gallinger Municipal Hospital. The motorman was not held.

Utility Strike In Southwest Ended by Truce

El Paso and Other Cities Plunged in Darkness During Tie-up.

By the Associated Press.

El Paso, Tex., Feb. 28.—A strike which sprang from a power plant in New Mexico and stripped El Paso and surrounding cities of vital public utilities for more than 12 hours subsided tonight in the hands of a board of conciliation.

In all, more than 200,000 persons were affected—this Texas city's population of 100,000 and a like number living in 27 towns nearby, including Juarez, Mex.

From 12:30 a. m. today, when the walkout threw the area into darkness, until a truce shortly after noon, business was at a virtual standstill.

Citizens of Las Cruces, N. Mex., population 6,000, appealed to Gov. Clyde Tingley, who occupied a pivotal position at Santa Fe because a border freak had placed the plant site within his State.

Gov. Tingley was understood to have served notice that if citizens of New Mexico suffered hardships the State might step in and operate the power plant for the duration of the strike.

Eventually, Gov. Tingley, Mayor R. E. Sherman, County Judge Joseph McGill, Sheriff Chris P. Fox and W. L. Ingram, Fort Worth union leader, were agreed upon as a board to settle the strike—although neither employes nor employers were willing to accept their findings as binding. The Labor Relations Board at Washington directed its regional representative, Edwin A. Elliott, to assist in a settlement.

A truce was shaped to set the wheels of commerce, the water and sewage pumping system, the elevators and the street cars in motion again between 4 and 5 p. m. (Eastern standard time.)

"We will confer later about the objectives sought," said Gov. Tingley, while officials of the El Paso Electric Co. asserted they had made no concessions to strikers' demands which Ingram, representative of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, had set forth. President M. C. Smith said the company would make no reprisals.

Labor spokesmen said 150 employes walked out for recognition of their union, higher pay and changed working conditions.

'Seal Hamburg Swell,' Say Ellsworth's Aids

By the Associated Press.

New York, Feb. 28.—Three members of the Lincoln Ellsworth Antarctic expedition arrived from South America today with praise for roast penguin and seal hamburg.

But they didn't think much of Bernt Balchen's bread.

"He always had a hell of a time with his dough," explained Dr. Dana Coman, of Johns Hopkins, the expedition doctor.

Balchen, by way of hinting that he is an aviator and not a cook, began talking about flying; said he planned to make a general survey of American aeronautics before going to Norway to see about heading a new aviation firm there.

Walter J. Lanz, radio expert, was the third member of the party.

NEW FREEDOM FROM COLDS

for FEWER Colds

At the first warning sneeze or nasal irritation, quick!—apply Vicks Va-tro-nol—just a few drops up each nostril. Its timely use helps to prevent many colds—and to throw off colds in their early stages.

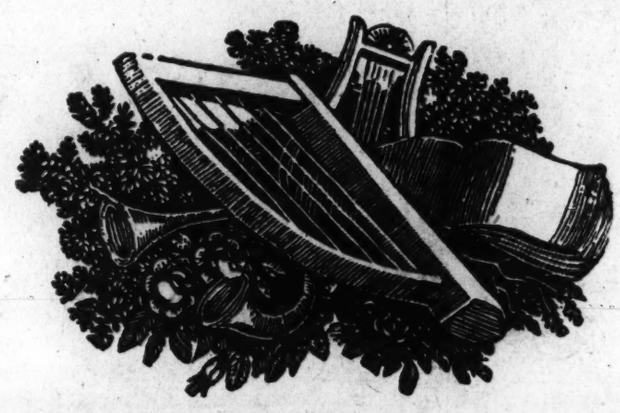

for SHORTER Colds

If a cold has already developed, use Vicks VapoRub, the mother's standby in treating colds. Just rubbed on at bedtime, VapoRub works through the night by stimulation and inhalation to help end a cold. No "dosing."

These twin aids for fewer and shorter colds give you the basic medication of Vicks Plan for Better Control of Colds—clinically tested by physicians and proved in everyday home use by millions.

VICKS PLAN FOR BETTER CONTROL OF COLDS

A Taste Of Old Times

If you like old songs
Old books
Old pipes
Old friends

Then you'll like
Old Overholt too

And you'll be glad
It's back again
Today
At stores and bars

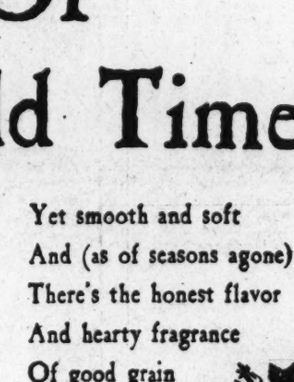

And bottled in bond!

Tastes like old times

It's rich and robust

Yet smooth and soft
And (as of seasons agone)
There's the honest flavor
And hearty fragrance
Of good grain
In it!

You'll be amazed
At your palate's delight
When you taste again
This fine old favorite
